French Women Claim Right to Serve in Army as Well as Men.

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Instead of deviating into suffragism, French feminism is taking a different course, and is calling out for soldiers' rights. "We have a right to serve in the army as well as the boys," say the young French maidens, and some of the more elderly ones join in the chorus. The Grand National, a special paper edited by Paul Vibert, publishes a letter containing an appeal to the minister of war signed by 900 young ladies, who describe themselves as patriotic daughters of France.

The letter says: "The undersigned young French ladies have the honor of submitting to you their patriotic desire, as follows: When the three years' service law comes into effect our active army will still be smaller than that of our eventual enemy. The shortcoming might be made by utilizing all the soldiers employed in the auxiliary service, the sanitary and commissariat departments. We, on the other hand, would be willing to undertake the duties of the auxiliary services. Frenchwomen have in the past illustrated our history, and we do not wish to do less than they. Many of us have been enrolled in the Red Cross services, but this is not sufficient, as we can perform other tasks as well and besides, not all of us have the time to be trained for that service. Our fondest hope is to be able to offer to France our youth, and so share the honor of defending our country with our brothers. We, the daughters of France, beg you to have a law passed to that effect, permitting us to enter the military service, and to co-operate in the defense of our country."

M. Paul Vibert, in speaking of the petition, adds quite seriously that 200,000 men were employed as cooks, tailors, coopers, potato peelers, clerks, musicians, etc., could be turned over to the active service, and he seems to suggest that their places might be taken every year by 200,000 girls, who could cook, sew, cobble, and make music for the army as well as the young men. He hopes that the minister of war will at once put the idea into practice.

NEW FISH LOOKS LIKE LIGHTED FERRY-BOAT

SYDNEY, Sept. 20.—A new species of fish having the appearance of an electrically lighted ferryboat, has been secured in the Australian Bight at the great depth of 350 fthoms.

This curious fish, which has fifty-three brilliant light organs on either side of its body, which itself shines like a mirror, has been named the tudor. It was hauled to the surface by the trawler endeavor, and will be placed on exhibition at the Australian Museum at Sydney.

More than an hundred other entirely new varieties were obtained, all the specimens inhabitating these submarines depths being more or less lumnous.

Several fish of a jet black color, with a skin like velvet studded all over with scintillating encrustations of bluish light were also obtained, some being shaped like a pair of bellows

Bebel, to who even the Kaiser looked up with the respect due his rare honesty and sincerety of aims.

To be the leader of the Socialist party [illegible] along a narrow and stony path on the verge of a precipice, for under the present regime the Socialist tenets are only a hair's breath from high treason and the slightest slip may mean long incarceration. A leader must be chosen, however, but it is exceedingly unlikely that the world will know who he is until the Reichstag meets again in November.

QUARREL OVER DOG ENDS IN MAN BEING DROWNED

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

PARIS, Sept. 20.—A man was drowned in the Siene recently owing to a quarrel between himself and a one-armed man who had taken offense when the victim's dog, after swimming in the river, shook itself over him.

The one-armed man flew into a rage, and the discussion soon led to a fight. In struggling on the quay both men fell into the river.

The one-armed man was dragged out and taken to a hospital, but the owner of the dog was carried away by the stream and drowned.

SACRIFICES LIFE TO SAVE THREE CHILDREN

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

PARIS, Sept. 20.—The Abbe Poirier sacrificed his life recently at Sables d'Olonne in an attempt to save three children who were bathing in the sea under his charge. The children were caught by the current, and the priest immediately swam, full dressed, to their rescue. He was carried away and drowned. Two of the children were saved, but the third was lost.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—A man has just sacrificed his life in vain for his wife at Trieste, after having submitted to a skin-grafting operation as the last

Mme. Auguste Terni underwent an operation and when the doctors declared that the wound could only be healed by grafting on a new skin, her husband insisted on submitting himself for the purpose.

His devotion and sacrifice were of no avail, for both he and his wife died within a few minutes of each other

EUROPE LOOKS FOR FRENCH-SPANISH ALLIANCE

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

PARIS, Sept. 20.—The first move on the European chess board of politics now that the Balkan war is over, one which will strengthen the hand of France and together with the three years military service will tend to offer the German army increase. What I am hinting at is the alliance with Spain, which everybody here is expecting to be announced this fall.

Relations between the people of France and Spain have never been more cordial and the alliance will be popular in both countries as an added guarantee of European peace. It is said that it was originally planned by the late King Edward VII, who discussed it in detail with the young Spanish king, but whether this be so or not it is certain that the proposed alliance has no more ardent champion than King Alfonso.

Americans who remember the war over Cuba may not think very highly of the fighting value of the Spanish army, but though this does not begin to compare with either the French or German in efficiency, it must not be forgotten that it has been greatly improved during the last five years, principally because of Alfonso's great personal interest in it. The soldiers are far better trained, the discipline is excellent, and the shortcomings are merely lack of modern artillery, which Spain lacks ready cash to buy. But France is more than willing to extend financial assistance to an ally who in case of a war with Germany is able to come to her assistance with more than 300,000 troops.

DISCOVERS GERMAN DANGER.

Senator Berenger, who if perhaps a little of an alarmist, is undoubtedly a true French patriot has on our eastern frontiers discovered a new German danger which threatens France and as the revelation of this discovery has created an extraordinary excitement in German military circles followed by a number of attempts to ridcule it in German militaristic papers, there seems to be a good deal more to the affair than one was at first inclined to believe.

Senator Berenger points out the many facts which tend to prove that Germany in case of war has given up the hazardous idea of invading via the Vosges mountains and is now concentrating her forces on the frontier of Luxembourg, which little principality only needs to be crossed, a matter of a few hours to find a stretch on the French northeastern frontier which is practically defenseless.

Henri Berenger has, incognito, travelled along the frontier and the adjoining German districts and has found a formidable German permnament army entrenched in a fortified camp at Trier.

What is more alarming, however, is the fact that he has found that a railroad, not shown on even the latest maps and serving no apparent commercial purpose has been secretly built. This railroad, he declares, would enable a German army to penetrate Luxembourg and attack the defenseless stretch of French frontier. Senator Berenger has conclusively proved that Germany within [illegible] war would be able to occupy the line from Longwy to Dun-sur Meuse with 100,000 troops and he demands that the French General Staff must immediately prepare to meet a sudden attack.

COMMUNITY FIGHTS SCHOOLMASTER

The little commune of Marcellaz-en-Faucigny, in the Haute Savoie, is practically on strike. There is neither mayor nor councillors. The councillors resigned in a body, and the voters refused to replace them. The cause of this municipal chaos is the resentment shown by the municipality and the voters towards the local schoolmaster, who fills the post of mayoral secretary. The schoolmaster sticks to his office, which he intends to keep against all comers. For two months he has fought the whole commune single-handed.

In the interest of the commune a special commission was instituted by presidential decree. One of the first duties of the commissioners was to preside over the cantonal elections.

They received the ballots of eighteen voters and for the election of the municipal council there was only a single name on the electoral list, that of the schoolmaster who voted for himself. The tangle seems to be inextricable. There is no giving way on either side. With a view to overcome this stubbornness on one side or the other a local deputy proposes to seek the intervention of M. Barthou, the Premier.

EXCAVATIONS AT ALESIA.

Excavations made by the Semur Society on Science at Alesia have brought to light vestiges of a vast edifice which goes back to the middle age. In the center of the principal apartment is a fine sarcophacus, and around it are a large number of sepulchures of the Merovingian epoch. The local archaeologists believe they have found one of the first Christian temples in the district, probably the basilica of Sante Reine, dating from the sixth and seventh centuries.

This discovery completes the series of the successive epochs of the existence of Alesia. The finding of a smith's forge is thought to prove that in the tenth century the plateau of Alesia was partially inhabited.

ITALIAN QUARREL OVER CENT ENDS IN MURDER

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

GENEVA, Sept. 20.—Louis Fornari, aged 53, was murdered at Lugano the other day by another Italian workman for ten centimes, equivalent to a penny.

They had worked together, and came to blows over the disputed coin. Fornari was attacked with such violence that he died a few hours later in the hospital. The police are searching for Fornari's assailant, who has disappeared.

CARDS IN ONE NIGHT

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

COMPARISON FAVOR OF GOTHAM

NEW YORK'S police problem is more difficult than that of London, Paris or Berlin," said Police Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo, who has just returned from a study of police conditions in the three principal capitals of Europe, "and the frequent assertions that their police machines work [illegible] are unjustified.

"As a matter of fact, each of the three European cities I have mentioned has more or less continuous police troubles.

"Conditions in London are more like those in New York than those of either Paris or Berlin, but not even London has found it possible to get together for its police force an army of men who are invariably perfect, or to devise a system which admits of no occasional manifestation of their individual imperfections.

cially, perhaps, New Yorkers, tend toward a mental state similar to that of a small boy who has been given a piece of cake, but who imagines that the boy across the fence has one which is larger and is covered with a thicker layer of sugar.

"The cakes really are very much the same, differently flavored, probably, because of the personal idiosyncrasies of the cooks who baked them, but neither is notably superior to the other.

"London's problem is more like that of New York than Berlin's or that of Paris. Indeed, it is the only police problem in the world which in any way may be considered comparable to New York's. London's population is racially more mixed than that of Paris or Berlin, although far less mixed than ours; its poulation density is very materially less than ours.

GREAT BUREAUCRATS ABROAD.

"England keeps a firm control of public enterprises, railroads as well as police, but through the operation of a decentralized system. The continental countries and, in their way, the continental cities, manage everything from central points.

"They are great bureaucrats upon the Continent.

"The London police system is operated upon lines almost similar to those upon which the New York police force is at present organized. Briefly, the London plan is this:

"Each division is handled as an independent administrative unit, but all are under the control of a police commissioner. The detective service, known as the Crimanl Investigation Department, is operated on a plan of administration practically identical with that of ours.

"This system is old in London, in New York it has been in existence two years only. London's methods of getting at the bottom of criminal problems are similar to ours, not only in the general plan but in the management of details. London recruits here detective service from the uniformed ranks, as we do.

"The London Police Commissioner is appointed directly by the Crown. He has the appointing power of his deputies and the four Chief Constables, who command the four sub-districts into which the Metropolitan District is divided. The Metropolitan District, roughly speaking, extends over a radius of 15 miles from Charing Cross.

"Sir Edward Henry is Police Commissioner, and his four Assistant Commissioners are also knights.

"Each Chief Constable is responsible for the efficiency and discipline of the uniformed force under him.

"The districts are divided into divisions corresponding to our inspection districts, and these are commanded by Divisional Inspectors, corresponding to our Inspectors.

"These are divided into sub-divisions, corresponding to our police pdecincts, and these are commanded by Sub-Divisional Inspectors, corresponding to our Captains.

"Each of these sub-divsions has its station-house and barracks, sometimes included under one roof, sometimes separated. The management of these station-houses for the reception and handling of complaints is similar to that of our own station-houses.

"In London twice as many men are on patrol from 10 p. m. to 6 a. m. as ruding the hours from 6 a. m. to 10 p. m. This plan is now in operation in New York, the reasons for it being obvious in both cities.

"This system was in operation in London before a similar system was adopted in New York. But London is now adopting the fixed-post system to a large extent. That has been in operation in New York for several years now.

"Here, in order to establish a reserve force for use in an emergency, we require every man to remain eight hours every three days in the station-house, this service being in addition to his other duties.

POLICE BARRACKS.

"In London a similar result is achieved by providing quarters for unmarried men, where they live all the time. There they have their canteens, where beer is sold, and thir billiard rooms, to which they are at liberty to take their friends.

"In these barracks each man has his cubicle, or room, separated from the others by half-partitions and about eight by ten feet in size. Each is principally furnished by a comfortable cot.

"It should be explained that their remaining in the station-house is not obligatory. The assumption is and it works out in fact, that there will at all times be present enough men to form a numerically adequate reserve force, for use in case of any ordinary emergency.

"The fact that all police heads up to the rank of Divisional Inspector, are promoted from the ranks is found to be a great and a sufficient incentive to ambitious men to join the force. The Divisional Inspector is the highest officer in the uniformed force.

"The Commissioner has considerable latitude in arranging these promotions, but promotes no man who has not demonstrated his fitness for promotion by passing examinations especially prepared.

"Each subdivision, or precinct, is divided into sections, each of which is commanded, as here, by a Sergeant.

ENGLISH COURT CO-OPERATION.

"Men under charges are tried by the Divisional Superintendents, or, in the more important cases, by the Chief Constable, but in all cases the accused have the right of appeal to the Commissioner, and dismissal can only come from him. The procedure of the inferior courts in London is very much the same as similar procedure here. But in one difference between the English courts and ours lies an important detail, tending in London toward police efficiency, and away from it in New York City.

"The immense respect which the London public displays for the police is not to be properly attributed to any inherent law-abiding spirit in the British public. In this I do not believe the British public to be at all superior to the American public. It is not, I think, due to any superiority of the London over the New York police.

"I believe it to be principally, almost entirely, due to the fact that in London courts and police work together in co-operative harmony, holding up one another's hands.

"I went through the cells in a certain London station-house one day, and was surprised to see a push-button in each cell and to be told that by means of this a prisoner could call a turnkey at will.

"'But do they not ring the bells on trivial pretexts?' I inquired.

"'Never,' was the answer.

"'Why?'

"'The prisoner who needlessly annoyed a police officer by the ringing of his bell without excuse would find an additional charge and an additional punishment awaiting him next morning. They all know that,' was the reply.

"Imagine a New York court increasing the severity of a prisoner's sentence because the night before he had annoyed the station house turnkey!

"This spirit of co-operation between police and court permeates the whole British system and adds tremendously to the efficiency of both. In that, and in that alone, lies the reason for the London citizen's so-called superior respect for law. It gives a power to the police which they almost entirely lack in New York City.

"Another reason for our New York police trouble lies in the fact that ours is the only large municipal political government in the world. There is no politics in London's government, none in Berlin's, none in that of Paris. For political parties to intrude upon police management is a situation inconceivable in any of the European capitals.

"The police machines of these great cities are police machines pure and simple, not adjuncts to political parties nor victims of political parties. Police scandals are not infrequent in the European cities, but the wrong-doing of a policeman is not a thing to which political parties turn for ammunition.

DIFFERENT FROM NEW YORK.

"In an entirely matter-of-fact way the sensible people of these cities realize that their police departments are made up of human men, just as their other departments are, and that among so many human men are sure to be some who will do wrong.

"While I was in Paris it developed that a lieutenant of police and seven of his men had been discovered in an organized plan to blackmail merchants of the district in which they were stationed.

"The discovery of this unfortunate state of affairs created no excitement. There was no hint of a police scandal. The men had not been at their nefarious work long before the time of their discovery, very little time elapsed after their discovery before they had been tried, convicted and dismissed from the police force. And that was all there was to it.

"In New York City a similar occurrence would have made a scandal which would have filled the newspapers, would have been on everybody's tongue, and might have dragged through a year or two in the courts. The French newspapers merely said that certain men had been charged with certain crimes, mentioning the fact of their membership on the police force incidentally, as they would have mentioned the nature of their employment had it been anything other than police work.

"You see, in Paris, no political parties, no individual politicians could have the slightest incentive to an effort at making political capital out of such an episode. With party politics the police have nothing whatsoever to do.

"There was, in the Parisian press, no comment whatsoever on the unfortunate occurrence. Recognizing that such things are bound to happen at all times and at all places when and where a large number of men are required to do a certain kind of work, the thing took its normal course, and the public was infinitely better off because it was permitted so to do.

TAKING SCANDAL CALMLY.

"Such episodes occur in London and Berlin. They have them every little while, as they are bound to have them, and we are bound to have them. They look for their occurrence with a regularity as great as the regularity of other crimes' occurrence. When a policeman proves to be dishonest, it occasions no more public flurry than would the discovery of a clergyman's or a lawyer's dishonesty.

"This very lack of public scandal over the occurrence of wholly normal, if unfortunate, events helps to prevent them from occurring frequently.

"My observation of the London detective service was made under the guidance of its Assistant Commissioner of Police. Territorially, the men are distributed in a manner similar to that in vogue in New York under the new system.

"The only matters handled by Headquarters are such as have been submitted to the police by other authorities or are of such a nature as to prevent them from being properly apportioned for investigation to any sub-division.

"The results of this procedure have been admirable. The men are constantly getting to know better the inmabitants of the various localities in which they are stationed—to know them in a way which would be quite impossible if they were working from the Central Office and changing their locality of operation with every case which they took up.

"The Police Department of London also has charge of the whole work of licensing public vehicles, this being done under the supervision of an Assistant Commissioner, who has no other duties. The service, developed thus along sane, unchanging lines, is very nearly perfect.

"All lost articles when found in London by other than the loser must be turned in to the police. If not claimed within a certain specified time the finder may lay claim to them, thereby acquiring valid title to their ownership. If the owner claims such articles, he must pay a certain percentage of their value to the finder.

"Here, on the contrary, all public service corporations operate their own lost property departments, so that a man who has lost an article in the course of a day during which he has ridden on half a dozen different transportation lines can make a thorough inquiry only by visiting the offices of all of them, and in order to obtain a legal title to found property the finder must advertise his find at his own expense. In England the whole matter is simply put up to the police, to the advantage of both finder and loser.

"The police of Paris are under the general authority of the Prefect, appointed by the Central Government. He is the director of public safety, for he controls not only the police, but an especial military organization known as the Republican Guards (including both cavalry and infantry and designed for the performance of heavy police duty), the Fire Department, the Health Department, all correctional institutions, and the department having in charge those duties here assigned to the Building Department.

PARIS POLICE ADMINISTRATION.

"For the purposes of administration Paris is divided into 20 arrondissements, or wards. For police purposes each ward [illegible] dissement is under an officer of the peace, who is at the head of its uniformed police force and has his office in the ward hall, as does the Mayor of the ward. We in America have no office similar to the French office of ward Mayor. There these men have all the duties of the Mayors of small cities. Paris, as a whole has no Mayor.

"In each quarter is a Commissioner (Commissaire) of Police, who reports directly to the Prefect. He exercises no control over the force, but may call upon [illegible] he may deem necessary. He exercises a judicial function to the extent that he conducts all preliminary criminal investigations.'

"Arrested persons are taken before him. After reducing the complaint to writing he decides whether or not the accused shall be held in confinement, released, and further proceeded against, or wholly discharged.

"Each quarter is provided with a police station, the Sergeant on duty being in charge. Service of the uniformed force is equally distributed through the 24 hours, 5 hours on duty and 10 hours off. No force is held in reserve, dependence for reserve being placed on the cavalry and infantry of the Republican Guard.

"Men entering the ranks rarely rise above the grade of Brigadier, or Sergeant, the peace officers and Commissioners, or Commissaires, of Police being taken from an independent service, consisting of assistants, etc., appointed after competitive examinations under the civil service.

"Paris has no inferior courts, such as exist in London and New York. Any person committing an offense of a minor nature is fined and must pay costs. Should he refuse such payment, proceedings will be taken against his chattels, the costs being added to the amount of the original fine.

"If the final attempt to seize his goods proves that he possesses none, the tools of his trade or other articles allowed by law, he cannot be forced to make any payment whatever, and thus he escapes punishment. This system does not appear to be working very satisfactorily.

"The new Prefect of Police, M. Hannion, was until recently in charge of the Government Secret Service. The Detective Bureau, or Service de Surete, has been organized into divisions dependent upon the nature of the crime to be investigated.

"An effort was originally made to conduct all investigations from a Central Office, but this gave such poor results that the present Prefect is abandoning it and is planning the inauguration of a system similar to that now in use in London and New York.

"There are more crimes of violence in proportion to the population in Paris than in New York. The prevalence of highway robbery and those crimes peculiarly [illegible] efficiently supported the police.

"The citizen of New York is indeed safer than the citizen of Paris. As a matter of fact, he is safer than the citizen of London, and statistics of crime will bear this statement out. There is no detail of the Parisian system which I should wish to see adopted in New York.

"The police of Berlin are under the Police President, an officer of the Prussian Crown. He is the director of public [illegible] tions vested in the Prefect of Police in Paris. The uniformed force of Berlin is under the control of the Colonel of Police, and its administration is divided into three districts, each of these being subdivided into smaller districts, under command of Majors. These are again subdivided into sections.

"A large part of the work of a Berlin policeman consists of obtaining and verifying facts to be included in the various and voluminous statistical reports regarding the population of the various districts.

"Such work, indeed, occupies so great a proportion of police time that only a small proportion of the force is actually upon street duty. Policemen, therefore, are not very common sights save on the main thoroughfares.

"In Berlin Lieutenants of Police exercise a judicial function in addition to their police duties, in that upon reports made by members of the force they may impose punishment on citizens for violation of ordinances, without sending them to higher courts, but citizens have the right of appeal from such decisions. If no appeal is made then fines imposed by the police become liens on the culprit's property, and he may be imprisoned if the sum cannot be collected.

[illegible] dependent of the uniformed police force, and is recruited, as it is in Paris, from both the uniformed force and outside sources, but a man entering this service cannot return to the uniformed force.

BERLIN "PAPER WORK."

"All criminal investigations are handled entirely from the Central Office. Representatives of the central investigation department are [illegible] tion house, and may there make preliminary investigations and reports to their superiors. But all actual work of criminal investigation is done by the Central Office. Here, as elsewhere in Germany, much attention is devoted to what we call 'paper work'—reports.

"The German is a law-abiding citizen. There can be no question about that. Military training and the attitude of the courts have been the influences which have brought this about and I believe the second has had as much to do with it as the first.

"There is more gambling in either London or Paris than in New York. Resorts devoted to the business are not called gambling houses, but 'clubs.' They are suppressed when citizens complain of them.

"The ever-present problem of the woman of the streets is much better handled in New York than in Paris, Berlin or London. In these capitals conditions [illegible] New York City. In Berlin the traffic is plied without visible restraint, it is, indeed, definitely permitted save on certain streets at certain hours. In Paris the situation is much the same as in Berlin. In London conditions exist such as never have been and never will be tolerated in New York."

Battleship and Matrimony

BEING a patriot I am interested, theoretically, in the entire United States Navy," said the bachelor maid, "but there was only one battleship ever built that I took a personal interest in. That was a Russian ship.

"It was called the Retvizan and was sunk in the Russo-Japanese war. The Retvizan was built at Cramps' shipyard in Philadelphia. To this day I hate the old ship, and am inhumanly glad it went down.

"It quered me matrimonially. If the Russians had built it at home as they ought to have done, I should be married now and living in Philadelphia. I had the nicest kind of a romance well under way when I went on board the Retvizan. That visit knocked all my plans sky high.

"My escort for the occasion was the young man around whom my romance centered. The day we chose for our visit was blistering hot and the air was thick with difficulties. In the first place we had hard work to get passes, and even after we did finally get them and had clambered up the side of the battleship we had still harder work to find anybody to do the honors.

"At last a man who seemed [illegible] made up of blue cap and a foreign accent volunteered to show us around. After he got started he was very accommodating. He took us everywhere and explained everything. For more than an hour he wrestled with the temperature and our stupidity, and when we got back to the gangplank he looked just about wilted.

"As we stood there juggling with adieus the situation took an awkward turn. I felt the tension, but I couldn't make out what was wrong. I looked [illegible] derstood.

"The man naturally expected a tip; Tony declined to give it. I was already at the melting point, but at that I waxed several degrees hotter with indignation. I wish to go on record as being just as much opposed to indiscriminate tipping as anybody, but that man had left his own work for an hour to please us, and I felt that if anybody ever earned a tip he had.

"Clear up to the time we stepped ashore I waited for Tony to do the square thing, but he remained ingloriously mute and inactive.

"'Thank you,' he said, and 'Goodbye' and that was all. The man looked after us wistfully. I could not stand that. I had only a quarter in my own small purse, but I tipped him with that most ostentatiously.

"'I am sorry,' I said, 'that I haven't more.'

"Tony heard, but he icily refused to countenance my prodigality. When we sat down to rest, he said:

"'That was a very humiliating thing you did a little while ago. I never believe in being too liberal with those people. They are paid for their work. There is no reason why you and I should impoverish ourselves by giving them extra wages.'

"'There is no danger,' said I, 'of your ever being too liberal.'

"And from that moment I knew that everything was off between Tony and me. He did not propose. If he had I should have refused him. But for that unfortunate experience on board the Retvizan things might have been—they certainly would have been—different. I know that Tony had intentions, and I don't mind saying that I had a few myself. However, it happened so, and here I am.

"Again I say I am glad the Retvizan was sunk."

No, Siree! She did not sprain her ankle; she did not even hurt her limb. About the only thing she hurt was papa's pocket book and feelings.

The point of discussion is the newest Parisian novelty in women's hosiery. They are used for afternoon and evening toilettes. The dealers say they are modest because the trimming detracts from the contour of the ankle.

The new stockings lace up the side with a silken cord and tassel. They are white stockings with black silk cords and vice versa. And—they cost $7.50 per pair.

The first installment of stockings were placed on sale a few days ago. They created quite a sensation among the women, but the men were the most interested.

PET MONKEY ENJOYS FREEDOM

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Bamboula is a pet monkey belonging to a retired merchant of Paris.

Usually he is a creature of most regular habits and imperturbable good humor, but at rare intervals he feels the need of a change. Yesterday afternoon he suddenly jumped out of the window and set off [illegible] Chatelet. He strolled into a safe, upset the glasses of the customers, pushed over a few chairs, and after a final look around went out and swung himself on a passing motor-omnibus.

He sat down in the first-class section, to the consternation of passengers, but when the conductor came for his fare he dived playfully out of the open window. He appeared soon afterwards in a grocer's shop, sampled some nuts, but did not approve of them, and began to pull out drawers and open cupboards.

When the grocer appeared the monkey threw some lemons at him but overbalanced into an empty barrel and was pulled out by the feet. He retaliated by biting and scratching the grocer, and the tradesman is now taking action against the owner of Bamboula.

LION CUB AS PET.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—A former favorite of the Paris music halls, who, in the decline of her glory acquired a wild beast show, had a singular adventure recently, when she came up from St. Germain to buy a lion cub at the Jardin d'Acclimatation—the Paris "Zoo."

In striking a bargain she tried to induce the authorities to include a cage in which to take her new purchase away. This meant more money, however, and she took the young lion away in her arms, and boarded a train car with it. The animal scratched her, however, as [illegible] It then scampered away playfully [illegible] the Bois de Boulogne, and before it could be captured [illegible] terrier and a deerhound.

The ex-dancer now realizes that her economy was a false one, for she had to pay for the two dogs, and had almost finish the journey to St. Germain [illegible] taxicab with the lion cub [illegible] tied up, inside.

PRISON REFORM IN DIFFERENT PHASES

A remarkable change is coming over the methods of handling prisoners in the United States. Coincident with the move for more humane treatment of criminals comes the fight against the so-called "third degree," and now comes new methods of selecting jurors, new humane methods of prison governments, and many other changes which are calculated to give the convict a better chance to make good. Crime is more and more being recognized as, in many cases, disease and not inherent evil, and treated accordingly.

Commenting on recent third degree scandals, the St. Louis Times says:

Recently the police of St. Louis were called upon to deal with a tragedy in which crime was suspected. One life had been destroyed by poison and three others imperiled. The suspect, ill from the effects of the poison and in the hospital, was subjected to rigid questioning by detectives, under which she became hysterical. The questioners were halted in their work by the hospital superintendent, who announced that the patient should be immune from further similar disturbance until better able to endure it.

There is no condemnation for this protection of an ill person. On the contrary, it was the humane course to be taken.

MOVE FOR HUMANITY.

On the subject of humanity in prison, the Chicago News says:

A remarkable change is coming over the prisons of the world. One by one they are being turned into experiment stations. From institutions of punishment they are gradually changing into institutions of rehabilitation. The principal aim of the up to date prison is coming to be more and more the reclamation of convicts and their restoration to society as good and useful citizens once more.

The old time jail official whose method of enforcing discipline was to subdue the prisoner with brute force is disappearing. The torture chamber known as the "punishment cell" is being eliminated in favor of the "mediation cell," where the unruly prisoner is given a chance to "think it over." Many of the leading prisons in this country and Europe are equipped with what might be termed psychological laboratories. Men foremost in the ranks of psychology and science dictate the policies of the prisons and prescribe the treatment of prisoners.

This world wide movement for humanity in prisons has now been given further impetus by the state of Illinois. At the state penitentiary in Joliet officials have adopted the honor system for convicts, which so far has found favor only in a few states. By means of this system a number of prisoners have temporarily been turned into free outdoor laborers. The officers of the state prison have no other guarantee than the word of honor of these convicts that they will not run away. It is an interesting experiment. If the forty prisoners who were given their conditional freedom do not abuse it and the police officials will have no cause to revoke this almost revolutionary step in the conduct of a state penitentiary, the cause of humanity in prisons will have gained much.

FINGER PRINT SYSTEM.

That the accused criminal may get a fairer deal through the system of identification by finger prints is suggested in the following editorial in the Boston Globe:

The demand for a much wider application of the marvelous system of identification by means of finger prints is based on sound common sense.

Its use in this country is now confined largely to criminals.

But in progressive Argentina, according to Dr. Juan Vucetich, everybody is thus recorded at a public bureau as a part of vital statistics and the record is considered no more disgraceful than that of a birth, a death, or a marriage.

Prejudice aside, there are many good reasons why we should have an accurate method of identifying persons not guilty of any infraction of the law.

For instance, the list of the unknown dead buried in the potters' fields of the big cities would be considerably reduced if our sets of finger prints were complete.

Munterberg's recent statement on the choosing of juries is considered in the St. Louis Globe Democrat as of exceeding value. It says.

MUNSTERBERG'S EXPERIMENT.

Prof. Hugo Munsterburg is an eminent psychologist, so eminent that it would be impertinent for the mere layman to question the results of his psychological experiments or their scientific accuracy. Yet, having in his masterly way determined a specific fact in psychology, it is possible the humble layman may be as competent to apply it regularly to existing conditions. Having submitted a number of men and women to the black dot test, he discovered that women were more fixed in their opinions and less likely to change them through argument than men. They are mentally stubborn, he says, and are therefore less fit than men for jury duty. They counted the black dots and stuck to their count, while the men were easily convinced they were wrong. It is his idea that jury duty is best performed by those who can be persuaded to change their opinions when a "good argument" gets after them. We have had some experience with that kind of jurors. It is not uncommon that a strong majority on one side of a verdict is converted into a majority on the other side by some strong minded and forceful juror. It often happens that a man wants to get home and sleep in a good bed, or wants one of his wife's justly famous apple pies, and gives up his opinion in order to get it."

The Boston Globe, in discussing Mr. Taft's address on the American judiciary, was moved to remark that in the United States the methods and rules of legal procedure are such as obtained in England under the Stuart kings. It pointed out, which has been done by many American commentators, that legal procedure in the United States is "hopelessly encumbered in technicalities" and "is franking to justice."

GAYNOR, THE FIGHTER, PASSES TO BEYOND

Mayor Gaynor, probably one of the most talked-of executives New York has ever had, around whom political campaigns have surged, criticism and commendation poured in a stream, and who, throughout, kept to his own way and stayed with what he said, is no more. Seeking health, after being wounded by an assassin, the old man died.

Even Gaynor's bitterest enemies, commenting on his death, unite on one thing. He was square, and he did not back down.

Commenting on his death, the Chicago News says.

A few hours before he took ship in search of health only to die suddenly in midocean, Mayor Gaynor of New York gratified six thousands of admirers by publicly agreeing to run as an independent candidate for reelection. Though feeble in body, he declared that he felt called upon to "shovel all the miserable little political grafters into one common dumpheap." In other words, he was still fighting, just as he had fought ever since he had opened war years before against keepers of doggeries in Flatbush. He fought many good fights, but some of his fighting was to no useful purpose. As mayor he missed some excellent chances to advance the cause of good municipal administration. In short, he so shaped his course that he gained both the dislike of Tammany and the distrust of many advocates of progressive policies.

The public career of this forceful, philosophic and eccentric man, particularly in its earlier stages, showed his uncompromising attitude toward dishonesty in governmental affairs.

INTERESTING CHARACTER.

Because of his quaintness, which often reached the stage of eccentricity, he was always interesting even to those who disliked or distrusted him. The picturesqueness of his phraseology, due to his admiration for certain ancient philosophers, was one of the odd mental garments that he wore. Behind these surface peculiarities were fine traits of character, which may not have been improved by the acerbities of his four years' experience in governing New York's heterogeneous population.

It can scarcely be doubted that Mayor Gaynor's death at this time fusionist victory at the coming election of New York City officials. The fight should now be squarely between McCall, Tammany Democrat, and Mitchel, independent Democrat, who has the support of Republicans and of various powerful reform organizations.

Mayor Gaynor has taken no vacation since becoming the head of the greatest city on this continent, nearly four years ago. A couple of years ago, a bullet fired by a would-be assassin prevented a sea-voyage which he had planned for rest and recuperation.

Since recovering apparently his wonted health he has been the storm center around which the cross purposes of the people and the politicians have been raging. Denied a renomination by Tammany, who named Judge McCall, the mayor had been given the courtesy of another nomination by thousands of independents and had expected to cut no inconsiderable figure in the contest about to open. Under the circumstances it would seem Gaynor's strength would go to Mitchel, the nominee of the fusionists, and that he will face the Tammany choice alone.

Says the Chicago Record-Herald:

Feeling the need of more strength for the campaign duties superimposed upon the exactions of his office, the mayor quietly slipped away the other day, intending to cross the ocean, spend a few days, and come back by the first of October. Instead he has taken the long journey from which there is no return.

It has been most difficult for those of us at a distance to get a correct line upon what manner of man the mayor of New York was. Estimates and descriptions of him have been so extreme and at the same time contradictory that it was something of a puzzle to determine whether he was a sour, crabbed and testy old man, with a touch of pedantry, or a philosopher, making the most and best of a situation in which it is almost impossible to accomplish much to please many.

It does not matter a great deal which now. The record is made and time will take a full and just measof the man.

Man proposes and Fate disposes. Death, sudden and unexpected, has removed the leading figure of New York's municipal contest from the theater of all earthly warfare. Mayor Gaynor has passed away.

Mayor Gaynor's death will be profoundly regretted by all admirers of men of unusual independence and devotion to the cause of good government. Even his severest critics—and he had many such among intelligent and public-spirited New Yorkers during the last two years—will admit that his faults were temperamental. He was willful, obstinate, impetuous, too ready to impugn the motives of men who could not see eye to eye with him.

Duties of the Woman at Home Arouses Discussion

Despite the arraignment of mothers by the Rev. John E. Stuchell in his recent address before the Oakland Central Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in which he attacked the vital issues of the hour by saying that the duties of parenthood are being neglected and the children left to the tender mercies of society, signs are not wanting and, in fact, multiply, that scientific thinkers among the leaders of the woman's movements are swinging toward the idea that motherhood is woman's greatest business and best achievement. Their reversion is a comforting conclusion for the conservatives and so-called old fogies to contemplate.

Commenting upon the latest findings in this realm of research, the Spokane Spokesman Review says:

[illegible] emphasis on a so new at most ent point from the mediaeval emperor of Germany, who maintains that nursery, kitchen and church are the true spheres for women. They stress the idea of motherhood being a necessity of society and a service to the state and would have education for motherhood. But William II himself could not more stressfully accent the thought of motherhood as a woman's vocation and the home as the throne of power.

Such leaders of feminist emancipation as Charlotte Stetson or Olive Schreiner Cronwright chiefly emphasize women's enlarging opportunities in the world's work. But such as Ellen Key of Sweden, who is no little of a radical, take a position that almost appears old-fashioned. She not only considers motherhood the greatest of careers for women and the one great career, but she thinks it enough to engage all the powers and gifts of a woman.

IS NOT WORKER.

"A woman," she pointedly remarks, "can not be a competent outside worker, toiling eight, ten or more hours a day, and at the same time a housewife and mother, who well performs the duties these callings demand. Since division of labor is unavoidable on the whole, this division must be determined by the experience that in the labor market men in the majority of cases are as able as women to perform the work women perform and often are better able. On the other hand, in the home men can not supplant the spirit and activities of women. Neither can the contribution of wives and mothers be replaced by that of professional women within the home or outside. Can the labor be replaced by a pumping engine, however ingenious?"

These statements are a body blow against those who slight the home of [illegible]

Miss Key regards the home as "woman's great cultural contribution to civilization," maintains that revival of the home is modern society's great need and argues that this can be had only through a new marriage in which the wife as well as the husband enjoys full sympathy and freedom within the partnership. She would have education for motherhood as a means for securing these ends, would render mothers more safe from financial anxieties and would recognize it as a public service to be recompensed by society.

The program that the Swedish lady indicates is a huge one, but her instinct in the matter is sound and the drift of social tendencies is toward the state protecting motherhood and safeguarding the home. This institution can not be done away with.

TEACHING MOTHERS.

In line with the suggestion of teaching the mothers, the Wichita Beacon refers to an unhappy scandal which recently broke out in a Kansas City high school, involving daughters of prominent families in a sordid story which began with joy rides, late social hours, unguarded company of boys and men, and wound up with scandal and the ruin of lives. Suggesting a remedy for such dereliction of parental duty, the Beacon says:

The simplest and most effective remedy, if it could be applied, would be to teach some sense to silly mothers. Trace most of these cases to their beginnings and you'll come to stand at last in the presence of some foolish mother who let her daughter have her own way, who let her daughter select her own boy associates without restraint, who let her spend what hours, day and night, she wishes in flirtations with the silly mother thought were "innocent."

Mothers who let their girls do as they please need the attention of social service students. The problem is there, in its beginnings. Go upon the streets of Wichita any night and see for yourself the girls who are "going"—the girls who ought to be at home under the eye of their mothers.

What the hour needs is a school for silly and reckless mothers who do not appear to recognize the social dangers of allowing mere children to go their unrestrained and unguarded way.

SEGREGATION AND ITS MANY PROBLEMS

The question of vice segregation still comes in for much discussion and the thinking reformer as well as the fanatic find data to support both sides of the problem. As for the commercial element in it—the men who make a business of vice, it has been repeatedly been shown, by all sorts of investigations, that they constitute the crux of the white slave traffic and that they are often active in literally transplanting vice from one section of a city to another. In illustration of the fact and in proof of the theory the Chicago Tribune cites an occurrence in a district which is essentially one of homes, in the heart of a large Slav settlement, and says:

Many old world customs still prevail in the neighborhood. One of these is for the woman to accompany her husband on certain occasions to the saloon and there indulge in a glass of beer. The "family saloon" of the district has, as a class, been the safest kind of a saloon in the city. But things are changing now.

A few purveyors of vice have been looking for a location for their nefarious business. The district about Milwaukee avenue and Division street appealed to them commercially. With business methods they set out to build a vice district of their own. They transformed the "family" part of the saloon into a wineroom. They brought in panders and procurers from other vice zones of the city and began to operate among the innocent people of the district.

The data gathered by Tribune investigators prove that the vice purveyors have been successful. Over night, as it were, they have created a new levee. The theory that the traffic in women is artifically stimulated by certain groups of men for the profit there is in it is fully verified. The remedy, therefore, is simple and easy.

NASHVILLE PROBLEM.

Regarding the segregation of the liquor traffic and an ordinance encompassing this in the city of Nashville prior to the enactment of the prohibition statute, the Nashville Democrat says:

"It was passed, for the very same reason that the State had curtailed the sale of ardent spirits in rural sections—in order to confine the saloon to the business section, to keep it away from the residence section, and to insure adequate police supervision.

There is as much reason for the enforcement of the segregated ordinance now as there ever was, and as much authority to do so. Thus the multiplicity in retail liquor licenses now over the former adequate supply would be checked, the traffic would be centered, and by as much as the number is reduced the business of those remaining would be increased.

This segregation plan, entered into by the people of Nashville, the city authorities and the saloon-keepers, coupled with Sunday and midnight closing, made all parties to the agreement eager to have it observed in letter and in spirit. Everybody respected the ordinance, and its operation provoked commendatory remarks from dents of the city.

But the fanatic was not satisfied. See what we have done, he and she said. If a little leavens we will leaven the whole. So prohibition was put on the statute books for the entire state. It got no further. Communities that were willing to obey the law did obey it temporarily and apparently, though never really. The larger communities did not and made no bones about it.

MACDONOUGH.

With splendid costumes, elaborate scenery, and a trained company of professionals, Mrs. A. W. Scott, society woman, who in a night leaped into fame as an actress, will appear this week in her first engagement in Oakland, playing "Magda" and "Mary Magdalene" at the Macdonough Theater. The proceeds of the week's engagement going to charity. The society woman, desiring to try real footlight life, after many appearances in private theatricials, her husband arranged for theaters in San Francisco, Oakland, Los Angeles, and San Diego, and here under the auspices of a charitable organization, the social leader will play in the two parts which have made her famous.

Society will turn out en masse Monday night when Mrs. Scott will make her first bow here. Many box parties have already been arranged and it is expected that the Macdonough will be crowded for the entire week.

In San Francisco Mrs. Scott made one of the greatest hits ever scored in a play and was lauded by critics as one of the greatest "Mary Magdalenes" ever seen. Her "Magda" was also declared remarkable in its strength of portrayal.

The proceeds of the society woman's week in Oakland will go to the Oakland Ladies' Relief Society, the oldest charitable institution in the city and one to which many social leaders belong. This organization sustains two institutions.

Aside from the charity feature, however, theater gowers are looking forward to the week's engagement because of the remarkable record made by the society actress in the two parts, and, supported by McKee Rankin and the excellent cast assembled for the engagement, the plays are produced on a lavish scale. The two plays will alternate during the week.

SCOTT PICTURES.

Devotees of animated photography have in store for them a veritable carnival of exciting adventure and pictorial grandeur, of a hitherto unillustrated world—the South Polar continent, as filmed by Mr. Herbert G. Ponting, F. R. G. S., official camera artist with the Captain Scott Antarctic Expedition, which will be the attraction at the Macdonough Theater beginning Sunday matinee September 28, and continuing for one week with two performances daily.

The Scott pictures are the first ever exhibited of that hitherto unknown realm where Jack Frost is king, and it is said that they are quite the most interesting yet produced in any country.

GERALDINE FARRAR.

If there is one thing for which Geraldine Farrar has a passion outside of her art it is for furs, which is very feminine and very excusable in the case of a young woman whose earnings run up into the tens of thousands a year and thus can gratify her fancies. Miss Farrar has a most remarkable collection. Particularly wonderful are her Russian sables which probably can be matched only by those owned by the imperial and a very few princely families of Russia and by a few of the very rich notabilities of China.

These sables came from China shortly after the campaign of 1900 and quite possibly were a part of the loot of that famous expedition. At any rate they found their way to Paris where they were held for a huge sum. What Miss Farrar called one of her first extravagances was the purchase of these furs and this extravagance made a decided hole in her earnings of the season.

She comes to the Macdonough theater Tuesday evening, October 7.

ORPHEUM

There is a treat and a rare one on at that in store for music lovers at the Orpheum this week. Miss Elsa Ruegger, the Belgian cellist, concedes to be one of the greatest players in the world, will head the bill. Previous to her entering on the Orpheum circuit, Miss Ruegger was connected with many of the leading symphony and other musical societies, making successful tours in both Europe and America. This is her first appearance in vaudeville. Miss Ruegger is being assisted by the celebrated conductor, Edmund Lichtenstein, an eminent figure in the musical world.

Something novel for vaudeville goers is "A Business Proposal." Jack Kennedy, assisted by a capable company appears in the playlet. It is a comedy of courtship written by Daniel D. Carter, author of "The Master Mind," which was one of the New York principal successes, and staged by Edgar Allan Woolf, one of the most capable providers of vaudeville material. The combined effort of the three have succeeded in making "A Business Proposal" one of the most interesting playlets at present before the public.

Hoey and Lee, as character parodists, manage to satire in the breeziest manner various national conditions and timely topics. The two men are comedians really entitled to the use of the word and their voices are so good that even without the humorous lyrics their songs would be decidedly pleasing.

The kiddies will find Buckley's animals irresistible. The troupe includes well trained dogs, monkeys and a Teddy bear. The latter is just in his cub days, but is already quite well versed in the art of roller skating.

Popular songs and melodies are sung by Miss Ethel McDonough. The career of Miss McDonough is an interesting one. She says that her first public engagement was in a cemetery playing the drums for the G. A. R. Memorial exercises. She then accepted an engagement as the drummer girl with the Boston Fadettes and later became famed as the Divine Myrna, in a diving act on the order of the performance of Annette Kellerman. The clever comedienne has this season adopted an entirely new regime, however, and there is no question as to her versatile talents.

Handers and Milliss, two young Englishmen will furnish a short exhibition of dancing, piano playing and singing. They do all three with a snappy vim.

COLUMBIA.

"The Two Thieves will make their appearance at the Columbia Theater today for a week's run. It will be successful because the play is funny, and there is just enough plot and semi-romance in the piece to please the comic opera lovers.

Dunbar and Thomas Bundy are good in the character role of "The Two Thieves," and in their many close escapes they furnish wit and comedy that is highly amusing.

Miss Hamilton as prima donna has been appreciated in every performance of the past week—indeed she shines as the Columbia star.

Miss Hamilton sings this next week, "Teach Me That Beautiful Love." "Don't You Cry, Ma Honey," will be sung by George Henry and the Dandy Charms. Henry has a pleasing vein and no flaws in his work.

Miss Kitty Parson, the dainty little golden-haired soubrette, sings "Malinda's Wedding Day."

"Tommy Atkins," as sung by Paxley Noon, should be a hit. In view of the entire program for this week beginning at today's matinee, there will not be a dull moment.

There is also to be seen several new faces including the favorite comedian, Thomas Bundy. The Dandy Girls are well drilled, and their work is appreciated.

The management of the fast company expresses its appreciation for the past week's patronage, and declares that it is the intention to keep up the high standard of the Columbia.

PANTAGES

Five Musical Lassies in kilts and a stage setting of magnificent highland scenery are the feature of this week's bill. The lassies are musicians of unusual ability playing many different instruments including bag pipes. Their repertoire is pleasing and ranges from grand opera to rag time. "Annie Lawrie" as a solo with violin accompaniment is worthy of special mention.

The Rondas Trio keeps the audience pleased. They are performers of unusual versitality as they open with a song, then do an acrobatic dance and many other specialties.

Tilford, the well known ventriloquist, has some new stunts in his line which make his act very pleasing. Nick Becker and Fay Adams are witty entertainers singing and dancing cleverly. The four victors are a marvelous troupe of acrobats and make a decided hit with the audience from the first to the last trick. Nick Verga and Dorothy, the fashion plates in their first appearance here with Gus Edwards are the hit of his act. They have lost none of their popularity, judging from the way they were received by last night's audience. The musical comedy production called "In Mexico" with Alf Goulding and a cast of twenty is really a fitting finish to a thoroughly enjoyable show.

IDORA PARK.

That the face of danger has its siren lure for some men, bringing a temptation that cannot be withstood is indicated by the story of the Gregg brothers, now at Idora Park. The two young men started tempting death at an early age, progressed until they were the most reckless riders of racing motorcycles and automobiles, and finally evolved their hair-raising feat, the "Autos that Pass in the Air."

The Greggs declare that it was more the love of adventure and of "taking a chance" that led them to try out the feature act they have originated. They had experimented with racing automobiles, and had had some strange experiences in leap in the machines across depressions and in narrow escapes from death. Finally the plan to work out the mechanics of an act so sensational that it would defy any effort to surpass it, by preparing the feat of having two autos pass in mid-air while one performed a triple somersault, was hit upon, and the act that will be presented this afternoon and tonight by the Gregg's is the result.

Audran's tuneful operatic extravaganza, "The Beggar Prince," first produced under the name of "La Mascotte," is the offering this afternoon and evening in the big canopied amphitheater, with Mindel Kingston as the mascot and H. Buy Woodward as the Beggar Prince. The operetta is full of music and fun, and two modern song hits are interpolated for the benefit of those who prefer the newest in popular melody.

With a society tango and a society "rag" as features of the dancing, "The Duke of Tansan," an operatic vaudeville, will open tomorrow night. The words and music of the new opera are by Lionel Dalton. The story of the operetta has been made merely the vehicle for a string of clever song hits like beads on a long line of gorgeous costumes, intermixed with ravishing dance numbers. The lover of flash and color, of beauty revealed and concealed in silk, will not be disappointed during the coming week at Idora Park.

ALCAZAR

Ralph Herz will have another effective vehicle in "Miss Nobody From Starland," which is announced to follow "Madame Sherry" at the Alcazar, commencing tomorrow night.

It is a musical comedy by Hough and Adams, co-authors of several other successful melodious offerings, and Herz originated its principal character, Preston Hallidar, an eccentric young man who experiences many amusing, mishaps and commits numerous blunders while baffling imaginary pursuit for an imaginary crime.

In the cast with the star will be the best talent of the Alcazar's regular company, including Stage Director Fred J. Butler and several specially engaged artists, aided by a big beauty chorus and an enlarged orchestra. Lucille Palmer, whose vocal ability is locally well known, has been secured to sing the music of the title part, and specialties will be presented by dainty Lois Meredith, Bobby Woolsey, Clarence Lydston, Burt Wesner, Edmond Lowe, Kernan Cripps and other established favorites. Herz will give some of his famous imitations of popular actors, and Butler promises to be immense as an irascible stage manager educating a lot of slow-witted players.

ORPHEUMOIDS.

Looking very much like a dazzling lay of diamonds is the list of important vaudeville bookings which the Oakland Orpheum management announced today would constitute some of their stellar features for the coming season. From the New York office of the Orpheum Company has come the information to the local Orpheum theater in the way of a partial list of notables who are to grace the Orpheum boards during the winter season. Hundreds of acts, of course, are to appear and all are of exceedingly high class, but the following names constitute what might be called the "high spots" on the Orpheum circuit tour.

One of the great names is that of Fritzi Scheff, the celebrated prima donna who will make her first appearance in vaudeville on the Orpheum circuit during the winter.

A big pantomimic production is to have Mlle. Dazie as its star. She will appear in Sir James M. Barrie's one act fantasy "Pantaloon." It will be her first tour of the Orpheum circuit.

Another great name in vaudeville is that of Lulu Glaser who will appear in a playlet with music entitled "First Love" assisted by Tom Richards.

From the Copenhagen Opera Company will come Mme. Karina Karinowa, the dancer.

William Burress and Company of thirty will appear in "The New Song Birds" by Victor Herbert and George V. Hobart, the piece being a satire on the latest phase of the grand opera craze.

Maude Lambert, a famous prima donna will appear in an act with Ernest Ball, the popular composer who wrote "Love Me and the World is Mine."

Kathryn Kidder will be one of the stars in her famous role of Mme. Sans Gene. She calls the title of her play "The Washerwoman Duchess."

Taylor Granville with Laura Pierpont and company will put on a scenic drama entitled "The System," which has been a sensation in New York.

Catherine Countiss, one of the best known actresses in America, has a splendid vehicle in the "Birthday Present" which she will produce here.

One of the stars will be Henry Woodruff with a company in a comedy called "A Regular Business Man."

The Great Golden with a series of illusions, the greatest of which is called the "Tiger God" will make his first appearance on the coast in many years.

Marie Lloyd, probably the greatest London favorite of all the music hall stars, will tour the Orpheum circuit. It will be the first time she ever appeared west of New York.

The Lambs Gambol success called "The Dance Dream," a terpsichorean novelty, is scheduled to appear.

Other notable stars coming include Nina Morris and company in "The Yellow Peril"; Master Gabriel, a great little actor in a new comedy; The Princess Rajah in a new series of Oriental dances; Edwin Stevens and Tina Marshall in a dramatic travesty; Sam Chip and Mary Marble in a comedy called "The Land of Dikes."

Altogether the outlook is for the most brilliant season of vaudeville during the coming winter months that the Orpheum has ever enjoyed.

GIRL PRISONER 10 YEARS, IS CHARGE

OSCEOLA, Mo., Sept. 20.—Pending before the court of St. Clair county is one of the bitterest fought legal battles in Missouri annals, involving the life of a woman who now occupies a cell in the state asylum at Nevada, physically well, but mentally unsound.

This woman, Ida May Brown, now 42 years old, has never known the joys of liberty since she was a small girl, because, the State alleges, she was confined for more than a decade in a small, unventilated outhouse by her father.

The parent, W. A. Brown, has been tried three times on a charge of kidnaping, the only one which the State's attorneys believed covered the case. Three times the jury has disagreed, each time on a technicality.

Ida Brown was born in Audrain county in 1871. Her mother died when she was four months old. Until she was about nine years of age she lived with her grandmother, the mother of her father. Her father remarried in 1881, and the next year Ida went to live with her father and her stepmother. From that time on until she was sent to the Nevada asylum, except eighteen months spent with an uncle, she lived with her father, or at least on her father's premises.

Few, if any, knew of a daughter by the first wife. Rumors soon spread among the residents that Brown kept a woman confined in a box house on his farm.

Brown, in explaining why the girl was confined following his second marriage, declared the girl was mean and had to be restrained.

Are Your Teeth Well Cared For?

Asks Lillian Russell

[Copyright: 1913: By Lillian Russell.]

Yet one might think from the appearance of some teeth that they were valueless possessions. The expression of many a face is vulgarized by uncared for or neglected teeth.

So much of health and beauty depends upon the condition of the teeth that their care and preservation should be a matter of the greatest concern. The shape of the jaw and of the face, on the side of beauty, and the digestion of food, on the side of health, depend on perfect condition of the teeth.

A United States army surgeon recently said: "Proper care of the teeth is one of the most important of all measures taken for the protection of the human body, and failure to give them care is, in my judgment, the direct cause of more disease in the human family than any other single cause."

There has long been a disposition to regard the mouth and its condition as a matter of no consequence in its relation to the health and beauty of the body.

This is wrong. The mouth is the gateway to nutrition—the avenue through which must pass all the food upon which depends the nourishment of the body and the maintenance of health.

People know almost nothing about the proper care of their mouths and teeth. Nor do they realize that most of the dental ills of mankind are to a considerable extent preventable ills and that the power to prevent these is theirs.

Just how far the decay of the teeth can be prevented it is impossible to say. There is one thing, however, which may be regarded as axiomatic—the cleaner the mouth the less subject will the teeth be to decay.

Good Dentifrice Necessary.

Few people keep their mouths as clean as they should. Not because in many instances they do not clean them often enough but because it is improperly done.

Many people still brush their teeth crosswise (from side to side) and think if the outer surfaces have been thus brushed they have done their whole duty. They forget that there are other surfaces of the teeth or that the gums and tongue are equally in need of attention.

It is this cross brushing of the teeth that is responsible for more receded gums than any other cause. The teeth are not only not cleansed but are actually injured by injudicious brushing.

The first requisite in the cleansing of the mouth and teeth is a small brush of good quality and stiff bristles. A good dentifrice is also necessary. There are so many excellent dentifrices that it is hard to decide which is best. It is a good plan to ask your dentist's advice, as he is acquainted with the particular character of your teeth.

The teeth should be brushed and a dentifrice used at least twice daily—night and morning. On their external surfaces they should be brushed up and down, allowing the brush to pass as far on to the gums as the lips and cheeks will permit. This allows the bristles to pass between the teeth, the outer surfaces of the teeth are brushed throughout their entire length, and the gums are exercised and hardened without injury.

The mouth should next be opened and the grinding surfaces of the teeth vigorously scrubbed, especial care being given to those in the back part of the mouth. Finish by tilting the brush thoroughly brush the inside surfaces, again carrying the brush well up and down on the gums.

All stains remove from the teeth with dental floss, a soft orangewood or quill toothpick food that may have lodged there, and where possible wash the mouth with warm water.

The passing of dental floss back and forth between the teeth at least once a day is desirable. Care should be observed, however, not to injure the gums by making them bleed.

A mouthful of magnesia taken every night before retiring, allowing it to penetrate into every nook and cranny of the mouth, will correct any tendency to acidity and prevent the decay which comes from chemical decomposition.

Never Bite Thread With Teeth.

A noted medical writer advises an occasional cleansing of the teeth with common salt. The gums should also be rubbed. Do not allow tartar to accumulate upon the teeth, as its effects are disastrous.

Avoid exposing the teeth to extremes of temperature. Very hot and very cold substances have a tendency to crack the enamel. Never use a metal instrument of any kind in the mouth. Never bite thread or crack nuts with the teeth.

A very good and simple formula for tooth powder is made up of equal parts of precipitated chalk and powdered orris root. To this may be added any flavoring essence that may be desired. The orris root will impart a delicate fragrance to the breath.

Medicines that injure the teeth are the liquid preparations of iron and the mineral acids. Such medicines should always be taken through a glass tube.

Powdered pumice stone used once in a while only is excellent for removing stains.

Lime water—a tablespoonful in a glass of milk or water—contributes to the strength of the teeth. In the bluegrass region of Kentucky and in West Virginia and in middle Tennessee the soil is so strongly impregnated with lime that the water and the vegetation supply this element to both people and livestock, to the corresponding advantage of their bony structures. The finest horses and cattle in the world graze on the rich pastures of Kentucky's limestone region. And her tall, strong men and beautiful women with their fine teeth are equally famous.

Beautiful teeth must be regular and fine in form and color. They should be neither pearly in hue nor ivory. Beauty and the color, which implies strength and durability, lie between these extremes.

Their perfect form, too, lies between the extremes of short and elongated. Narrow, long teeth indicate a delicate constitution.

Gums Not Made for Exhibition.

Not only the appearance of the teeth counts in the sum total of beauty but also the manner of exposing them. Gums were not made for exhibition, and the girl who smiles so carelessly that she raises her upper lip nearly to its attachment needs to study before the mirror till she can smile without making her friends think of a savage.

The care of the teeth can never be taken in hand at too early an age. Neglect in infant days does not hold as an excuse for us in later years. The cooperation of the family dentist should be sought not simply for the treatment and repair of dental ills long neglected but for that higher and more valuable service—prevention of dental ills.

When a child is 5 or 6 years old it should be taken to the dentist so that its teeth may be examined. Crooked teeth are common, due largely to insufficient exercise of the jaws, premature loss of temporary teeth, adenoids, mouth breathing, and thumb sucking. Such teeth are unsightly, apt to decay, inefficient in mastication, interfere with the proper development of the air passages, and often make perfect enunciation impossible. For these reasons they should be straightened when the child is young.

Under no circumstances should a child be allowed to suck its thumb nor should it be given rubber "pacifiers." Not only are germs introduced into the mouth this way but the pacifiers are apt to force the teeth and jaws out of normal relations, causing a permanent disfigurement of mouth, teeth and face.

Preparing Lime Water.

Vigilant care for the scrupulous cleanliness of the child's teeth should begin as soon as the first tiny pearls cut through the tender gums and should be continued by mother or nurse till the child is old enough to feel a pride in caring for them itself.

In the formative years of childhood bonemaking foods are needed. Where a lack of it is recognized by the frail nature of the teeth, in addition to a reform in diet and the substitution of gluten and whole wheat breads and the cereal foods for cakes, white bread, and sweets, sirup of lacto-phosphate of lime can be given with advantage.

There are many medicinal preparations of phosphates which are more or less beneficial in this condition. But some physicians who have experimented with all of them think they obtain equally as good results by the use of simple lime water, which is easily prepared at home.

Put a teacupful of clean, unslaked lime in a pitcher and pour over it two quarts of water, stirring thoroughly until it looks like milk. Let it stand until the water seems quite clear. Then pour it off and fill the pitcher again with pure water, if possible filtered. Stir thoroughly, tie a piece of muslin over the pitcher to prevent dust from falling into it, and let it stand until the water is clear; then carefully decant the clear portion into glass stoppered bottles.

After eating acid fruits which attack the enamel and render the teeth sensitive the mouth should be rinsed with lime water. And at any time when the teeth are affected by acids, either from food, medicines, or disordered secretions, this can be counteracted by rubbing precipitated chalk round the necks of the teeth and between them.

Remember: The teeth should be recognized for what they are—invaluable adjuncts to both beauty and health. Consequently no pains are too great to secure this advantage.

The insides of the teeth should be cleaned with as much care as the outsides.

The brush should be used up and down on the teeth, not around them, so the bristles will pass between the teeth as much as possible.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

LOUISE: The remedy for wrinkles is not found in "making faces," but in refraining from puckering one's countenance into maps and trellis work designs. The woman who will always remember to keep the corners of her mouth extended upward, instead of permitting them to droop, and who will never allow frowns to come between her eyes, will be able to preserve an expression of youth and cheerfulness for many years. When wrinkles have already formed the best course of treatament will be that in which electricity and scientific massage are combined. It is necessary to go to a skilled specialist, for the one who gives facial massage must have long training and the right kind of education in her particular line of work. While much damage may be done by inexperienced operators, it is equally true that excellent suggestions may be had from good ones.

MISS M. C.: Peroxide will make the hair light, but it will also ruin it. I would not advise you to use it. It is hard to get the hair one color and when you do it will soon become streaked, getting dark at the roots of the hair and light at the ends. Peroxide will make your hair coarse and dry and brittle and you will find that your hair will break off at the ends. Do not attempt to bleach your hair.

PERPLEXED: If you think your hands are poisoned I would advise you to consult a physician immediately. If they are poisoned, as you think they are, it would be well to have them examined and get a remedy for them from your physician before it is too late. However, I do not think that your hands have been poisoned with the lotion you use. It would hardly act on the knuckles and make them swell. You probably have some other trouble. Try massaging the knuckles gently each night with a good cream. However, you had better consult a doctor.

MARGARET M.: From the description you give of the spots I think they are liver spots. For liver spots on the face a teaspoonful of best olive oil taken every morning half an hour before breakfast and the same quantity half an hour after the latest meal of the day will be found effective if you will only persist in the treatment. In a few months this will excite your liver to proper action, clear your skin, and otherwise improve your health. The unsweetened juice of a lemon in a glass of water every morning before breakfast is also beneficial for this purpose. Drink plenty of cool, not iced, water between meals. Never eat hot bread, rich pastries, nor sauces. Eat plenty of fruits and vegetables that do not contain much starch. Walk at least three miles a day and take deep breathing exercises night and morning.

T. R.: High collars will invariably cause unfortunate and beauty destroying creases and discolorations on fair throats. The first need is to discard the unyielding neckwear. At night the neck must be bathed with warm water and pure soap, the surface being massaged afterward for five or ten minutes with orange flower skin food. One reason for the discoloration is that the snug collar keeps the air from the throat.

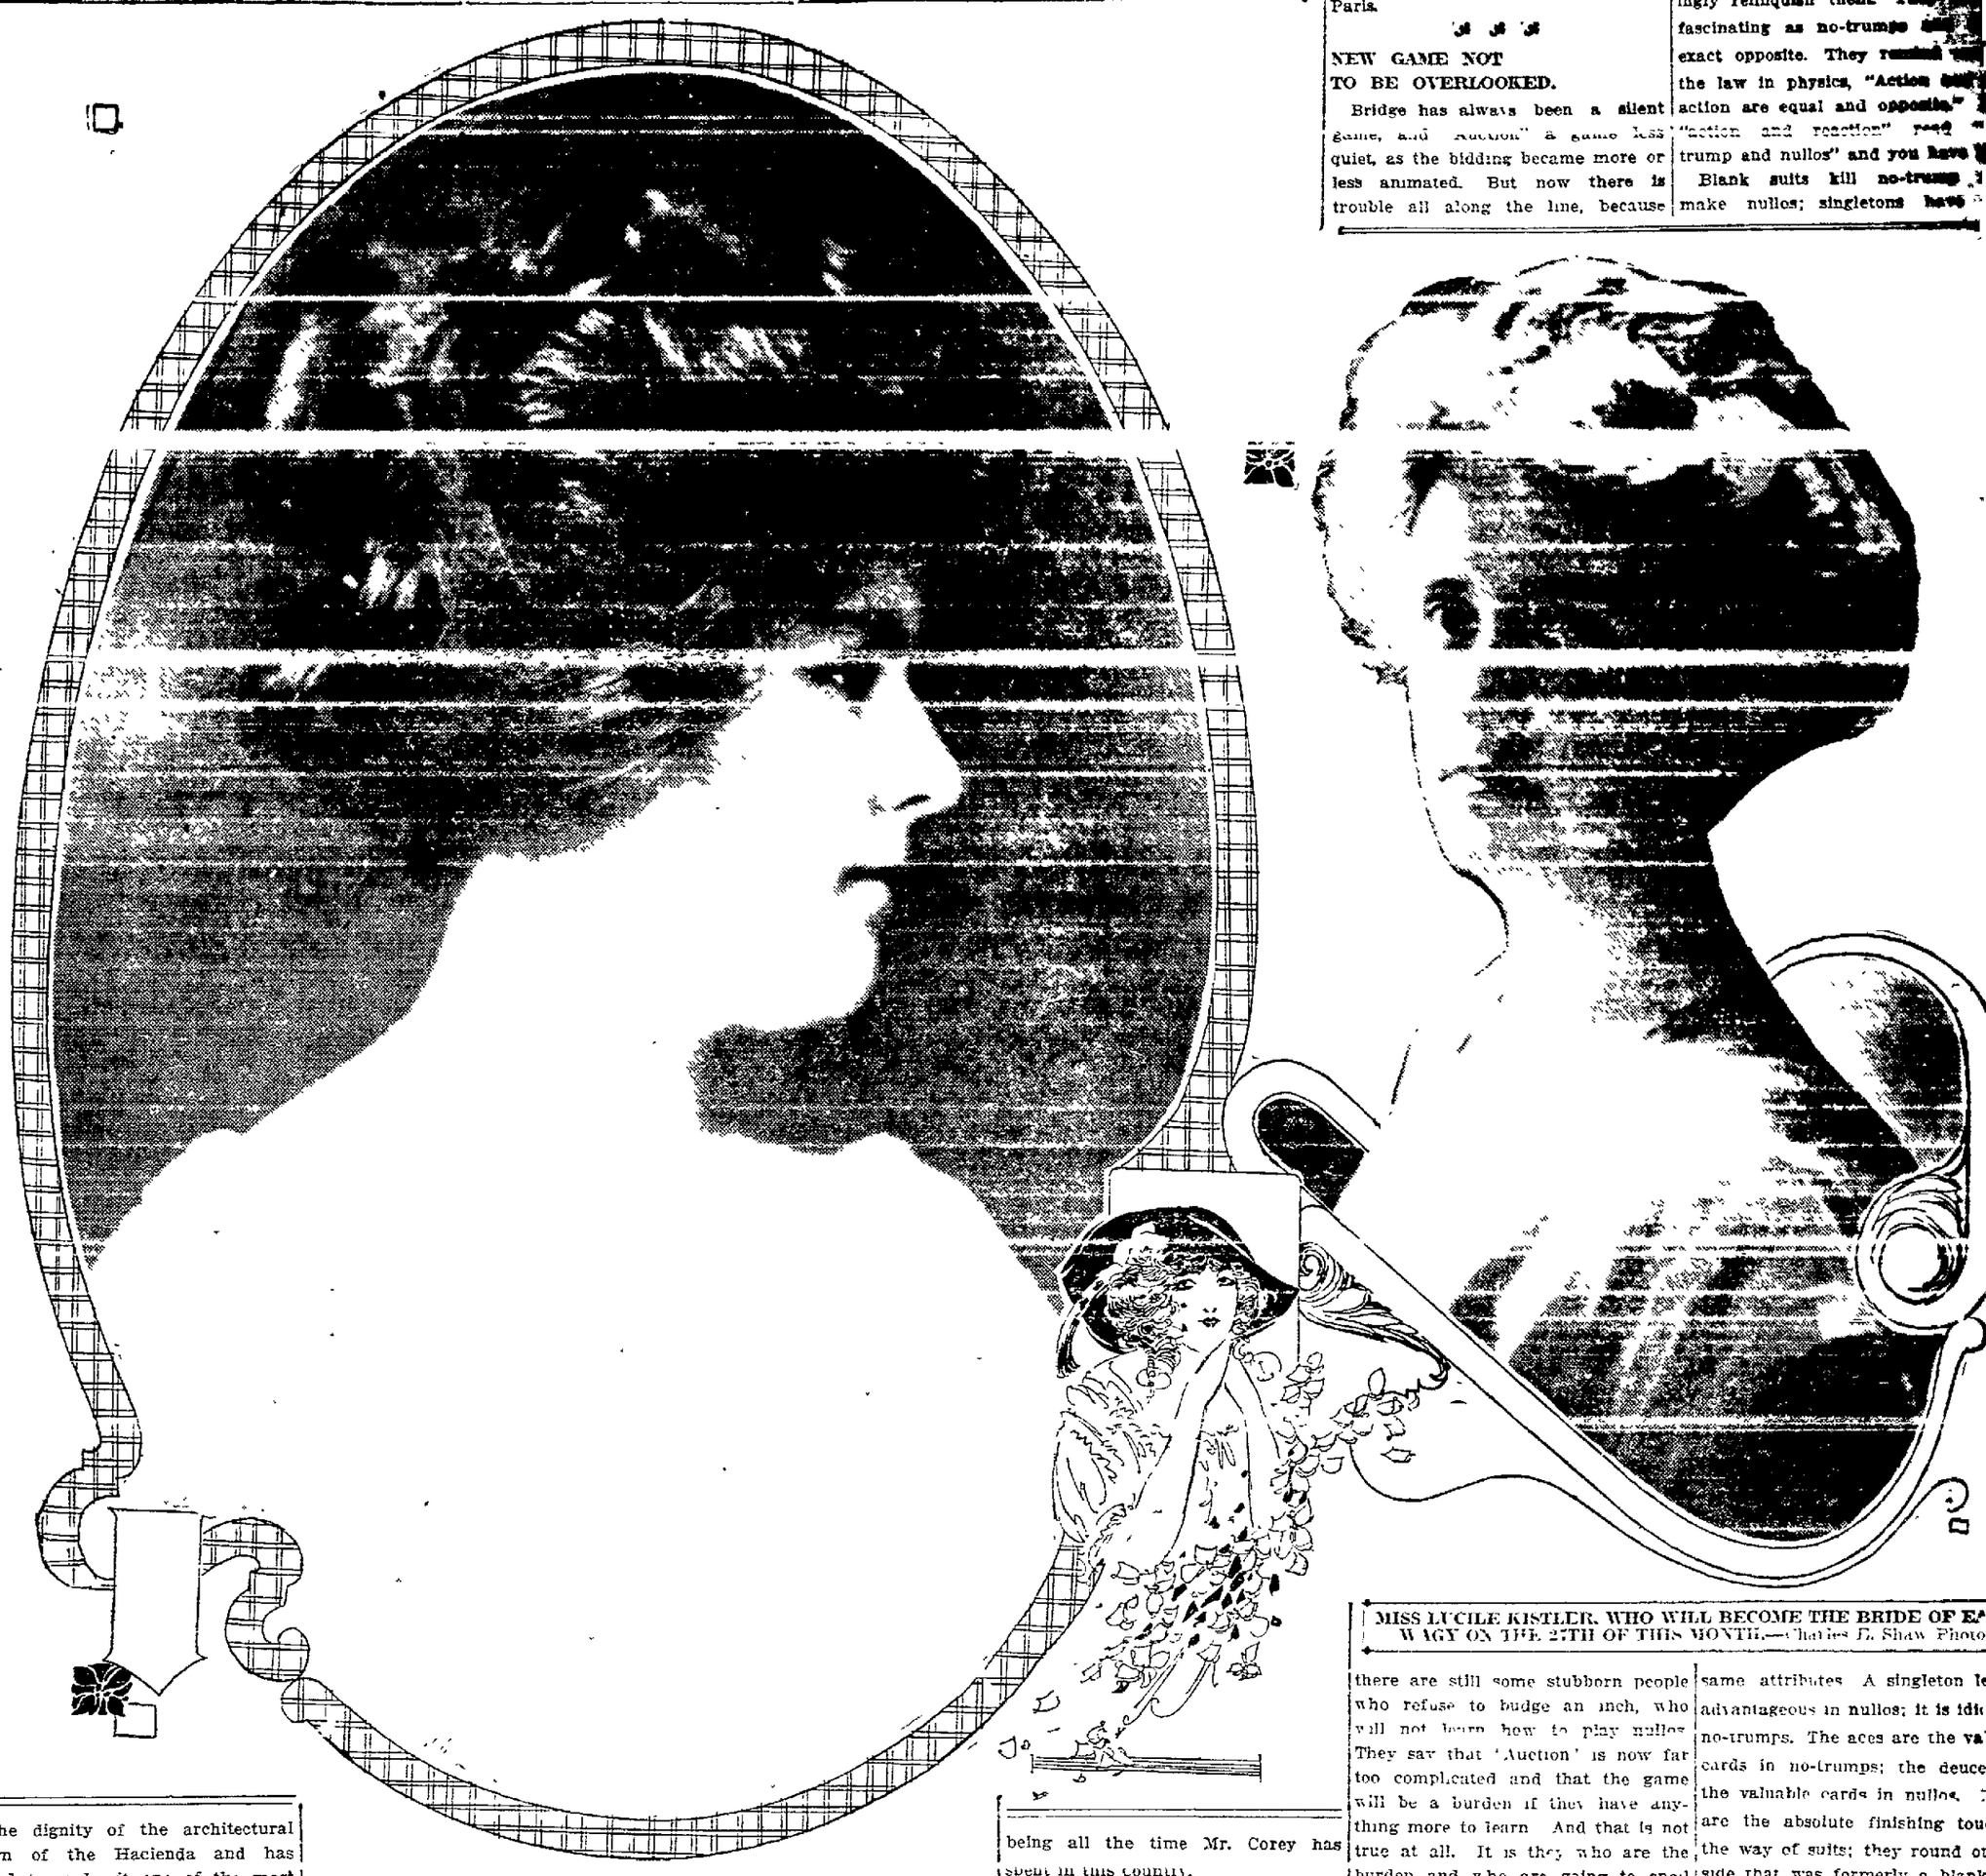
C. A.: In the case of freckles, tan, and sunburn the old adage holds true that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." The face should be protected as much as possible to prevent these troubles. If your face freckles, tans, or burns easily it should be protected first by using some cold cream and then dusted with a pure rice powder—never wash the face immediately on coming in from outdoors. A liberal amount of cold cream should be dabbed on and carefully wiped off with sterilized gauze. The following ounce carbonated potash, one-eighth ounce chloride of soda, eight ounces rosewater, and two ounces orange flower water. Mix. Bathe face with this lotion at night before retiring. In the morning use plenty of good cold cream.

SOCIETY

MISS MILDRED BOYNE, WHO HAS ANNOUNCED HER ENGAGEMENT TO CHARLES C. KUTZ AND WILL BE HONORED AT A NUMBER OF SMART AFFAIRS THIS SEASON.—Webster Photo.



ONE of the happy signs of the times is the interest many people take in their homes, and, having established a home altogether unique and original, many people proceed to develop a garden, the pride and joy of the family. California, with its blue sky, its splendid marine views, has promptly developed an outdoor life very similar to that of Southern Europe, and it is developing an architecture, unique in the story of historic art. On our side of the bay in the foothills one finds pictures strongly suggestive of Naples, though there will be color tones on the hills which surpass those found in that far-famed Italian city.

straight and high from the hill slopes give strong tones to the hills, which resemble the olive orchards of Southern Europe. Many prominent people are interested in their own new homes, and they take a very generous pride in the homes of their neighbors. In California has been [illegible] bungalow [illegible] which is the admiration of the world, since one does not need a great fortune to develop a home altogether lovely.

Some of the homes in the state will be of world-wide interest in the future. In the old days men acquired fortunes here and promptly went to the East and to Europe to live. Now they have learned that the joy of living can be best experienced in California, so houses of historic interest are everywhere in construction.

In the southern part of the state the home of Henry Huntington is perhaps the most prominent. One regards that not so much for its architectural significance, but for the art treasures which have cost an immense fortune. Mr. Huntington has in his gallery some of the most famous portraits by old-time English artists that the world has known. In his fine gallery are to be found Gainsboroughs, Romneys, Whistlers, and other names well known in the world of art are to be found on some of the art treasures in his home. Mr. and Mrs Henry Huntington are to be in Southern California this winter, and the latter who was Mrs Collis Huntington, will renew many old-time friendships on this coast.

Among her friends are Mrs Isaac Requa, Mrs. A. N. Towne and Mrs. Worden, and all the Nevada people who had railroad interests here in the early sixties The Princess Hatzfeldt, Mrs Huntington's adopted daughter is expected to pay a visit to the Huntingtons this winter in their Southern California home.

At Hillsborough and Burlingame homes are being developed that will run up into the millions for those families who can now afford it are developing not the ordinary villas, but great estates

The Carolans will have at least a hundred acres surrounding their new home. Their old residence, "The Crossways," was beautiful, but the grounds were not large enough, especially for the splendid French chateau, which will realize Mrs. Carolan's dream of a superb home. Whole rooms are to be brought from France, and a wail goes up because of that among the French aristocracy. But there is nothing like the old woods, mellowed and tempered by time, so Mrs. Carolan will transport from the heart of artistic France whole rooms to grace her chateau in sunny California.

Mrs. William Crocker's home at Burlingame has some of the finest works of art on the coast, and the wonderful drawing rooms in Louis Seize tones are of a rare charm.

Mrs. Hearst's home at the Hacienda holds more wonderful art treasures than perhaps any other private home on the coast. They represent an exceedingly well-chosen collection of many years for the best connoisseurs of Europe have chosen the rare works of art. Mrs. Hearst herself has fine artistic perceptions, and very few houses in the land have more treasures that are genuine and exceedingly interesting and valuable. A magnificent wing was added to the Hacienda a few months ago, the addition designed by Julia Morgan, the well-known architect. It has added to the dignity of the architectural design of the Hacienda and has helped to make it one of the most truly beautiful homes around the bay.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Kohl are building their new home in the Burlingame foothills, and it is to represent an estate of thirty-five acres. The house is to follow the Elizabethan type of architecture and will be one of the most attractive residences on the Peninsula. It has been copied after an English home and the big facade will be of tapestry brick and elaborately carved blue stone.

For many months gardeners have been at work and the Kohls expect to have the finest grounds in the matter of the varieties of trees to be found in Burlingame. The site of the home is on a beautiful knoll, in the very center of the thirty-acre radius. From this site there is a superb view of the bay and of the foothills and valleys. The Kohl estate adjoins the estates of Mrs Whitelaw Reid and of Ogden Mills, making a trio of famous residences in the heart of the Peninsula district.

The Flood home is noted for its wonderful swimming bath, representing baths of the old Roman type, and the finest in all California.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Ford (Marian Miller) have taken possession of their new home in Burlingame and Mrs. Ford is most enthusiastic about it. The house is beautifully designed and the furnishings have been chosen with much care, many of them having been purchased abroad.

In probably no other section of the world is there to be found such building activity as in our own city. The growth of a great city has uprooted all the old homes and has been the means of erecting magnificent structures on the lovely slopes of the foothills. And it represents fine architectural perception that so many of the new homes are planned along Spanish and Italian designs. They are most appropriately planned. In fine Italian, French or Spanish designs are the homes of Mrs. Remi Chabot, the Victor Metcalfs, the Allen Chickerings, the Mark Requas, Mrs. S. T. Alexander, Mrs. Soule, Mr. Sutton, Mrs. Elsey, Arthur Breed, Walter Starr, John F. Conners, William Pierce Johnson, Henry Taylor

Among the finest types of brick homes based on foreign designs are those belonging to Mrs. Oscar Long, the Samuel Taylors, the Charles Parcells and the Herbert Hamilton Browns One hears that one of the finest estates on the coast will be developed by Mrs. MacDermot, who has bought many acres in the far foothills, with a view unequaled anywhere in the world. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Titus are gathering from all parts of the globe wonderful treasures to grace their new home, and when it is completed "Greenacres" will measure up well with the most artistic homes in the country.

Another fine estate is that being developed at Piedmont by Mr. Wigginton Creed. The house is of brick, with exceedingly fine color tones, set in the heart of grounds wonderfully picturesque. The brick house, with its many gables, reminds one of a fine type of English home, and its hill views are unsurpassed in restfulness and quiet beauty

In Berkeley is a home representing the finest color tones on the coast, which is saying a great deal for the home, but which is perfectly true. One finds this color scheme in the Thorson home, which took a year to develop and which is now considered by artists as representing the finest interior color designs on the coast. At Claremont, on the hill slopes, is a lovely Italian villa, copied from a wonderful villa just outside of Rome. It is the home of the Tietjens, and Mr Tietjen derived his inspiration for the new home from the lovely villa he saw during a trip abroad.

On the high hill slopes of Mountain avenue begins to loom up the magnificent home of the Edson Adams. It is to be a perfect specimen of the Italian Renaissance, and one hears that it is to be absolutely perfect in all its details.

The Edward Halls are to move into their new home in the near future, and ground is to be broken almost immediately for the home of the Harry Knowles on the hill slopes of Mountain avenue.

"Labor, with its hundred hands, knocks at the gates of the morning."

And it is building homes for us far and wide, and they look to the east, "to the gates of the morning."

AMERICAN WOMEN IN OLD-WORLD SETTING.

One hears that the Americans are astonishing old-time Europeans with the happy way they have of re-establishing old historic buildings. This is true of the American girls who have married into the ranks of the nobility—of such charming young matrons as the Duchess of Roxburghe, the Countess of Granard, the Duchess of Marlborough and Mrs. John Ward. And over in France there is the Princess Poniatowski, who was the beautiful California girl, Beth Sperry, Mrs Crocker's sister. Her home in the heart of the aristocratic section of Paris is exceedingly beautiful, and one of the most artistic country homes on the French Riviera is presided over by the Princess Poniatowski.

In France one of the topics of the hour concerns itself with the wonderful home of the William E. Coreys. Mr. and Mrs Corey have come much to the fore this season as entertainers, or perhaps it would be truer to say that Mrs. Corey has, for he has been absent in America, except for a short time this summer. The couple were at Deauville for a fortnight during the height of the season, that being all the time Mr. Corey has spent in this country.

Many prominent Americans are Mrs. Corey's guests this year, for she has given the most delightful musicales and garden parties, and distinguished guests from both America and Europe have been entertained by her. The chateau in which she lives is wonderfully charming. The grounds take in a thousand acres, the walls about the chateau inclose some 200, and it is all in a gently sloping valley with hills that may be seen at a distance. A river runs through the grounds and at one side of the chateau, and there is, as there should always be in such a place, a drawbridge, which may still be worked and is in keeping with the picture.

The house is old, having been built for the richest and most famous of the Conde princes, the one who afterwards bought and rebuilt historic Chantilly. It is of stone and stucco, has a drawing room that is nearly a hundred feet long, that opens on to a splendid terrace, from which one may look across the valley over the river and on to the beautifully wooded hills and surrounding forests. There is also a large library and a superb dining room in which all the wonderfully carved wood has been retained. Above stairs, too, the rooms are of noble size and fine proportions and at the top of the house there is a ballroom where a hundred couples may dance, with a minstrel gallery at one end.

The other side of the picture comes to us in the following sketch of the Coreys. It was at Deauville that the smartness of Mrs. Corey's frocks were commented upon, and also, alas, there it was that the altered appearance of the former head of the steel trust was noticed; that he is looking old, worn, badly dressed, and evidently out of spirits. There have, of course, been rumors that all is not well in this family and that Mr. Corey finds it difficult to keep up the social pace that has been set him by his young wife, but whether this be true or not the former Mabelle Gilman is evidently enjoying life to its fullness and is making of her country home one of the most sought after places about Paris.

NEW GAME NOT TO BE OVERLOOKED.

Bridge has always been a silent game, and "Auction" a game less quiet, as the bidding became more or less animated. But now there is trouble all along the line, because there are still some stubborn people who refuse to budge an inch, who will not learn how to play nullos. They say that "Auction" is now far too complicated and that the game will be a burden if they have anything more to learn And that is not true at all. It is they who are the burden and who are going to spoil the game for their friends. For a woman who does not know how to play nullos is in the same position as the woman who did not formerly know how to play auction. The latter very soon found out that she had to either stay home or learn auction, and she took the latter alternative as gracefully as she could.

The same thing is true of nullos—and it is the one thing that has been needed to eliminate "luck" and to make the game thoroughly scientific.

A clever writer on the game of auction bridge tells us:

If you once take nullos to your bosom I am sure you will [illegible] ingly relinquish them. They [illegible] fascinating as no-trumps [illegible] exact opposite. Health and Beauty Hints

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

Mrs. O. L.: You complain of brittle, faded hair. You will find that keeping the scalp clean and healthy is the most effective way to restore the natural beauty and softness, but in selecting your shampoo avoid soaps or mixtures containing "free" alkali. By dissolving a teaspoonful cantrox in a cup hot water you will have a mild, soothing, cleansing mixture that makes the head feel fine and removes all dust, dandruff and excess oil, leaving the scalp clean and pliant and assuring a beautiful growth of long, lustrous, fluffy hair.

E. G.: Nature never intended woman to have fuzz on her cheek. Get from your druggist a small original package of [illegible] and mix a little of the powder with water. Apply the paste to the obnoxious hairs and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off and the hairs will come with it. After the skin is washed and dried, it will be velvety and free from hair or blemish.

Katie: Yes, powder has ruined more complexions than it has aided and while you use it you can hope for noth[illegible] real complexion. Take my advice. Get from your druggist 4 ounces spurmax and dissolve in ¼ pint hot water or witch hazel, then add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine and you will have an ideal yet inexpensive lotion, which seems a part of the skin. Apply this spurmax [illegible] sparingly and rub lightly for an instant and it will vanish, leaving the skin clear and soft. The daily use of this spurmax lotion rids the skin of that coarse, sallow, oily appearance and renders the complexion divinely fair and beautiful.

Elaine: Yes, there is a harmless way will also strengthen and rid them of that dull ache and tired feeling you mention. Mix and use the following [illegible] Dissolve 1 oz. orestos in 1 pint of water, then put two or three drops in each eye a few times daily. It is an excellent thing for granulated eyelids, to reduce inflammation and take out soreness.

Miss C.: Dandruff is the cause of your trouble. Cleanse the scalp thoroughly, then twice a week massage a little this home-made tonic into the Make the tonic by pouring 1 ounce rom into ½ pint alcohol, to which is added ½ pint water. Mix thoroughly and apply liberally and often.

LOOKING OLD—Crows' feet and wrinkles below the eyes can be very readily and quickly eliminated, and a difference of 5 or 10 years in appearance be produced. Stop using the creams you mention. Use instead a mixture of half a pint of hot water, two ounces of eptol and two tablespoonfuls of glycerine. Mix thoroughly and stir over slow fire until it creams. Then let it cool. Use it generously every morning and night. This will not grow hair. Every wrinkle in your face will vanish and you will look younger by quite a few years in a remarkably short time. The eptol you can obtain for not more than fifty cents at the drug store.

GERTRUDE M.—I think hair on the lip, even fuzz, is hideous. Fuzz on the cheeks is just as bad. Never cut or shave it off. Almost anything you use to remove it will cause coarse hairs to grow in its place. Delatone, a sulfo solution is almost magic, dissolving hair in a few moments and leaving the skin soft and beautiful. It will cost you one dollar at the drug stores. You can use this on any part of the body. It never harms the most tender skin.

PHOEBE—You will probably be surprised to know that all blackheads, large and small, can be removed in a few minutes. Here is the method. After first washing the face, sprinkle some powdered borax on a sponge and wet with hot water, and rub over the blackheads for a few minutes, then wash the face again. The blackheads will vanish. The neroxin can be procured for fifty cents at any drug store.

SEARCHER—Nine-tenths of the shampoos do not get the scurfy film off the scalp. You will never want a more thoroughly cleansing, luxurious, lathery shampoo than by dissolving a teaspoonful of eggol in half a cup of water, rubbing well into the scalp and then rinsing the hair. Shampoos are necessary to hair health. The eggol will cost not more than twenty-five cents at drug stores, enough to give you at least twelve generous shampoos.

JULIANA—Certainly, even a woman of 45 may restore her bust development. I can not too strongly recommend a mixture of a half a cup of sugar, two ounces of ruetone and half a pint of hot water, taking of this, when cold, two teaspoonfuls three or four times a day, after meals. It produces a girlish plumpness that nothing else can, and does it in a few weeks.

EVANGELINE T. C.—I am not surprised to learn that you have taken blood tonics for over a year trying to get rid of pimples. Drop them. Pimples and skin eruptions will all disappear if you will for a time take one or two tablespoonfuls three or four times a day of a mixture of twelve ounces of sugar, one ounce or sarsene, and one-half pint of water. Get the sarsene, which is a liquid, in the original package by the ounce. You will positively get rid of your pimples.

Artificial flowers are the lure this season, as they were last year. One of them is a black velvet calla lily of natural size; within its calyx is a straight line of yellow like the garden original, which breaks the utter blackness of appearance. A well-shaped leaf on one side of the blossom is made of closely-set rhinestones, each small and of excellent quality.

All of the women who have returned from Europe this season have brought back the most wonderful ornaments, and beautiful ones have been worn by Mrs. George McNear Jr., Mrs. John McNear and Mrs. William Crocker.

AUTUMN IS TIME OF TRAVELING FOR MANY.

Many well-known people are still away on their travels, and many of one's friends have returned to town and are again part of the social round.

Mr. and Mrs. Bourke Cochran (Marjory Ide), have sailed for Europe and they will be abroad until the Christmas holidays. They are going directly to Ireland to visit Mrs. Cochran's sister, Mrs. Shane Leslie. The Shane Leslies have a beautiful home in Ireland, and with the Cochrans they are planning a motor trip through England and Scotland.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Teague (Marguerite Butters), have spent their honeymoon on the Atlantic Coast, and they are now at fashionable Bar Harbor. On their return to California they will make their home in Fresno, where Mr. Teague has large agricultural interests.

Mr. and Mrs. Dixwell Hewitt (Kate Clement), are going east some time this month. They will go directly to New York, where the shops and theaters are specially fascinating in the early autumn.

The George Tysons and the Harry Weihes are lingering longer away than usual this season, and will remain at their country home near Saratoga until October.

Judge and Mrs. Fred W. Henshaw and the latter's daughter, Miss Elinor Tay, are again at their country place near Palo Alto. They spent some delightful days at Santa Barbara, as the guests of Mrs. William G. Henshaw.

Everyone is glad to welcome home again, if only for a time, Mr. and Mrs. Whipple Hall and their charming little daughter, Miss Anne Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall (Ethel Crellin) is at the Crellin home on Alice street and the Halls expect to spend their for many months in the Far East. They enjoyed a delightful stay in Batavia, Java, and they have just completed a visit of several months in the Philippines.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Proctor are still at Del Monte, where they have been for the past two months. Mrs. Proctor had great trouble with her eyes, and was obliged to stay for some weeks in a darkened room, but happily she is now much better.

Mr. and Mrs. Wickham Havens have been spending some days at the McCloud Country Club. It is an ideal club in many ways and exceedingly picturesque

Everything looks very promising for a season of much social activity. There will be masquerades, dances, teas, and among the most elaborate of the entertainments the reception for the debutantes of the winter. Among the latter will be Miss Allene Edoff and Miss Carmen Ghirardelli. There have never been so many dates so early in the season, and the winter promises to be a delightful round of unusual social activities.

The bride, who is an attractive girl, was gowned in an exquisite creation of white chiffon velvet brocade, handsomely embroidered, the bodice of the costume being entirely of point lace. A shower of lilies of the valley arranged with a bow of tulle, completed the costume. Mrs. Henry Kahn, mother of the bride, wore a beautiful gown of black jet, fashioned in the latest mode. Following the ceremony a reception and wedding supper was held at the Kahn residence.

EATS UP RESTAURANT, BUT FALLS DOWN ON PIE

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 20.—In a contest which started with fried eggs and ended with apple pie, Thomas Warnack, a traveling salesman, won a $50 wager from Edward E. Guion, a downtown saloon proprietor. The contest grew out of an argument as to whether Chris Schmidt could eat more food than Sam Skovel. Both are known for their healthy appetites.

Schmidt, who is 62 years old, is a crawfish dealer of Lake Hahatonka, Mo., and a friend of Guion. Skovel is a St. Louis motor dealer, 30 years old. He was backed by Warnack. Each ate twenty-four fried eggs, two large steaks, a loaf of rye bread and an apple pie. Each drank four bottles of beer. Skovel finished his second pie, but Schmidt could eat no more when he was half through his second pie. The men were taken to a hotel following the contest to recover.

SERIES OF RECITALS.

It would be well if the course of recitals given by Charles Louis Seeger at the University of California in the early spring could be repeated. Mr. Seeger talked informally of Handel and Corelli, of old John Morley, Arne and Purcell, of Giordani, Lotti and Caldara, and of the greatest master of those days Johann Sebastian Bach. A copy of the first recital of the series is as follows, with Mr. Seeger as the pianist, Mrs. Seeger as the violinist and Miss Caroline Halsted Little as soloist.

(Violin and Piano)
Corelli (1653-1713): Sonata, D major.
Grave—Allegro; Adagio; Allegro.
(Soprano and Piano)
Morley (1557-1604): "It Was a Lover and His Lass."
Greaves (1604): "Ye Bubbling Springs."
Arne (1710-1778): "Now Phoebus."
(Violin and Piano)
Handel (1685-1759): Sonata, A major.
Andante; Allegro; Largo; Allegro.
(Soprano and Piano)
Giordani (1744): "Caro mio ben."
Lotti (1667-1740): "Pur dicesti."
Caldara (1678-1766): "Come Raggio di Sol."
(Soprano, Violin and Piano)
Bach (1685-1750): Aria, "Mein Glaubliges Herz, Frohlocke."

Other recitals were given which dealt with Rameau and Bach, Mozart and Beethoven, Schumann and Brahms. It is hoped that the public will again have the opportunity of listening to Mr. Seeger and his colleagues.

MADAME FRANCES ALDA TO SING.

Another artist who will soon favor this side of the bay will be Madame Frances Alda, the gifted wife of Giulio Gatti-Casazza, the impresario of the Metropolitan opera house, who has been engaged to sing Eva in the first performance of "Die Meistersinger" at the Boston opera house. She will be assisted in her recital here by Gutia Cassini, Russian cellist, and Frank La Forge, pianist. Mme. Alda appeared two years ago in "Otello" as Desdemona. She is a native of New Zealand.

MUSICAL PAINTINGS.

Miss Vivian Grant, a young Berkeley musician, will paint scenes from famous operas with tones on piano and violin. Miss Grant has arranged a series of musicals for the coming season, which is something entirely new in the line of musical recitals. The new idea is to paint pictures with musical tones. The operas which Miss Grant will portray include "Der Ring des Nibelungen," "Parsifal," "Tannhauser," "Lohengrin," "Die Meistersinger," Wagner; "Lucia di Lammermoor," Donizetti, and "Thais," Massenet. Scenes of the various operas will be thrown on a screen. The first recital will be given some time in October.

KRUGER CLUB.

Miss Myrtle Donnelly will be soloist at the Corona club at its next session, September 27. Her selections will be from a number of well known composers, including Chopin and Mendelssohn.

Miss Audrey Beer, a pupil of George Kruger, was soloist at the last meeting of the Senza Ritmo club of East Oakland. Liszt's second rhapsodie was one of the numbers given by Miss Beer, who displayed her talent in the rendition of the piece.

CHORAL SERVICE.

A beautiful choral program has been arranged for this morning and will be sung at the Church of the Advent, Twelfth avenue and East Sixteenth street, by the choir of Grace Cathedral of San Francisco. William H. Holt is organist and director of the choir. Among those in the Grace Church choir are Alfred E. McMillan, Frank Onslow, George Wallace, William Young, Harold Pruett, H. Edwin Fossey, George H. Hooke. Assisting the choir of the Church of the Advent will be Mrs. Harvey M. Toy, Miss Ora J. Berry and Mrs. L. A. Mattes. Alfred Chaplain-Bayley is organist, and B. Walker Bours director of the choir. Following is the program to be rendered:

MOTORCYCLE COP PROVES DEMON AMONG WEALTHY

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—George Wing, the "demon motorcycle cop," of Highland park, made his twenty-ninth arrest at Lake Forest residents yesterday. He rounded up Thomas Byrne, Jr., on a charge of speeding.

As a result George will have to hustle considerably to make three important engagements. The first will be to answer a court martial charge at Fort Sheridan for speeding in government territory. The charge was preferred by Lieut. Theodore S. Proxmire of the United States medical reserve stationed at the fort.

The second will be to appear in court at Lake Forest almost simultaneously against Lieut. Proxmire, whom Wing arrested on Saturday night for not carrying a tail light on his automobile after dark. The third will be to appear against young Mr. Byrne.

DEWEY WRITES HIS OWN STORY OF MANILA BAY AT LAST

For First Time Tells of Work of Fleet and Capture of City

ON May 1, 1898, certain gentlemen of Spain, then actively engaged in or about Manila Bay, might well have cursed the Onion River, if they had ever heard of it. For the Onion River, although it was then swollen to a flood, refused on a certain occasion to drown a little boy who fell into it. The little boy's name was George Dewey.

Onion River adventure and other episodes of his childhood in his Autobiography, just published by Charles Scribner's Sons. He tells, of course, of many other things, of mighty battles, of arduous labor, of intricate diplomacy. But about the childhood of a famous man there is always a peculiar fascination.

It is just a matter of chance, it seems—a fortunate chance for his [illegible] sea. He left his home in Montpelier, Vt., to study at the Norwich Military Academy. After [illegible] further education was to be considered.

"Competitive examinations," he says "were not yet the rule in my time in choosing candidates for either West Point or Annapolis. Appointments were due entirely to the political favor of Representatives in Congress. There was no vacancy for West Point from Vermont. Otherwise I might have gone into Manila Bay on an army transport instead of on the Olympia.

"But it happened that there was a vacancy at Annapolis. A boy by the name of George Spaulding of Montpelier received the appointment at first, but decided that he would not take it. My father, through his influence with Senator Foote, had me made Spaulding's successor. Spaulding became a distinguished clergyman. Perhaps he was better suited for that than to be a sailor. Certainly I was better suited to be a sailor than a clergyman. I recollect that he preached a sermon in honor of the victory of Manila Bay at his church in Syracuse."

Concerning the early history of Annapolis he has some interesting facts to tell. "At the time I left Norwich, 1854," he says, "West Point had a great name as a disciplinary institution. There [illegible] had to obey. Annapolis was not then so well known as West Point, being only nine years old. We owe the efficiency of the personnel of our navy to Annapolis; and we owe Annapolis to George Bancroft, a man of singular versatility of talent and singular sturdiness and decisiveness of character. He not only wrote the standard history of the United States which bears his name, but he was also Minister to Berlin and Secretary of the Navy.

"When he saw that with the development of naval science a school was necessary for training officers for the army, his proposition met with the immediate opposition of the veteran officers of the service. Their disparagement was sufficient to prevent Congress from appropriating money to give the new institution a start.

"But this did not discourage Mr. Bancroft. He went right ahead with what resources he could command. At Annapolis there was old Fort Severn, [illegible] had been deserted. In want of funds for buildings, he secured the use of the buildings which had been [illegible] by the force that formerly manned the fort. The barracks which had housed privates of artillery became the dormitories of the future officers of the navy.

"Henry H. Lockwood, a former army officer and a graduate of West Point, was appointed Professor of Mathematics and became chief instructor. Most of the other instructors were civilians. Their assistants were young officers of the navy."

"SHANG" DEWEY.

"Shang" Dewey was what his classmates called the boy from Vermont, and to this day, he says, he has not discovered the origin of his nickname. Even in those days he was no stranger to fighting, as the following little narrative shows:

"Fistic arbitration of grievances between two midshipmen, I believe, still prevails under the supervision of upperclass men as the court of honor, in spite of the close observation of the commandant. There were numbers of them in my time. They were privately acknowledged, if openly discouraged, by the instructors as the manly way to settle differences. I looked after an affair of my own without waiting on any formality.

"A cadet who sat opposite me called me a name at mess which no man can hear without redress. I did not lose a second, and, springing around the table, I went for him and bear him down under the table before we were separated. That was a pretty serious infraction of discipline at mess. The combatants were brought up before the superintendent, Captain L. M. Goldsborough, later the well known rear admiral of the civil war, who asked me why I had made the attack. I told him the name which my classmate had called me. He said that I could not have done anything else, fined me 10 demerits, and assured the fellow whom I had thrashed that he had got exactly what he deserved.

How many Americans know the origin of the phrase "Blood is thicker than water"? Admiral Dewey describes the event that made it famous. In telling of his midshipman cruise on the Wabash of the Mediterranean squadron, he writes:

"BLOOD THICKER THAN WATER."

"It was the summer of 1859 that the celebrated 'Blood is thicker than water' incident occurred. Flag Officer Josiah Tatnall, who had won fame by a brilliant exploit at Vera Cruz in the war with Mexico and won more later as a Confederate officer, witnessing the heavy fire which the British chartered steamer Toey-wan was suffering from the Chinese forts in the Pei river, could not keep out of the fight. Turning to a junior officer he exclaimed, 'Blood is thicker than water,' and ordered his boat manned, and with his own crew took the place of fallen British gunners in firing on the Chinese.

Afterward he used the Toey-wan in towing up the British reserves for the storming party that attacked the forts. This is a service that the British navy has never forgotten. In the trying days at Manila after the battle, Sir Edward Chichester, as we shall see, exemplified the spirit of that stirring phrase of Tatnall's in a manner that was deeply gratifying. True international friendship is best tested in time of trial, and the British proved theirs in 1898."

Midshipman Dewey enjoyed his Mediterranean trip thoroughly. "The Midshipman," he says, "at the bottom round of the official ladder has one advantage over all his superiors, and that is youth. On my cruise homeward from Manila in 1898, when I needed rest before the overwhelming public reception that awaited me, I spent several weeks in the Mediterranean, of whose climate and associations I had always been very fond. I enjoyed myself almost as well as I did when when I was a Midshipman."

It is probable that most readers will postpone reading Admiral Dewey's account of his experiences in the civil war, (interesting and important as they are,) until they have read the narrative of his part in the war with Spain. But there is a diplomatic incident, strikingly illustrative of the tenseness of the situation just before the war broke out, which must be noticed.

Admiral Dewey was in command of the Asiatic Squadron, stationed at Hongkong. The Maine had been blown up, and the relations between the United States and Spain reached a crisis. The Kaiser had sent his brother, Prince Henry of Prussia, to the Far East, flying his flag as a Rear Admiral and second in command of the German squadron.

Prince Henry had reached Hongkong, and there was much interchange of hospitalities among the ships. Here is the story as the Admiral tells it.

"Among the numerous dinners was one given by Prince Henry on board the flagship, the Deutschland, when the Acting Governor, Major General W. Black, the commandant of the British naval station at Hongkong, the Commodore of the American squadron, and the captains of several British, AMerican and Russia men of war were the principal guests.

"As is customary on such occasions, towards the end of the dinner Prince Henry proposed, in succession, the health of the heads of the various nationalities represented, the toasts being drunk standing, and the Deutschland's band at the same moment playing the appropriate national air. The usual procedure is that, after a toast to his own sovereign, the host proposes, in turn, the health of the ruler or chief magistrate of each country represented at the table, these toasts being given in the order of the rank of the senior officer present.

"In this case the first toast was naturally one to the health of the German Emperor, then one to the Queen of England, and, though the next should have been to the President of the United States because we had a squadron commander present, Prince Henry made it to the Czar of Russia, represented by a captain, and placed the President of the United States at the end of the list. The relegation of the President by Prince Henry to the last toast was not a thing to be considered as a personal matter, but as one affecting the nation and its head, whom I represented, and also as expressive of an attitude not altogether uncommon at that time with some European powers. This attitude I felt I could not overlook. Therefore the American officers were conspicuous by their absence thereafter at entertainments given in Hongkong in Prince Henry's honor, until at one of them the Prince remarked that the Americans were present, and asked his hostess the cause.

"'It is one that your Royal Highness should be aware of,' she replied. When he pleaded ignorance she told him the reason why I had taken offense.

"The next morning, unattended and in citizen's clothes, he came on board the Olympia to call, and with fine candor expressed his regret for an error in which there had been no intentional slight and which was due to his lack of experience in such matters. After that we saw a great deal of each other, and neither of us hesitated to express our convictions freely in our talks. Upon one occasion, in discussing the possible outcome of our complications with Spain, Prince Henry remarked that he did not believe that the powers would ever allow the United States to annex Cuba.

"'We do not wish to annex Cuba, your Highness,' I answered, 'but we [illegible] affairs which exist at present in that island at our very doors to continue, and we are bound to put a stop to it.'

"'And what are you after? What does your country want?' the Prince asked jokingly on another occasion, in referring to the general scramble for a foothold in the Far East.

"'Oh, we need only a bay,' I said jokingly in return, having in mind [illegible] that this was all Germany said that they wanted at Kiau-Chau. It did not then occur to me that we should be taking Manila Bay permanently."

Well, one day Secretary Long sent Admiral Dewey a cable. And this was what it said:

"War has commenced between the United States and Spain. Proceed at once to Philippine Islands. Commence operations particularly against the Spanish fleet. You must capture vessels or destroy. Use utmost endeavor."

A perfectly simple commission, with no conditions or complications. "You must capture vessels or destroy," that was all. And it was enough.

PLANS MANILA ATTACK.

April was drawing to a close and the hour of the great conflict was approaching. In Subig bay Admiral Dewey summoned all the commanding officers of his fleet aboard the flagship and said: "We shall enter Manila bay tonight, and you will follow the motions and movements of the flagship, which will lead."

Admiral Dewey's story goes on as follows:

"When my Captains, after receiving their final orders on board the flagship had returned to their own ships the squadron resumed its course to Corregidor. As the gloom of night gradually shut out the details of the coast, the squadron steamed quietly on toward the entrance of Manila bay with all lights masked and the gun crews at the guns. By degrees the high land on either side loomed up out of the darkness, while the flagship headed for Boca Grande, which was the wider but comparatively little used channel. A light shower passed over about 11 o'clock, and heavy cumulus clouds drifting across the sky from time to time obscured the new moon. The landmarks and islands were, however, fairly visible, while compass bearings for regulating our course could readily be observed.

FARRAGUT DAYS RECALLED.

"It was as [illegible] years since, as executive officer of the Mississippi, I was first under fire in the passage of the Forts Jackson and St Philip under Farragut, and thirty-five years since, as executive officer, I had lost my ship in the attempted passage of the batteries of Port Hudson. Then, as now, we were dependent upon the screen of darkness to get by successfully, but then I was a subordinate and now the supreme responsibility was mine. * * * As we watched the walls of darkness for the first gunflash every moment of our progress brought its relief, and now we began to hope that we should get by without being fired on at all. But about ten minutes after midnight, when all except our rear ships had cleared it, the El Fraile battery opened with a shot that passed between the Petrel and the Raleigh. The Boston, Concord, Raleigh and McCulloch returned the fire with a few shots. One 8-inch shell from the Boston seemed to be effective. After firing three times El Fraile was silent. There was no demonstration whatever from the Caballo battery with its three 6-inch modern rifles, no explosion of mines, and no other resistance. We were safely within the bay. The next step was to locate the Spanish squadron and engage it.

"Afterward we heard various explanations of why we were not given a warmer reception as we passed through. Some of the officers in the El Fraile battery said that their dilatoriness in opening fire was due to the fact that their men were ashore at Punta Iasasi and could not get off to their guns in time after they heard of the squadron's approach. An eyewitness on Corregidor informed me that our squadron was perfectly visible as it was passing through the entrance, but for some extraordinary reason the commanding officer gave no orders to the batteries to open fire."

When daylight came the Spanish vessels were sighted. They were formed in a crescent in front of Cavite. The Olympia (the flagship) headed toward them, and the other vessels of the American fleet closed up, so that the distance between them was reduced to two-hundred yards.

FIGHT AT DAWN.

The American line of battle was Olympia, (flag;) Baltimore, Raleigh, Petrel, Concord, and Boston. The spanish line was Reina Cristina, (flag;) Don Juan de Austria, Don Antonio de Ulloa, Isla de Luzon, Isla de Cuba, and Marques de Duero.

"The misty haze of the tropical dawn," writes Admiral Dewey, "had hardly risen when, at 5:15, at long [illegible] squadron opened fire. Our course was not one leading directly toward the enemy, but a converging one, keeping him on our starboard bow. Our speed was eight knots and our converging course and ever-varying position must have confused the Spanish gunners. My assumption that the Spanish fire would be hasty and inaccurate proved correct.

"So far as I could see, none of our ships was suffering any damage, while, in view of my limited ammunition supply it was my plan not to open fire until we were within effective range, and then to fire as rapidly as possible with all of our guns.

"At 5:40, when we were within a distance of 5000 yards (two and one-half miles), I turned to Capt. Gridley and said.

"'You may fire when you are ready Gridley.'

"While I remained on the bridge with Lamberton, Brumby and Stickney, Gridley took his station in the conning tower and gave the order to the battery. The very first gun to speak was an eight-inch from the forward turret of the Olympia, and this was the signal for all the other ships to join the action.

"At about the time that the Spanish ships were first sighted, 5:06, two sub-marine mines were exploded between our squadron and Cavite, some two miles ahead of our column. On account of the distance, I remarked to Lamebrton.

"'Evidently the Spaniards are already rattle.'

"However, they explained afterward that the premature explosions were due to a desire to clear a space in which their ships might manoeuvre.

"There had been no cessation in the rapidity of fire maintained by our whole squadron, and the effect of its concentration, owing to the fact that our ships were kept so close together, was smothering, particularly upon the two largest ships, the Reina Cristina and Castilla. The Don Juan de Austria first and then the Reina Cristina made brave and desperate attempts to charge the Olympia, but, becoming the target for all our batteries, they turned and ran back.

"In this sortie the Reina Cristina was raked by an eight-inch shell, which is said to have put out of action some twenty men and to have completely destroyed her steering [illegible] another shell in her forecastle killed or wounded all the members of the crews of four rapid-fire guns; another set fire to her after oriop; another killed or disabled nine men on her poop; another carried away her mizzenmast, bringing down the ensign and the Admiral's flag, both of which were replaced; another exploded in the after ammunition room, and still another exploded in the sick bay, which was already filled with wounded. * * *

"The Castilla fared little better than the Reina Cristina. All except one of her guns was disabled, she was set on fire by our shells, and finally abandoned by her crew after they had sustained a loss of twenty-three killed and eight wounded. The Don Juan de Austria was badly damaged and on fire, the Isla de Luzon had three guns dismounted, and the Marques de Duero was also in a bad way. Admiral Montojo, finding his flagship no longer manageable, half her people dead or wounded, her guns useless and the ship on fire, gave the order to abandon and sink her, and transferred his flag to the Isla de Cuba shortly after 7 o'clock.

"Victory was already ours, though we did not know it. Owing to the smoke over the Spanish squadron there were no visible signs of the execution wrought by our guns when we started upon our fifth run past the enemy. We were keeping up our rapid fire, and the flagship was opposite the center of the Spanish line, when, at 7:35, the Captain of the Olympia made a report to me which was as startling as it was unexpected. This was to the effect that on board the Olympia there remained only fifteen rounds per gun for the five-inch battery.

"It was a most anxious moment for me. So far as I could see, the Spanish squadron was as intact as ours. I had reason to believe that their supply of ammunition was as ample as ours was limited.

"Therefore, I decided to withdraw temporarily from action for a redistribution of ammunition if necessary. For I know that fifteen rounds of 5-inch ammunition could be shot away [illegible] steaming out of range the distress of the Spanish ships became evident. Some of them were perceived to be on fire and others were seeking protection behind Cavite Point. The Don Antio de Ulloa, however, still retained her position at Sangley Point, where she had been moored. Moreover, the Spanish fire, with the exception of the Manila batteries, to which we had paid little attention, had ceased entirely. It was clear that we did not need a very large supply of ammunition [illegible] happily it was found that the report about the Olympia's 5-inch ammunition had been incorrectly transmitted. It was that fifteen rounds had been fired per gun, not that only fifteen rounds remained."

And now comes the explanation of the famous breakfast incident, an incident which has been absurdedly misinterpreted. "Feeling confident of the outcome," writes Admiral Dewey, "I now signaled that the crews, who had only a cup of coffee at 4 a. m., should have their breakfast. The public at home, on account of the signal, to which was attributed a nonchalance that had never occurred to me, reasoned that breakfast was the real reason for our withdrawing from action. Meanwhile I improved the opportunity to have the commanding officers report on board the flagship."

NOT A LIFE LOST.

There was little fighting left to be done. Captain after captain reported, and not a single life had been lost! Soon the batteries at Sangley Point were silenced and the gallant little Isla de Cuba, with her colors flying, was riddled and sunk. But Admiral Dewey was determined to execute his task in thorough seaman fashion, and some of the enemy's ships, abandoned, were still afloat.

Therefore, the executive officer of the Petrel, Lieutenant E. M. Hughes, with a whale boat and a crew of only seven men, boarded and set fire to the Don Juan de Austria, Isla de Cuba, Isla de Luzon, Gen. Lezo, Coreo, and Marques de Duero, all of which had been abandoned in shallow water and left scuttled by their deserting crews. This was a courageous undertaking, as these vessels were supposed to have been left with trains to their magazines and were not far from the shore, where there were hundreds of Spanish soldiers and sailors, all armed and greatly excited. The Manila, an armored transport, which was found uninjured after having been beached by the Spaniards, was therefore spared. Two days later she was easily floated, and for many years did good service as a gunboat. The little Petrel continued her work until 5:20 p. m., when she rejoined the squadron, towing a long string of tugs and launches, to be greeted by volleys of cheers from every ship.

"The order to capture or destroy the Spanish squadron had been [illegible] ted to the letter. Not one of the [illegible] ing vessels remained afloat. That [illegible] I wrote in my diary: 'Reached [illegible] ila at daylight. Immediately [illegible] the Spanish ships and batteries [illegible] Cavite. Destroyed eight of the [illegible] mer, including the Reina Cristina [illegible] Castilla. Anchored at noon off [illegible] nila.'"

Now came the long months in [illegible] nila Bay, the parleying with Aguinaldo and his followers, the problems of dealing with foreign vessels, especially those of Germany. Admiral Dewey asked Aguinaldo to give free passage through the insurgent lines to the family of Don Basilio Augustin Dewila, the Spanish Captain General.

AGUINALDO'S ANSWER.

Aguinaldo's quaintly phrased reply was as follows:

GOBIERNO DICTATORIAL
FILIPINAS
Kavite, 14th June, 1898.

Rear Admiral George Dewey, U. S. Navy.

Dear Sir: I would have great satisfaction in pleasing you what you ask. Manila some Spanish families resident in Pampanga specially the General Mr. B. Augustin's.

I must remember you that the said Province my forces have not taken yet, but only surrounded; reason of which I see the impossibility to may garantee the free pass that you ask.

Notwithstanding I give to my subordinates terminat orders that as soon as they get in their hands the said families, not only keep the habit consideration [illegible] tions, and also treat them as friends and carry them to Manila, as soon as the way will be safed from any risk, so as the families and their conveyers and the plan of operations would allow.

I am, Dear Sir,
Very respectfully,
E. AGUINALDO.

At a dinner given Admiral Dewey at the White House, President McKinley mentioned to him the newspaper statements about the difficulties in his relations with Vice Admiral von Diedrichs, who was in command of the German Asiatic squadron.

"There is no record of it at all on the files," said the President.

"No, Mr. President," answered Admiral Dewey.

"As I was on the spot and familiar with the situation from day to day, it seemed best that I look after it myself, at a time when you had worries enough of your own."

He devotes a chapter of his autobiography to the Von Diedrichs affair. It is headed "A Period of Anxiety," but its concluding sentence is reassuring. It is "Thus, as I explained to the President after the war was over, a difference of opinion about international law had been adjusted amicably, without adding to the sum of his worries."

Admiral Dewey's description of his surprise at the tremendous reception given him, on his return, by the American people, is interesting and convincing. His are not words of false modesty; it is undoubtedly true that he had not been aware of the way in which his victory had taken hold of the popular imagination.

And his embarrassment at finding overwhelming popularity is understandable. His statement of it is manly and appealing.

"I knew what to do," he writes, "in command of the Asiatic squadron, but being of flesh and blood and not a superman, it seemed impossible to live up to all that was expected of me as a returning hero. Had I died on the way across the Atlantic, there would have been an outpouring of subscriptions which would have promptly rebuilt the temporary arch in my honor in Madison Square in marble. If I were to feel later, when the 'triumph and shouting' had abated, that the people had misunderstood me, I knew that I had not misunderstood their thought in their exuberant pride over the way that the Asiatic squadron had conducted 'offensive operations' in the Philippine Islands."

Entire Town in Panama Is Being Moved To Make Room for Gatun Lake Waters

—Photograph Copyright, Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

COLON, Panama, Sept 20.—The entire town of Gorgona is being moved. Until very recently it was the largest in the canal zone. In anticipation of the raisng of the waters in Gatun lake it is being removed from its present location and moved slowly back. A short time will see the work completed.

Buildings are being torn down to make room for the approaching waters, and new ones will be re-erected out of the danger line. Railroad tracks will be taken up soon, work starting on this portion of the contract this week. When the Gatun lake is opened, which will be in a short time, the present site of the town will be covered to a depth of twenty feet.

Princess Indira a Feminist Restricts Woman's Sphere

PRINCESS INDIRA AND HER HUSBAND, MAHARAJA KUMAR JITENDRA HARDYAN, LEAVING REGISTRY OFFICE WHERE THEY WERE MARRIED.—Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—An ideal feminist is the Princess Indira, whose recent wedding was one of the sensations of London. She was married to the Mahrajah Kumar Jitendra Harayan of Cooch Bahar, and at the [illegible] it was said that the princess was a strong advocate of women's rights. If so, however, she has been converted, for no longer is she taking any part at all in any movement of the kind, and has, in fact, declared that a woman should be purely a woman and not a politician or attempted moulder of the world's destiny.

The princess is the prettiest of all Indian princesses, it is said. Shortly before her wedding she came to London [illegible] said at the time because she did not wish to be married. The Mahrajah followed and the wedding took place here. The first ceremony was at a registry office, the couple not being of Christian faith and the law prescribing only two forms of marriage, church and registry.

The real ceremony followed at [illegible] Buckingham Palace Hotel, where the princess and her helpmeet were again united with all the pomp of an Oriental ceremony.

Her father, the gashwar of Baroda, is declared displeased with her choice of a husband. In fact, many tales are told of the romantic marriage. It is known, however, that the princess declares she is happy, loves her husband, does not believe in suffrage, and expects to go back to India soon.

NEW BUSINESS OF "LOST AND FOUND"

Odd Pursuit of Man Who Was Inspired With a Strange Way to Earn Money

IN THE twilight of a mist-fogged evening a wretchedly clad, bedraggled man found a gold watch in a Chicago thoroughfare.

It was a sadly battered veteran, with many dents and scars. It was impaired of mechanism, with a use-thinned case from which a delicately fashioned monogram was all but worn away. Inside and out there was proof abundant to attest it a relic of a past generation; a treasured heirloom possibly, astray in the ruck of a city's streets.

Nevertheless, when the man had cleaned it of the gutter soil, it looked good to him. He was broke, dead broke. After a fruitless search of weeks for a job that always just failed of materializing, he was finally left minus the price of a ten-cent bed. More keenly to the point, he was hungry, very.

Surely there was enough pure gold in the old derelict to provide a few days food. However—and here is the turning point in this man's story—aside from being broke and hungry, the man also was honest.

Instead of pawning the watch or selling it to a dealer in old gold, he advertised it among the "Lost and Found." He left the watch as security with the first newspaper visited, and secured credit slips for the insertion of an advertisement in every other morning newspaper.

Before noon of the next day the man who, on his way to the repairer, had lost the revered heirloom of his grandfather, had met the finder. When he had read the figures on the crumpled yellow bill which the owner pressed into his hand the eyes of the jobless man grew lustrous and his lips went dry as he attempted to express his thanks. It represented wealth to him. It was the equivalent of labor such as he was fitted for.

Clothed in a new suit and clean linen and with his stomach fully appeased for the first time in weeks, his mental processes were cleared and [illegible] that after he was rested for a time, with new inspiration he finally conceived a clever idea. Should it work out as he dreamed of it on the park bench facing the lake he would never again have occasion to seek employment of any man.

In short, the instance related was the incentive that led the one-time job-hunter to engage in one of the oddest occupations known. He became a practical "beach-comber" around the busy sea of city life, a systematic, persistent, day-by-day hunter of articles of value lost on the streets.

In the early morning rush hours, at noon with the luncheon crowds, in the lamplit evening among the home-going throngs, and later when the streets are deserted and still, always with bowed head he walks slowly along, usually close to the curb, eyes intent upon the gutter. A day rarely passes without a "strike." At the edge of the crosswalks he pauses, with keen, trained eyes in careful search. There, strangely enough, with thousands passing every hour, he makes his richest finds, particularly in coins and bills. Pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters, half-dollars by the peck and bundles of bills in the aggregate, he has found during his years of street "beach-combing."

Whenever he finds anything of considerable value that may be identified, he advertised for the owner; still adhering to his original policy of honesty, depending on the claimant to offer him a reward which as a matter of business he accepts. Not infrequently his only reward is a smile a word of gratitude, and "thanks," and, now and then plain "thanks" without the trimmings.

The sum total of the rewards received, however, considerably exceeds the amount for which he could sell his "finds" to the dealer who buys his accumulation of unclaimed articles at the end of the week.

This professional "street-comber" during his years of hunting has found something of almost everything of value that could be lost in a city's thoroughfares—even to dogs and babies. Through the "Lost and Found" columns of the press the article is returned to the owner in every case where possible, babies without exception. If not to the owner, the babe goes to the foundling asylum via the police station.

When he picked up that first "find" in the ancient timepiece and had [illegible] practical and material proof of the remunerative side of the incident, he came to realize that he had found not only a good, paying occupation even though an unusually odd one, in the rest of his life, but that he had incidentally discovered a gold mine, as well. The most substantial testimonials to his success are to be found in various deeds to real estate, as well as a sizable bank account.

GOSSIP FROM SAN FRANCISCO WEEKLIES

[illegible] Savonarola Traditions

[illegible] of well bred consternation, a [illegible]ghtful anger pervaded the Century Club last week. One of the club traditions had been violated, a treasured convention had been set at naught. A Centurian happening had been announced to the world on the first page of a newspaper. The Centurians have a horror of publicity. They shun publicity as Doc Alked shuns the light-hiding bushel. They eschews interviews and purse their lips at reporters. Thank Heaven, they seem to say, our club is not like other women's clubs. The Francisca and the Town and Country stand on one side of it the Papyrus, the California, the Cap Bells et cetera stand on the other. [illegible] entirely for the diversion of an [illegible] with a "nose for news."

This is the day of cremation, as we read in the advertisements of the cemetery associations. But we don't incinerate the dead alone. The Bohemians cremate Care which won't stay in ashes, for the ceremony must be repeated every year. We cremate our garbage. Taking the cue, the zealots of the Century Club cremated what they regarded as literary garbage. They showed thereby that they have courage. When Savonarola burned what he regarded as literary garbage he was taken very seriously. We who live in a frivolous age cannot take cremation seriously as a literary corrective. So we are smiling good-naturedly at the Centurians. Mesdames Savonarola kindled our sense of humor when they set fire to Brieux and "Elementary Jane." The smoke of their burnt offering is tickling us, making us sneeze. One can't sneeze and be dignified.—Town Talk.

Literary Advertisement as a Result

[illegible] have advertised the books they fired. Their torch has lit the way to increased sales in the bookshops. Brieux hardly needed the stimulus. "Damaged Goods" has been banned so often that burning was supererogatory. But with "Elementary Jane" it was different. I asked a bookseller about "Elementary Jane." "Never heard of it," he confessed; "but I'll have to stock it. There are demands already." There you are. Curiosity has risen phoenix-like (pardon the bromide) from the ashes at the Century Club. One wonders about Jane wherein she was elementary. Was she elementary as the first reader is elementary, innocuous, easy to understand? It is not likely, else she had not been destroyed in flames. In the argot of the curb she must have been "hot stuff," even before they lit her. Jane must have been elementary as the boresome lady of the tiger skin was elementary, full of desire, insistent on satiation. I'll bet her morals were shocking, or worse than that, non-existent. No doubt she made a scorching fire. Brieux, I suppose, burned blue.

It is apparent that the Centurians use their club library. This alone makes the Century different from other clubs. In most clubs one goes to the library to write or to take forty winks. "I'd hate to die in the library of the Pacific-Union," said Lansing Mizner, "because my body would never be found." "The Bohemian Club," declared Jerome Landfield, "has the best uncut library in the West." It is different at the Century. They read the books there; at least they have read Brieux and "Elementary Jane." One wonders if the Century shelves are now chemically pure. Or do other books for burning abide there? Is Flaubert there? Let "Madame Bovary" crackle on the grid! Or De Maupassant? To the faggots with "Une Vie"! Or poor old Tolstoi? Apply the match to "Krentzer Sonata"! Of course "Three Weeks," "The Dangerous Age" and "The Woman Thou Gavest Me" are out of the question. They could never could get past the censor who guards the library door of the Century with a flaming brand.—Town Talk.

Quite Preposterous, Yes, Indeed

Young Leszynsky is breezy, affable, dresses to the minute and has the manner of a millionaire's son. But unfortunately he has a weakness for putting up at hostelries he cannot afford. Six months ago he paid a bill at the St. Francis with a bad check. He was arrested and convicted but released on probation. A few days ago he was arrested for defrauding another innkeeper. This time his indebtedness was only twenty-four dollars, but he couldn't pay. When he appeared in the dock in Judge Cabaniss' court one would never have guessed that his plight was desperate. Without a dollar to retain a lawyer, with imprisonment staring him in the face, young Leszynsky was just as breezy as ever. He even tried to tell the judge a funny story.

"Take care," cautioned His Honor; "[illegible] not in your sad position have told [illegible] funny stories and if I could I should [illegible] have sent them to jail for offending against humor."

[illegible] Detective Blake went on the [illegible] and told about the young man's [illegible] at the St. Francis.

"Then he was given probation," said [illegible] "Assistant Manager Keating of [illegible] Francis took pity on him and told [illegible] he might have a free room at [illegible] Hotel in which Mr. Keating is [illegible], until such time as he found [illegible] office."

"Why didn't you go to live at the Acme [illegible] of running up a hotel bill which [illegible] pay?" asked Judge Cabaniss.

REBEKAHS.

Golden Link Rebekah Lodge initiated the September campaign for the Odd Fellows' Orphanage by having on Wednesday night an open gathering of Odd Fellows, Rebekahs and friends of both.

A proclamation had been issued by the grand sire asking for the celebration of the sixty-second anniversary of the founding of the Rebekah branch of Odd Fellowship on the North American continent. The president of the Rebekah Assembly of California had supplemented the proclamation by asking that the occasion be also one during which additional funds might be donated to the I. O. O. F. orphans' home at Gilroy, Santa Clara county, California.

This was all explained by Mrs. Davis, the district deputy president, who presided on this occasion.

The lodge held a brief business meeting, then opened its doors to the public when a few numbers constituted an interesting and entertaining program.

Schuyler Colfax, afterward vice president of the United States, born March 23, 1823, in the city of New York, editor of the St. Joseph's Valley Register, was the author of the popular Rebekah degree.

After several failures to induce another organization to associate women with men in fraternal effort, he directed his energies, through pen and tongue to the I. O. O. F. for help in this direction.

Success attending his efforts, he had the pleasure of being appointed author of the degree which he wrote at South Bend, Indiana. It was adopted September 20, 1851, and became effective January 1, 1852, since which time Rebekah membership has reached 797,600 in the United States, Canada, Australia, Denmark, Germany, Netherlands, Sweden and Switzerland.

It was first introduced into California soon after its adoption, but the first lodge was not organized until June 30, 1870, in San Francisco, one member of Golden Link, Mrs. Marie Hamilton having been initiated into that lodge, California, No. 1, by F. P. Dann, afterward grand master of the Golden State. The first Rebekah lodge in the world was Bloomfield, No. 1, of Iowa.

Last Friday evening Sunset Rebekah Lodge No. 109 held its regular weekly session. Noble Grand Lillie E. Menges presided. Smith Bros. BOOK REVIEW

"THE BUSINESS OF LIFE," by Robert Chambers. A strong novel by this wonderful writer. It is a great plea for a wholesome, moral life, unspoiled by luxury, unpoisoned by excess and warning against low moral standards for men and women. Illustrated by Charles Dana Gibson.

"THE TASTE OF APPLES," by Jennette Lee. Net, $1.20. Many people have returned to revisit the homes of their ancestors, but no couple could be more charmingly original than the old New England shoemaker and his brisk and bustling wife who are the central figures in this story. A delightful story by the author of "Uncle William."

"A FOOL AND HIS MONEY," George Barr McCutcheon. Net, $1.30. In this latest novel by the creator of these immensely popular heroines there is again a castle gray and ancient and lofty, this time on the Danube. A sinewy young American, whom his uncle calls a fool because he has no money, sees the castle, likes it and buys it at once—hence follows an absorbing romance with a happy ending.

BOOK REVIEW

ONE of the most successful books of the year is unquestionably that of Gene Stratton Porter, who has given to the literary world, "Laddie A True Blue Story."

The advance sale on "Laddie" was about 200,000 copies, which eclipses the advance sale of Mrs. Porter's previous successful books, and it is understood makes one of the two or three, if not the very largest, advance sale in the history of American book publishing.

As has been said many times, "Laddie, A True Blue Story" is a story of American home life laid in Indiana a generation or so ago and deals with the type of simple, sturdy, God-fearing, home folks, who made the backbone of the nation, and to whom the strong moral fibre of the American people of today can be traced. From the apparent popularity of this book, it would seem to indicate that the American reading public is glad to have an answer to the style of problem novel, which has been multiplying at such a rate recently.

We hear also throughout the country that "Laddie Blue" is the latest color scheme. Whether or not this is the inevitable results of the enthusiasm with which Mrs. Gene Stratton-Porter's new book, "Laddie—A True Blue Story" has been greeted, is the establishment of a "Laddie blue." So firmly fixed in the minds of the public has become the charming color scheme with which the volume is gotten up that a number of department stores in various parts of the country have taken advantage of the fact, and have placed on display silks, dress good, ribbons, gloves, neckties, hosiery, etc., all in "Laddie blue," and so marked in the store advertising and window displays. Just what results this bit of enterprise has brought, the managers of the stores that tried it refuse to say, but the fact remains that each day brings forth some new article done up and labeled "Laddie blue."

Doubtless the "Laddie blue" craze is the direct result of the enterprise shown by the book dealers all over the country in making large window displays of the volume with hand-colored reproductions of the illustrations and other artistic decorations, such as birds, flowers, etc., all done in the charming color scheme in which the book is gotten up.

Of course all this would have been impossible were it not for the widespread popularity of Mrs. Porter's books and the well nigh insatiable demand for her latest one.

Mrs. Porter has always been hailed as an interpreter of nature's most beautiful secrets and all that is good and noble in mankind. When "Laddie—A True Blue Story" was announced as a book of American home life, laid close to the heart of nature, the demand spoke eloquently of the public regard for Mrs. Porter's works.

BINDLOSS' VIRILE STORY.

Books from the Frederick A. Stokes Company are always welcome—they strike a strong, forceful, vital note in literature. Their books of the northwest are especially fine and a writer of them, Harold Bindloss, is rapidly winning for himself a high place in the literary world. His latest book, "Prescott of Saskatchewan," is a specially strong piece of literary work.

In this virile story of the last frontier, Bindloss gives us a plot of more strength and originality than in his previous works, against the background of the great outdoors, described with his usual mastery.

To save the reputation of a scrapegrace friend, Jack Prescott impersonates Cyrip Jernyngham to the latter's visitors. Jernyngham disappears and the evidence points strongly to murder, and to Prescott as his murderer. Watched by the police and confronted by the family of the missing man, Jack's only chance to clear himself lies in producing his supposed victim. He therefore eludes those watching him and makes an adventurous journey to the northern wilderness, following the trail from one mountain range to another—now in a little railroad camp, now in a miner's tent high up on the snow peaks, now in a belt of timber that stretches down to the creek of gold. The courage and faith of a beautiful girl hearten him on his long search. The whole is a well-knit and absorbing tale.

BIG THINGS OF YEAR.

The Paul Elder Company has done one of the really big things of the year, in a literary way in publishing "The Social Rubyaiyat of a Bud." It is written by Mrs. Ambrose Madison Willis and is a satire, in a delicate, sparkling manner, of the Social Institution. In a very clever way the author shows behind the scenes in Vanity Fair with Cupid out of work, while the up-to-date Bud is mistress of her own heart which she unlocks at will—but only with a golden key. Imbued with the author's spirit of satire, the book has been done in purple and gold on luxurious double-leafed duplex paper, with clever illustrations and decorations by Elsie A. Harrison, of London, England. From the full-length presentation upon the cover of the Bud, luxuriously wrapper in cloth of gold, the spirit is maintained throughout the volume.

Behind the Aegis of parody and satire the author handles the issues of a soul. The book might thus be epitomized:

Heroine—A Bud.

Scene—The Social Stage.

Denouement—A Sale.

The Bud would "live and love." Thereby hangs the tale, for the impecunious youth "has looked things, for which he didn't have the price" and left her "heart considerably the worse." In the sinking hour of pessimism, she reviews Vanity Fair—its personnel, its doings, it's point of view. The disillusion is boldly and badly disclosed. Her soul, struggling to be heard, warns her that "the whole show isn't worth a cent." But the lure of luxury is stronger, and she affirms that the social "scheme of Fate" is hers, that she is "in it" and "of it," and although her unsatisfied soul would "sow above it," Love is not strong enough to "rob her of her birthright," which she enters into by accepting the "rich young sinner," avowing in defense that "'tis but existence settling its account on basis of a million-dollar stake." The girl's bold truthfulness of her recoil from marriage to a poor man—her frank justification of her course, her naive lack of any sense of moral responsibility for the barter of herself, her hopeless acknowledgement that she is "but a marionette played by Fate," and through it all the ring of the smothered cry of her Soul for the love she "can't afford," furnish strong matter for the quatrains. Beneath the humor of her terse and spirited vernacular, their quick thrust of satire, is revealed a pathos that lends somewhat of tragedy, and although the author disclaims any intention of preaching, a spirit subtly apologetic hedges the girl with sympathy rather than condemnation, and suggests that it is the author's intention that those who take up the book to be amused may put it down to think.

Mrs. Ambrose Madison Willis is a San Francisco. She is of Cavalier and New England ancestry. Her gift of verse is doubtless ancestral and inherited from the family of the poet William Cullen Bryant, to which her paternal grandmother was related.

A book like this makes one specially proud of the Paul Elder Company, and makes one also send good wishes for the financial success of the experiment. The literary and artistic success is already assured.

"WAY OF AMBITION."

"The Way of Ambition" by Robert Hichens is also one of the new books from the press of the Frederick A. Stokes Company. Ever since Mr. Hichens wrote "The Garden of Allah" he has been the center of interest in the literary world. This new story represents something finer, more pleasing and more idealistic than anything Mr. Hichens has previously done. A book that will not only satisfy the large audience which Mr. Hichens already has, but will attract many new readers to his work.

An ambitious and charming girl of social position in England marries a musical genius who is modest and dislikes exploitation. Little by little, as the wife tries to shape the husband's career, it becomes apparent that the path of ambition for him is far from his true course. For a time she succeeds in arousing to a white heat in him the fever of competition and the desire for success. The crisis arrives in a dramatic situation in America, and the solution is reached in the "Garden of Allah" country.

The novel is notable for the combination of Mr. Hichens' superb character-drawing with a strong situation and a happy ending, for a deeply idealistic conception, and for its impressions of New York city, where much of the action is laid.

The most interesting part of the book is, of course, that which takes us to Egypt, a country which Hichens has made his own. The desert lives far as under [illegible] California we have deserts of our own—we love them—and of all peoples, we can perhaps best appreciate Hichens' colorful descriptions of the great far-reaching horizons. There is a subtle analysis in the book, are found in the earlier work of Hichens. It shows a more mature mind, a surer touch, and a wider world experience.

Mr. Hichens is writing books which will live in the future, and "The Way of Ambition" carries such intensely human problems that it is one of the leading books of the hour.

"VIRGINIA" STORM CENTER.

"Virginia" is the storm center of much spirited discussion—not so much because it is one of the attractive and well written new books of the year, but because it reflects truly the spirit of the woman movement of the century. It is history of the highest kind, that Miss Glasgow has reflected in her new book "Virginia."

Ever since the publication of "Virginia," Ellen Glasgow's new novel, the book has been hailed by the public and by the critics alike as a remarkable statement of one phase of the woman movement. In the somewhat spirited controversy over the book which has been waging in the columns of the New York Times Book Review, some of the writers have pointed out that Virginia's husband was also indicative of a new conscience in man, and that the book set a milestone in human progress. This is dramatically expressed by Ellis Meredith, a western author and lecturer, who in a recent letter said of "Virginia":

* * * * For there is a new man as well as a new woman, and this Oliver belongs to the type; his instincts are clean and wholesome, and he tried his best to be true to Virginia, but nowhere is it written that man can live by molasses alone. But being a better man than those who preceded him, Oliver was not content to live a lie and fill out the emptiness of his married life by an alliance outside the pale, in the good (?) old-fashioned way of his grandsires. This story deals with the long crucifixion of a woman's feelings, in which the woman herself drives the nails and provides the drink of gall, but it is no less the story of the long, torturing starvation of a man who asks for bread, the plain, wholesome bread of human sympathy and understanding, and instead is given a perpetual diet of peppermint drops.

* * * * There are thousands of men who will reach out a sympathetic hand to the subordinated. Oliver, for they too, have lived their lives with women whose world was bounded by the kitchen, the nursery and the front door."

WORK OF ATTRACTIVENESS.

Some of the most interesting books of the season are coming from the press of the Century H. Doran Company of New York. Love of the book, "Because of Jane" and "Rue and Roses," are of special charm. In publishing Angela Langer's story, "Rue and Roses" they have given to the world a work of strange attractiveness. Rarely have simplicity and guest strength been so finely wedded in a book. Fraulein Langer uses words sparingly. Some people may be deceived into thinking that the style is bad, so simply, so unaffectedly is the story told. But the fascination of it grows. You are gripped by the strength of commonplaces. The secret of it is that the story is genuine, essentially human. Anna, the heroine, is no commonplace German girl, though her surroundings are commonplace. "Rue and Roses" is a story of sentiment and sadness: it tells of misfortune after misfortune; yet there is a fine courage in the heroine; she never loses her faith in humanity and always sees the roses among the rue. This is a beautiful, delicate piece of work. There is unusual power and insight in the skill with which this woman's character is depicted. It is all very simple, and in a way beautiful, and the astute reader will not miss the tragedy of it. It is the tragedy of many women with poetic souls, who would love if there were the right men to love. It is the life-story of a woman, written with a feeling for style and a power of expression which are remarkable. "Rue and Roses" is sure to sweep the reading public in the way "Marie Claire" did.

AS FOR AUNTIE.

"Auntie," said six-year-old Jane desperately, "do get married!" Jane's remark sounds as though "Auntie" was a hopeless old maid. But she wasn't—"Auntie" was what is commonly known as "a peach." But Jane worried about the unmarriedness and got busy. Jane's diplomacy, as recounted in "Because of Jane," the new novel by J. E. Buckbee, forms one of the jolliest, most lovable stories ever written. It's so full of sunny entanglements and knowledge of human nature that each person who reads "Because of Jane" is sure to pass it on to a friend. The man who falls in love with Auntie Beatrice is the sort of man who combines business ability with a whimsical love for children. Little Jane says of him that he's "nearly as funny as the gardener's boy who used to make faces at her orange-peel teeth." And such praise is praise indeed. "Because of Jane" is a delightful romance, chock-full of laughter and warm-hearted. It's a book that, once read, you will keep in your heart forever.

SPIRIT OF PINE WOODS.

Shirley Carson, into whose latest novel, "The Motto of Mrs. MacLane," was written so much of the spirit of the Wisconsin pine woods, makes her home in the country described in that cheerful story. She said:

"My garden slopes to the banks of the Fox river, where comparatively a few years ago Indian canoes paddled to and fro. Indian [illegible] from fear of the Sioux [illegible] fur traders. I am most fond of poppies—they are a specialty of mine. I'm intensely interested in everything Luther Burbank does. I feel he has found solutions for the up-bringing of children as well as the culture of flowers. I believe that a garden rests one's nerves as nothing else. Nature, however, does not suggest to me the ideas for my work—I get those from people. I always think of character-study first, incident second.

American Accent the Mode
Oxford Drawl Has Passed

MRS. ASQUITH, WHO HAS BECOME AN ADEPT IN THE USE OF GOOD AMERICAN SLANG.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The American accent is "The mode" in London society now.

An accent of some kind has always been the vogue and for a time the Oxford drawl ruled, then the Cockney twang. Americans in this country were formerly ridiculed for their accent; now they find on the contrary, they are pounced upon and their over-inflection is studied and copied.

The growing number of American peeress is partly responsible, no doubt, for the new fashion, which has been largely popularized by lady Diana Manners, who believes in being a minute or two ahead of every one else. It was she and her sisters who first introduced the fashion of talking in broad cockney, and she has long since renounced all claim to her childhood nickname, "Lady Perfect Manners."

Mrs. Asquith is quite an adept in American slang, as are also the Earl of Rosslyn, Lord Fairfax and the Duchess of Westminster.

Altogether apart from many questions of fashion, many members of the peerage have a natural accent of which they are often proud.

The Earl of Curzon cultivates marked north country accent; Lord Jersey speaks in broad nortumber, most all the Scotch and Irish peers carry a trace of their native brogue; th ancaster family all speak with a decided cockney intonation, except, of course, the present countess, who was Miss Breese, but even they are inclining to the American mode of speech.

B'NAI B'RITH PLAY BALL GAME

By defeating the ball team of the committee of fifty, composed of members of the San Francisco lodges. Independent order B'nai B'rith, in an exciting and well played game last Sunday, at East Shore Park by a score of four to two, the team of Oakland Lodge clearly demonstrated that they are the "Cracker Jacks" of the B. B. League and are the winners of a beautiful Silver Loving Cup.

Oakland Lodge team has three annual victories to its credit and each year has celebrated the occasion by a "Big Time."

On next Tuesday, Sept. 23d, a reception will be tendered the ball team at the B. B. Headquarters, 1610 San Pablo avenue, at which time the cup will be presented to them. A large delegation from San Francisco will be on hand and under the auspices of the officers a watermelon feed will be given and a large class of candidates will be initiated. "Spike" Van Mourik, formerly a pitcher for the Tribune team, pitched a wonderful game, allowing the San Francisco team only three hits and walking two men.

When tired of people, I always go to flowers."

Shirley Carson is off on a camping trip, of which she writes:

"I like civilized camping. Always go with a tent and sleep on hay. Civilized camping includes [illegible] and cook in an oven made of boulders. Swing the billy over the camp fire. Get up at dawn and go shooting in the ice-marshes—when it's ducks. Love the wild, and all kinds of travel."

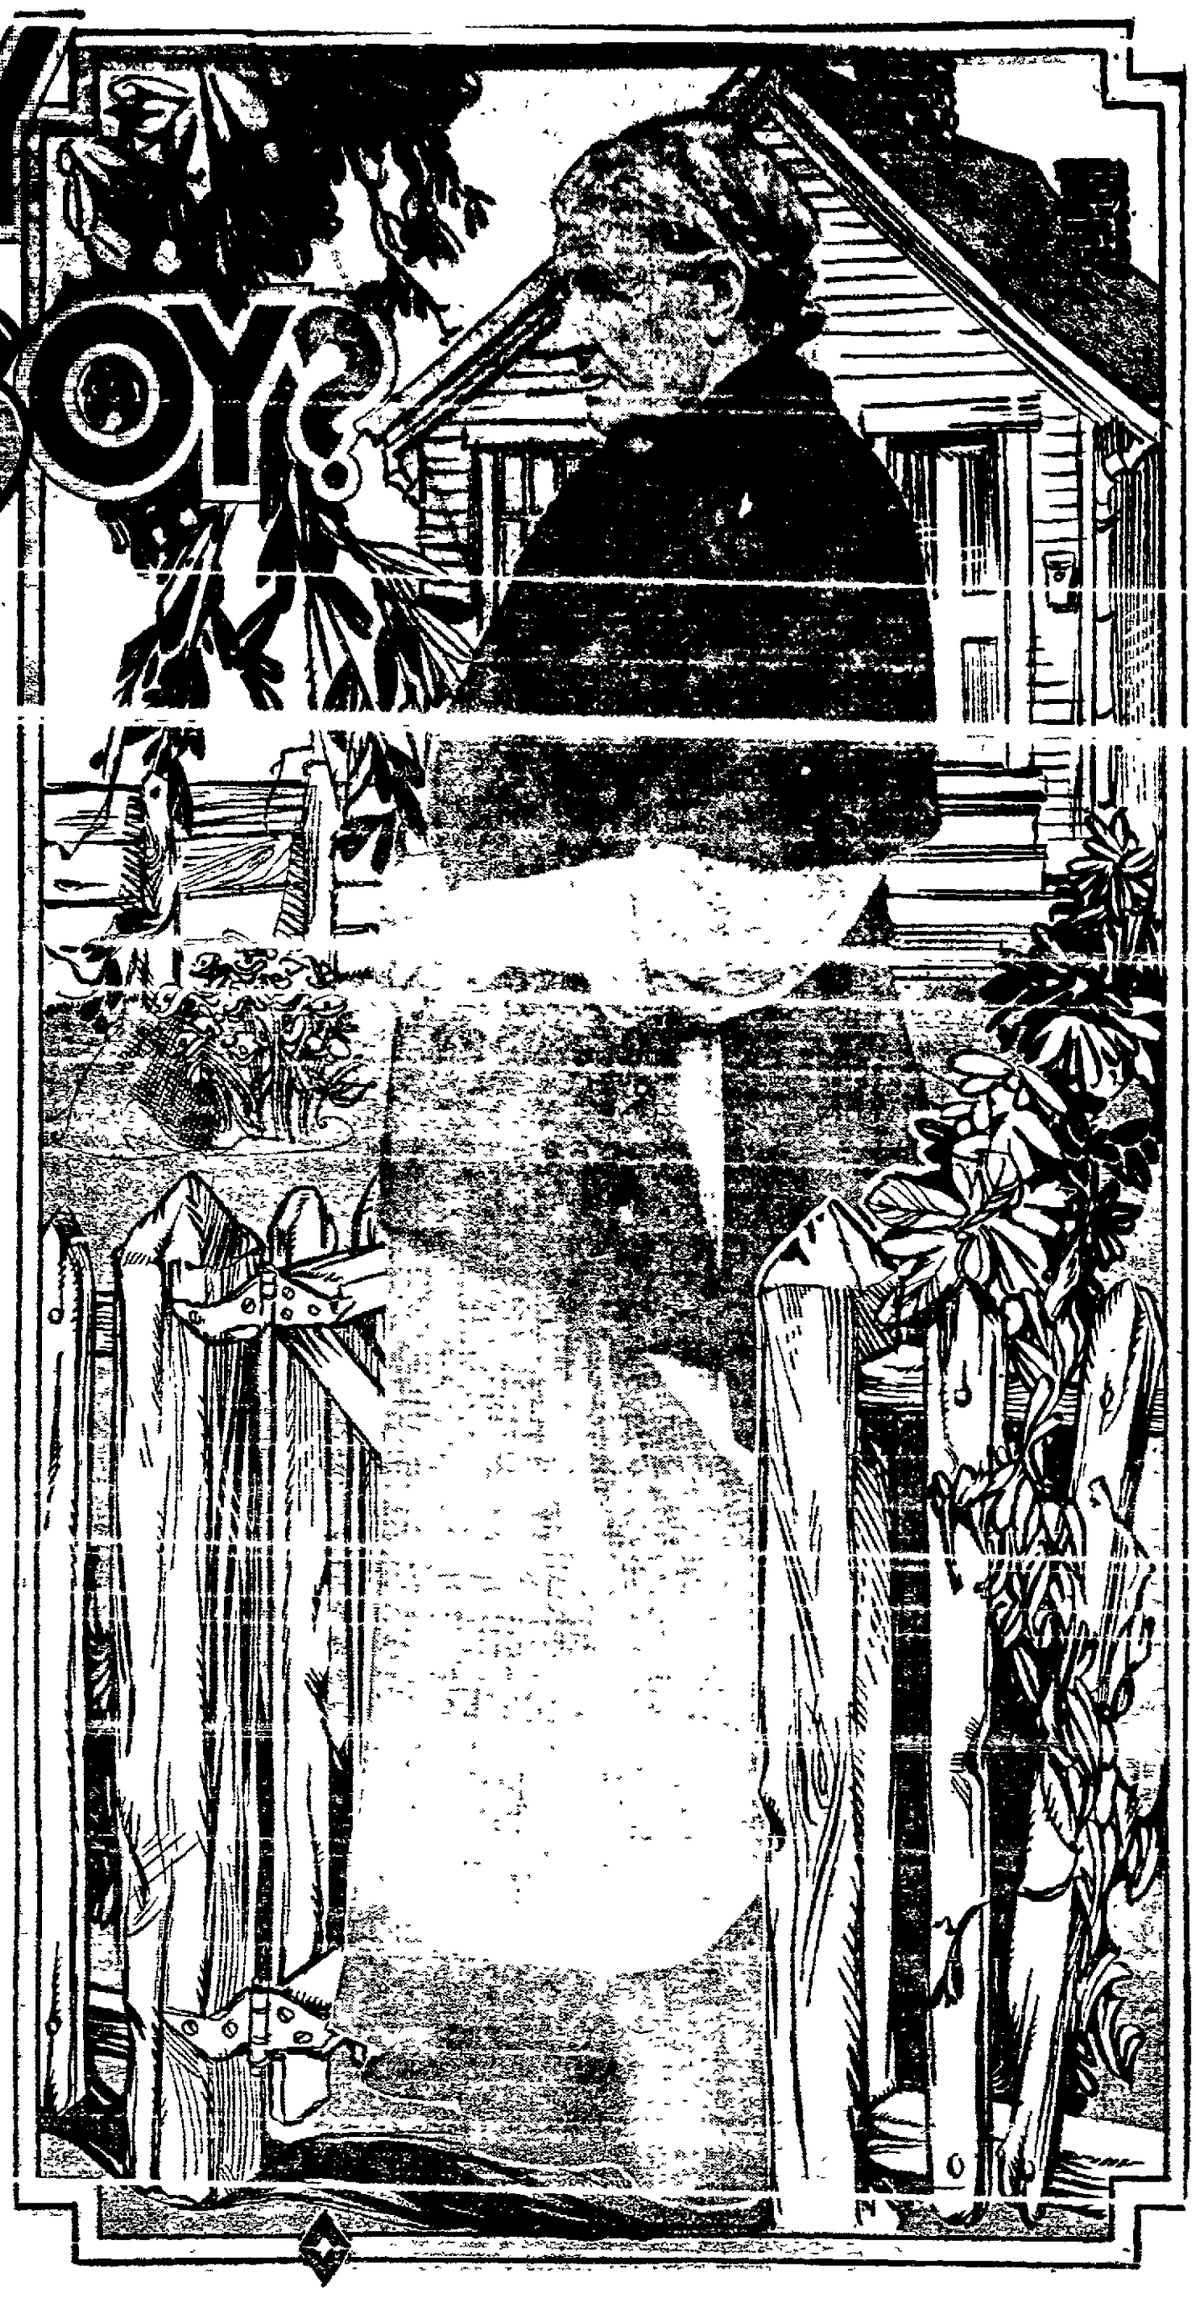
WHERE IS MY WANDERING BOY?



The Youth Who Leave Chicago to Seek Their Fortunes, But Never Return, Give the City a Gray Haired Army of Forsaken Mothers.

MEN and boys of Chicago, scattered throughout the length and breadth of this great land, greetings to you from your mothers!

Though you have forsaken them, your mothers have not forgotten you. They are thinking of you the first thing in the morning, and when sleep seals their eyes at night you, your faces your looks and smiles, are the last thing snuffed out from their waking thoughts. But the image of you is not snuffed out for long. It returns a little later. Your mothers dream of you.

Hundreds—possibly a thousand—women in Chicago who have borne and raised children, who have deprived themselves of comforts and necessities and have sacrificed years of their lives to give their sons a good bringing up, are now closing their earthly careers alone. They have no one to look out for them, to see that they are not suffering want and privations. When they are sick they have no one to minister to them. When they die there will be none of their blood relatives present at the deathbed to close their eyes.

The United Charities help support a good many of these Chicago mothers whom their sons have forsaken. Many others eke out an existence the best way they can. None of them wants to go to the poorhouse.

"Where is my wandering boy tonight?" To the average person these words bring up a picture of a mother on the plains of the Dakotas, sitting alone in a farmhouse or in a little hut in a village and thinking of her son who has gone out into the world—which means to Chicago—to make his way, a future for himself, there.

While this picture is true there is another side to it. It is the side of the deserted Chicago mother.

Every train that comes into Chicago brings some country boy who comes to seek work and opportunities in the great city. Chicago is considered, and with justice, the haven of the country boy. No young man with purpose fails to get some kind of a foothold.

They Promised to Write.

Every train brings a boy from the country to Chicago. But every tenth or fifteenth train takes a Chicago boy out of the city. There are thousands of Chicago born and bred boys who, when they become 19 or 20, begin to feel the city is no place for them. They bid their families good-by and go out in search of opportunities and fortunes in smaller towns in far away states.

Of course all of these boys promise to write home. And most of them do write. They write as soon as they settle down more or less, as soon as they strike a job. After a few years they come back to visit their parents and tell them of their success. But there is a small per cent among them who disappear, soon after they leave Chicago, as if they had dropped into water. Small as this per cent is, it is large enough to give this city a gray haired army of forsaken women, a host of broken down, deserted old mothers.

These mothers can be seen daily coming to the various branch offices of the United Charities and asking the agents there to help them to locate their sons. These heartbroken mothers write and come in person to the newspapers and try to get their help. Sometimes they bring a picture of the missing son with them. Always they bring a pathetic story of want and helplessness and of a painful longing to see their lost child before they die.

The United Charities do whatever they can for these old women. They write to charity organizations in those cities where the mother suspects her son might be in the hope that the boy might thus be located. More often, however, the mothers have no idea where their sons might be, and there is no way of connecting up with the trail of the missing boy.

Why Boys Leave Home.

What causes the Chicago boy to leave this city and go in search of his fortune elsewhere? The reasons are many and varied.

There is a class of boys who leave home because of some childish prank which got them into trouble with the authorities. They were arrested, taken to court, sent to a reformatory for a few years. When they come out they feel ashamed of their neighbors, ashamed of the whole world. They have no nerve to try to resume their former position in the society of their immediate friends and acquaintances. Sometimes this position cannot be resumed easily. They are rebuffed by their former schoolmates and playfellows. They feel, and often with justice, that all avenues leading towards a successful and useful life have been shut to them. So they decide to leave the city to start life over again in a place where no one knows them, where prejudice because of their past will not mar their plans and hamper their progress.

Sometimes it is the hard working boy who runs away from home. The parents of such a boy are poor. He is put to work when he is 14 and his earnings are taken away from him to help keep up the home. Life is dull for such a boy. If he had a little change he could go out and find recreation in an ice cream parlor or in a moving picture show. But his parents allow him no pocket money or extremely little. He becomes disgusted with life. He feels that he is not getting a square deal. Too much work and no play embitter him. So he skips out of the house and lets his mother weep her eyes out.

Ambition and an imaginative mind are back of the disappearance of another class of Chicago young men. Nature, too, seems to have a hand in this conspiracy, for it is in the spring that young men of this class take leave of their mothers. In the winter months they work at their trades, receive $10 or $12 a week, and are satisfied. When spring comes this sort of a boy becomes restless. He takes a stroll along the parks and boulevards. He sees the strings of automobiles with the happy, smiling faces in them. From the papers and other sources he gathers how the owners of these cars, the possessors of beautiful and elegant homes and of riches, have at one time been as poor as himself. He decides to make a dash for the good things of the earth. The only way to obtain these good things, in the eyes of such a boy, is to leave the city and go west, where land is still plentiful, where competition is less keen and he leaves.

The too thorough knowledge of the city, it is said, is responsible for so many boys and men leaving Chicago to look for their fortunes in small towns. The city boy, who has gone to work in a factory where a thousand men are employed and where business is done in millions monthly, is awed by the vast wealth about him. He thinks there is no chance for the man of small or no means to work up alongside such giant concerns.

The Mother of Only One.

Of the thousands of mothers in this city whose sons have left Chicago to seek their fortune elsewhere and who have not written home in years, many have other children. They stay with them. And while their anguish for their long lost sons is keen and embitters their old age, the loss is partly mitigated by the presence of other children and grandchildren.

But there are about a thousand women in this city, according to the United Charities, whose missing sons are the only children they ever had. The lot of these women is a thousand times worse than that of the woman who has never married, who never knew of family life, who never had children. Their loneliness is immeasurably greater. There is disappointment and bitterness in their hearts. They are outraged that their sons, to whom they have given the best of their lives, should have forgotten them to the extent of never writing a line to them. But with this feeling of outrage goes also another feeling. A mother will never condemn her child entirely. They fear the worst. Their sons must either be sick or dead, they think, else it does not seem possible that they could have been so heartless as to forget their old mothers.

A grewsome picture of such a forsaken mother was found on the outskirts of Chicago.

Fifteen years ago a 20 year old boy bade his mother and a sister good-by and went out west. He promised to write. As soon as he settled, he said, he would send for his mother and sister. He was sick of Chicago, he said. He wanted the west, the country. He wrote a half dozen letters from the road in a period of two months. The last one came from Oklahoma. He was working his way towards Nevada. He wanted to get into a mining district. That was the last heard from the boy for fifteen years.

Still Watching at the Gate.

After a few years the woman's daughter married. And soon afterward the girl's husband lost his job in this city and moved into a neighboring state. The girl wanted her mother to come with them. But the old woman would not listen to any suggestion of leaving Chicago. She owned the little house she lived in. Having no rent to pay, she decided to take in sewing and earn her living that way. To the entreaties of her daughter that she sell the house and go with her, as she would be lonely in the city, the woman replied that by going away from her home she would lose her son forever. The house, if sold, would be razed. An apartment building would go up in its place. When her son came back eventually, as she hoped he would, he would not find a sign of the old place and would never know how to find his mother.

For twelve years now the woman has been keeping vigil alone in the old house, waiting for her son to come back. Her eyes gave out five years ago. She cannot sew. So she is earning her living washing.

Every morning at 8 o'clock the woman becomes restless. At 8:15 the postman usually passes by. When she hears his whistle from afar she goes out into the yard, stands at the old gate, and waits. At first the mailman used to stop and chat with the woman a moment. He would console her—tell her that perhaps with the next mail, in the afternoon, or the next day she would get a letter. Then another mailman was given this route. This man did not know the woman and her story. To him she was nothing but an eccentric person who had a mania for watching the mailman pass and following him with her eyes.

Fifteen years have now elapsed since this woman's boy has written to her. At night she weeps for him. She has long since given him up as dead in some mine accident or something. But at 8:15 o'clock in the morning she takes her post at the gate and follows the mailman with sad eyes until he disappears in the next block.

There are hundreds of such old women who spurn all suggestion that they go to the county farm. Back of this unwillingness is the hidden hope that if they stay in the neighborhood where they once lived they will still get back their sons, who, they feel, will come back some day.

The problem of the deserted and forsaken mother is not merely an economic one, according to social workers. It is not merely because these women have no one to take care of them in an old age that they are miserable. It is mother love that kills them by degrees. The woman who has raised children and then seen them go away from her and cut off communication with her feels her life has been a failure. She considers herself an outcast, cursed and unworthy, else why should such an affliction be visited upon her? Why should her children, who were and must remain everything to her until her last breath on earth, be cut off from her so that she does not even know whether they are living or dead?

"The woman," said a charity worker, "whose son has died can console herself in time. But for the mother whose son has deserted her there is no consolation. The last years of her existence are a hell on earth."

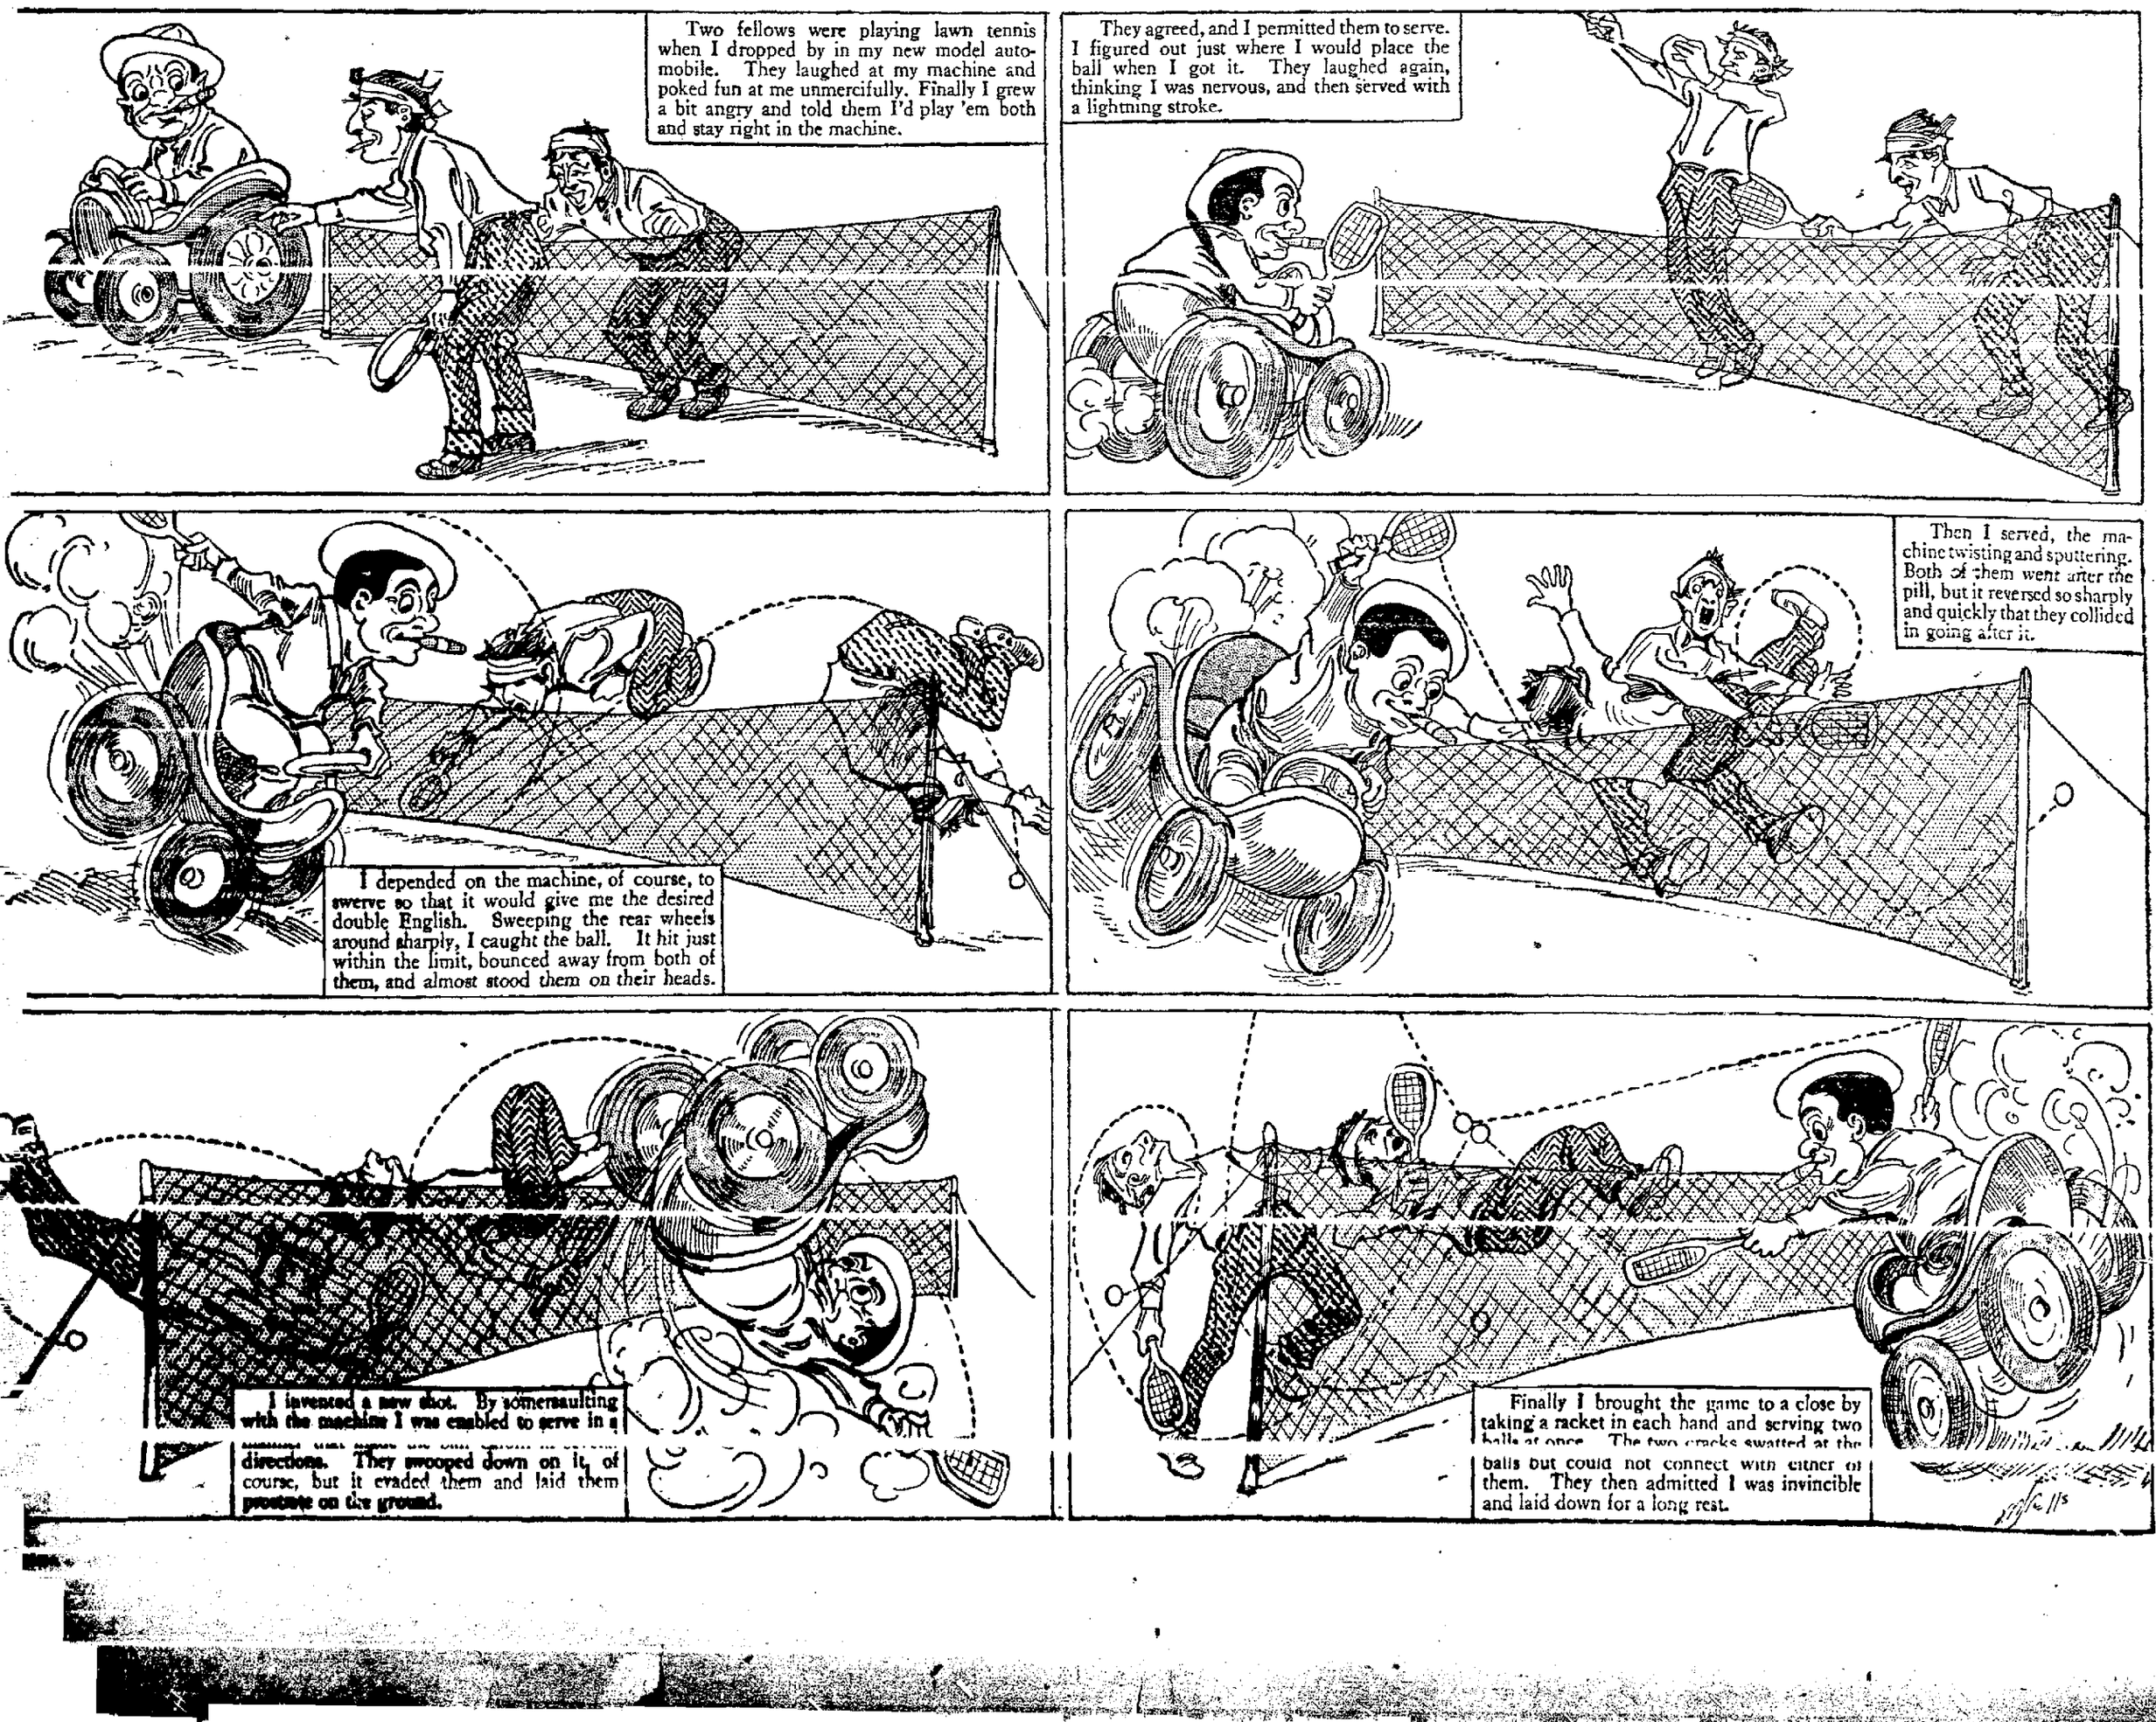
OLD OPIE DILLDOCK'S STORIES.



Two fellows were playing lawn tennis when I dropped by in my new model automobile. They laughed at my machine and poked fun at me unmercifully. Finally I grew a bit angry and told them I'd play 'em both and stay right in the machine.
They agreed, and I permitted them to serve. I figured out just where I would place the ball when I got it. They laughed again, thinking I was nervous, and then served with a lightning stroke.
I depended on the machine, of course, to swerve so that it would give me the desired double English. Sweeping the rear wheels around sharply, I caught the ball. It hit just within the limit, bounced away from both of them, and almost stood them on their heads.
Then I served, the machine twisting and sputtering. Both of them went after the pill, but it reversed so sharply and quickly that they collided in going after it.
I invented a new shot. By somersaulting with the machine I was enabled to serve in a [illegible] directions. They swooped down on it, of course, but it evaded them and laid them prostrate on the ground.
Finally I brought the game to a close by taking a racket in each hand and serving two balls at once. The two cracks swatted at the balls but could not connect with either of them. They then admitted I was invincible and laid down for a long rest.

ART BUNCO DEALS ARE EXPOSED

Monumental Swindle of Rich Disclosed in Court

De Luxe Books Are One Source of Profit to Operators

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—The big profits made in the sale of green goods to farmers and 'de luxe' books and 'art' to millionaires are arrived at in about the same way. This is shown by contracts yielded up by the "trunk of the inner secrets" in the Tomlinson-Humes Company bankruptcy proceedings.

By skillful appear at the same time to the "artistic tastes" and itching pockets of millionaires, the sellers of "de luxe" books and "art" were able to tie their customers up into a partnership through the form of a contract by which he was to return the real gems of the collection, but still make a profit through the sale to some one not gifted with such keen perception of the culls and spurious works in the collection. The farmers who buy green goods also expect to reap a large profit at the expense of their "rube" brethren.

REVELATIONS EXPECTED.

The enormous profits yielded to the men conducting this endless chain of "art" and "de luxe" book sales will be revealed in case the investigators delve deeper into the wonderful trunk.

A set of books or a picture was sold again and again, the price increasing with each sale and some of the men brought in on this endless chain of sales never even saw the books or paintings from which they took or were supposed to take profit.

DEAL IS WINDFALL.

One of the first big deals of the Tomlinson-Humes confederation in the sale of paintings, marbles and bronzes came almost as a windfall, and after its big profits the "de luxe" book sales had little appeal except when large sums were involved.

There was a touch of romance in this first deal, and the manner in which it was put through throws the clearest light that has yet been turned on in the industry of bringing up millionaires to appreciation of art and literature.

CALHOUN BUYER.

Some sixty years ago a scion of the famous Calhoun family in Alabama, whose tastes ran to art, married a daughter of the Meredith family. There was art in the Calhoun home and art in the Meredith home, of which the bride of Calhoun was the chatelaine, and on their bridal trip to Paris Young Calhoun added a number of works to the joint collection.

Then came the war and the ruin of the fortunes of the houses of Calhoun and

This District Receives $246,567 for Its Schools

Big Increase Is Shown in Number of High Institutions

Alameda county's elementary schools will get $222,905 from the State, according to the apportionments made yesterday by State Superintendent Edward Hyatt. The high schools of the county will get $23,662.

These apportionments are made on the basis of students in attendance in the schools, and are a portion of the State sum of nearly three millions apportioned throughout the State. The remainder of the school funds are raised by county taxation.

This is the first semi-annual apportionment for the current school year, of which $2,659,750 will be distributed among the fifty-eight counties of the State for the primary and grammar schools.

HIGH SCHOOL FUNDS.

The apportionment for the high schools amounts to $295,090. California now has 246 high schools, which is seventeen more than a year ago. California has high schools in sixty-six of fifty-eight counties. The apportionment follows:

SCHMIDT IS CRIMINAL OF AGE

Girls Disappeared in All Cities Where He Had Pastorates.

Police Find Threads of His Life Story in Many Climes.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Since the apprehension of 'Rev.' Hans Schmidt as the murderer of Miss Aumuller, and his confession, not a day has failed to add some details of the man's strange life story. It seems to the police that the whole world is interested. A thread has been picked up here and there, this tangle has been unraveled and from the warp and woof the narrative of his career in crime has been woven.

The police and the court authorities now realize that they have to deal with one of the arch criminals of the age. Inspector Faurot is not alone in believing that time will brand this as the world's most celebrated murder case. As the inspector says, "Rev." Hans Schmidt has been shown to be one of the brainiest criminals in any land.

MADE ONE MISTAKE.

If this man had not made one little mistake and bought a pillow different from any other pillows Inspector Faurot declares that Schmidt would have developed into a master, plotting for a band of smaller criminals around him, launching out and abandoning half-way criminality to make himself a factor in the big crimes of the world.

CHAPTER I.

An aged gray-haired woman, sitting by the fire in her little home in Aschaffenburg, Germany, two weeks ago, was handed a photograph by the mailman and the picture proved to be that of her long absent Johannes Schmidt in America. On the back of the card was the sentence in German, "Auf ein Frohes Wiederzehn"—(to our happy meeting place"). On a postcard that came two days later was the encouraging promise

"I rejoice that I may soon with you."

Tears of joy came into the old frau's eyes as she told the news of her son and his plan to return to her neighbors and to her husband, Heinrich Schmidt, who is 65 years old, one year older than Frau Schmidt.

Yet "Rev." Hans Schmidt, when he sent the likeness and the message, was undoubtedly already planning the cruel murder of Anna Aumuller, the comely young girl he said he loved. He had looked at flats and stolen a death certificate, had a copy made of it by photography, and had obtained in some way blank death certificates.

CHAPTER II.

Frau Schmidt sat gazing into the flames in the grate and thought of the youth of her boy Johannes. Time and again in those days he had brought tears to her eyes. At Mainze seminary his pranks had scandalized her. He had even on one occasion sat in a bathtub naked, playing a guitar, while other students and the learned teachers looked aghast through the open door.

At Munich again, where he was sent for further schooling, his love affairs with women of questionable character became a public scandal and led to his disgrace. Nevertheless he was ordained and sent to officiate at St. Elizabeth's church. He abandoned the altar in a solemn part of the services at Gonzenheim and ran crying through the aisles and later disappeared from the town after an affair. Then he was involved in forgery and dismissed.

COUSIN HIS COMPANION.

A close companion of Johnnes Schmidt in these youthful days of revelry and affairs with women was a cousin, Adolph Mueller, none other than the dentist and associate of Schmidt here in New York, under arrest and booked by the police as Dr. Ernest Muret.

Mueller fled to England and Schmidt fled to America. Constantly they kept in touch, but secretly of necessity.

Mueller became first Dr. Estein and in that guise was employed to teach languages in the Hugo language institute in London. He padded his accounts and was discharged, immediately afterward launching out in another and poorer quarter of the city as "Dr. Ernst," teaching a fair knowledge of a foreign tongue in one month. Next he became a surgeon, Dr. Muret, and was an organizer of a medical aid society that provided families with medical attendance and medicine for three pence weekly. The Medical Defense Union caused the arrest of the bogus doctor and Muret dropped out of sight, while Scotland held warrants for white slavery, illegal operations, attacking a young girl and fraudulently posing as a physician.

CHAPTER III.

In Louisville, Ky., in 1909, a young man appeared in clerical garb and fatroduced himself as Rev. Hans Schmidt to the pastors of St. John's [illegible] place himself, but to his new friends the young pastor showed what purported to be missionary letters from Munich, proving himself a minister. That year the body of Alma Kellner, 8 years old, dismembered and cut into twenty-five pieces, was found in an old cellar under the school building of St. John's church. About that time Joseph Wendling, a Frenchman,

60TH STATE FAIR BROUGHT TO CLOSE

San Francisco Day Big Success, Thousands in Attendance.

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 20.—San Francisco and Panama-Pacific Exposition Day" wound up the Sixtieth California State Fair, the most successful in the history of the state. It is estimated tonight that 120,000 people have passed through the gates in the eight-day run.

The carnival spirit was abroad tonight and the fair of 1913 went out in a blaze of merriment and festival joy. By midnight the crowds were gone, scattered to the four corners of the state, and exhibitors were tearing down the booths and emptying the stalls in which California's greatness of soil and climate had found expression.

THOUSANDS ATTEND.

A special train brought an excursion of several hundred from San Francisco to the final day. President Charles C. Moore and a dozen other exposition officials were present throughout the day. On the track, a Pacific coast pacing record was broken in a magnificent race that added enthusiasm to the events.

With President Moore, representing the exposition were R. B. Hale, vice-president; Rudolph J. Toussig, secretary, A. W. Foster, director, William T. Sesnon, Harris D. Connick, Captain A. C. Baker, George Hough Perry, Frank Burt, Rodney S. Durkee, A. M. Mortensen, Jos. M. Cummings and G. A. Dennison.

Several came in President Moore's yacht, the Evian, which is anchored in the river, flying the stars and stripes and exposition pennants.

LONDON WAS THERE.

One of today's visitors at the fair was Jack London. It was the first state fair he had attended in 20 years. Then he came to Sacramento on a [illegible] as a hobo, seeking a chance to gamble on the races, he says. An energetic constable collared him and threw him into jail after London had tried to slip through a hole in the fence. So London did not gamble and got only one swift glimpse of the fair.

The San Francisco excursion included members of the Chamber of Commerce, California Commercial Club, California Development Board, real estate board and committees of the California Land Show, Commonwealth Club and Portola festival.

BRYAN AND CHINDA DISCUSS NEW BILL

State Department Will Soon Have Answer to Last Note

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Japanese Ambassador Chinda had a short interview today with Secretary Bryan regarding the status of the California alien land legislation negotiations. Their talk was confined altogether to a rehearsal of the conversation between President Wilson and the ambasador on the subject last Wednesday, in accordance with the desire of the former that Bryan should be kept acquainted with every detail of the negotiations. The date of the delivery of the State Department's answer to the last Japanese note is still uncertain but it is supposed the matter will receive the attention of Counsellor Moore when he returns to Washington from his vacation.

Read What Senator Penrose's Friends Say

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 20.—Friends of Senator Penrose today came forward with the statement that the Pennsylvania senator, who has been flayed unmercifully by former President Roosevelt, is willing to accept Roosevelt as a candidate for the Presidency in 1915. The announcement also is made that not only Penrose, but Barnes of New York, Crane of Massachusetts and others of the Republican leaders favor such a plan, as in Roosevelt they think they see the candidate able to bring the Republican party back into power.

STANDARD OIL PAID FOR WAR, IS CHARGE

Mexican Landowner Says Company Tried to Get Big Wells.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Official representatives of General Huerta tonight directly accused the Standard Oil Company of financing the Madero revolution, of attempting to bribe Huerta, and of declaring that the present revolt would continue until the provisional president met the oil trust's terms.

These accusations were based on the following dispatch from Mexico City to Huerta's aides in this city:

"A wealthy landowner in the State of Jalisco makes sensational declarations regarding the part played by the Standard Oil Company in Mexican events since the incipiency of the Madero revolution. He declares that while in San Antonio the Texas Standard Oil manager for the southern district of the United States told him that until the Standard Oil Company should obtain complee possession of oil wells in Mexico revolutions would continue. That is the reason the Standard Oil supported the Maderista and opposed Reyes' movement.

OFFERED BIG LOAN.

"The Standard Oil offered to present the Mexican government with a $200,000,000 loan on easy terms, almost at par, besides making assurance that the Huerta government would receive immediate United States recognition. The representative of the Standard declared his company controlled the United States senate.

"It offered also to pay a tax of 12½ cents a barrel on oil instead of 5 cents, the tax paid by British companies, the principal of which is the Aguila Oil Company.

"The Standard Oil representative declared his company would not rest

'BIG TIM' SULLIVAN LURED TO HIS DEATH, IS THEORY

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The report that "Big Tim" Sullivan was lured from the residence of his brother, Patrick Sullivan, where he was living, by a telephone call and later murdered before being left on the railroad track, is being carefully investigated tonight.

Each day the opinion becomes stronger among the friends of the former Bowery politician that he was murdered and then placed on the track of the New Haven railroad.

Detectives from the office of District Attorney Whitman are now investigating the death of Sullivan and the inquest will be held on September 29.

Thaw to Be His Own Press Agent

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 20.—Angered by the reports of a split in his legal staff Harry K. Thaw today took entire charge of the publicity end of his battle for liberty, and threatened to dismiss the first lawyer secretary or detectives who tells of anything concerning him.

Early today Thaw called a meeting in his "throne room" in the Eagle Hotel and laid down the law according to his own ideas to his attorneys. Following this he was in telephonic communication with the New York attorneys, who, it was said, intended to withdraw from the case.

Gates Waits for Big Ship to Make Speed

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—When the Imperator sailed from Hoboken today Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Gates, who had negaged passage, were not on board. Gates arrived from St. Paul a few days ago on a special train, costing $3040, for the express purpose of taking the Imperator, but when he found that the Lusitania, sailing Wednesday, was a faster boat, the younger son of the late John W. Gates decided to wait.

'Speed, my boy, speed is what I want," was Gates' way of explaining his reason for waiting over.

Run From Thugs; Are Fired Upon

Accosted by two armed thugs near the Fruitvale Southern Pacific station, last night, P. Rocco and James Cruz instead of holding up their hands as ordered, took to their heels. The thugs fired two shots after them, and then, when Patrolman Pardee, hearing the shots, appeared, took to their heels and disappeared into the darkness. A search of the neighborhood failed to locate them.

The two men held up were returning to their home, 2879 Boehmer street, when the thugs accosted them, brandishing revolvers and ordering them to hold up their arms. Both men turned and ran. After firing two shots the bandits disappeared in the shadows of the station.

Collier Jupiter Will Have Trial Sept. 29

VALLEJO, Sept. 20.—The official trial trips of the collier Jupiter, which has just returned from a preliminary run on the Pacific, will begin September 29. Word was received today that the board to judge the trial will consist of officers of Mare Island and other nearby points and that no eastern officials will come west for the purpose.

FAIR STUDENTS DO 'DUTCH' RAGGING

Mysterious Frolic in Gay Attire Strictly "Excessive"

Barred from staring masculine eyes, and with guards placed to foil the attempts of venturesome high school lads who, from the outside, hatched plans for getting a glimpse of the revel, fair students of the Oakland Manual Training and Commercial high school, attired, some in their brother's trousers, some in Dutch costume, and some in—well they wore everything—and in some cases very little of it—"ragged" and reveled yesterday afternoon at the annual Freshie jinks. No man knows what they did—save one, Principal P. M. Fisher, and he won't tell. Fisher, who was called upon to open the affair with a speech, was by special dispensation, allowed to stay and witness the revels. The girls say that [illegible] permit or deny it.

The "jinks" took place in the armory at Twelfth and Market streets. Several attempts of the boys to enter the forbidden precincts were foiled, and, so far as the girls know, no one saw the revels. It is rumored that two lads, concealed in the rafters, did see, but the girls are not sure.

MANY STUNTS SCHEDULED.

Girls, garbed as their brothers are wont to be, "ragged" with others in musical numbers, a "Dutch girls'" chorus in wooden shoes and short dresses, burlesques, and other amusements composed the official program. The affair was in the nature of a welcome to the "freshie" girls, given by the three upper classes.

A feature of the afternoon was the Girls' Orchestra, which played for

STRANGE CRIMINAL TELLS CALMLY OF AWFUL MURDER

Killed Girl as She Slept and Then Cut Up Body, Concealing It in Paris

and the only person known to have the keys to the building, left his family and disappeared. He was pursued 11,000 miles, brought back and sentenced to life imprisonment, always protesting his innocence.

Also at that time the Rev. Hans Schmidt left Louisville and presenting letters believed to be forgeries, in Trenton, was received as a visiting pastor and allowed to assist at a church.

FAMILY DISAPPEARS.

[illegible] Hans Schmidt was in Louisville, Dr. Arnold Held appeared in Chicago and registered at a college of mechano-theraphy. He was an especially brilliant student and talked of having been educated at the gymnasium at Koenigsburg, in Germany. So brilliant was he that in May, 1909, he was given a certificate or diploma.

He lived on the north side in a family where there was a pretty young girl.

The family disappeared and Dr. Held left Chicago about the same time and no trace could be afterward obtained.

In Germany there is a famous Held, who was educated at Koenigsburg. He does not know of the Chicago Dr. Held.

CHAPTER IV.

It was at St. Boniface's church, New York, established as assistant pastor on letters from Toronto, he first met the young girl, Anna Aumuller, then a maid in the church house. She had never seen one so brilliant before and when he talked of St. Elizabeth and of his right to officiate at their own marriage, this in the name of that saint, every word seemed true.

Trusting, believing, the girl soon found herself in deep despair. She talked to her family and friends of the charity of Rev. Schmidt and of his gifts to the poor. She said nothing more. But finally the day came that the housekeeper suspected and Anna had to leave the rectory.

But at that time Rev. Schmidt had already gone to another church and at St. John's in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street preached at the services for night workers.

GIRL STRANGELY MISSING.

Then came the strange disappearance of Anna Aumuller, the finding August 31 of torso and limbs in the river, the tracing of the odd pillowslip—wonderful detective work—and finally the visit of the detective to the church house soon after midnight last Sunday.

Father Schmidt was in bed. He was awakened. In his black cassock of confessional he strode slowly down the stairs—a man of middle age and middle height, of high forehead, lowering eyes, firm jaw and weak mouth.

He saw the six strangers at the foot of the stairs. He saw Father Huntmann's wondering, shocked face. But he came on, slowly, steadily.

All were silent until he reached the foot of the stairs.

ADMITS MURDER CHARGE.

"Did you kill that girl?" snapped the inspector.

The pastor held up his hands, shifting his eyes from the face of the woman he had slain.

"Yes—yes, I killed her," he said in a choking whisper.

His arms fell. He reached them pleadingly out toward the good gray pastor, his master in the church. Father Huntmann shrank from the proffered embrace as from a thing stained. With a swing of his arm he swept him aside. Schmidt staggered back.

"Because I loved her," he said as if he was finishing his first words.

CHAPTER V.

While the detectives and newspaper men sat listening to the pastor's story of his crime, a tale unequaled in the annals of crime came from his lips. He told of his relations with Anna Aumuller and went on.

"But Anna talked to me about our child soon to be born. The full realization of our sin became apparent to me. The fact began to worry me.

"At first I could not think out my course. Anna pleaded. Then I decided that we should be married. Several days before I killed her we were married at the city hall. We gave our true names. You will find the records.

DECIDED UPON HOME.

"We decided then that we should have a home. I set about finding a location. We knew that for a time, until we decided now to declare ourselves before the world, it must be a secluded one.

"I engaged the apartment at 68 Broadhurst avenue. We fixed it up with a little furniture. I bought the furniture we thought we required.

"Anna went there and we began our married life. But I was worried. If our relations became known how could I explain?

"I thought it all out alone and decided to kill my wife.

"My decision made, it was time, I thought, to act. I went out and hunted for tools. I came down town. I thought I could best do it with a butcher knife. I went to a little shop in Center street, just south of Worth street, or near that street, and bought the butcher knife and the saw.

NARRATES KILLING.

"I took the tools with me to our apartment the night of September 1. Anna was lying in her bed. I do not know whether she was asleep.

"Stepping over to the bed with the butcher knife I seized her and told her quickly that I had come to carry out my threat.

"I cut her throat with the butcher knife while I held her. The body was still warm when I rushed into the bath room with it. I threw her into the bathtub. And then I cut her up.

"I cut her body into five or six pieces.

"Then I went out and bought the paper into which to wrap the pieces.

"I used the first things that came to my mind to use as first covering for the parts. I finished one section into the pillowslip. I used, I think, part of the bedspread to wrap about the legs or arms. I may have used some of Anna's lingerie.

GOT RID OF HEAD.

"My work was rapid. I wanted to get rid of the head. It was the first thing I took away. I wrapped it in paper and tied it up like a package.

"With the head under my arm I made my way to the river. I bought a ferry ticket and got aboard the ferry to Fort Lee. I laid the package down on the seat beside me in the waiting room and again on the ferryboat. No one noticed. There were many passengers.

[illegible] picked up my package and sauntered to the stern of the boat. As no one paid attention to me, and I felt sure that I was not observed, I dropped the head into the river. It disappeared.

I hurried back to the flat as soon as the boat brought me back to Manhattan. I did up each part of the body in a package small enough to carry conveniently without attracting too much attention. Then I went to the river with each piece.

My course was the same with each package. I laid them on the seats where other passengers sat on the ferryboat when I sat down. I tossed them into the water whenever the first opportunity presented itself. It was done."

CHAPTER VI.

Following the confession, rapidly came the police discovery that the cousins, who in youth connived together at Mainz, were together still, in St. Nicholas avenue, not far from the church of Rev. Schmidt, where was the dentist's office of Dr. Ernest Arthur Muret. It was there that the two met and plotted crime.

One of the plans of Rev. Schmidt was to make money, counterfeit money, and to "relieve the poor of this country and Germany," as he says. The men engraved plates, crudely enough, but better as they practiced. The place of safekeeping for the counterfeiting outfit was the laboratory of Dr. Muret, the dentist. Nights, after his clerical duties were done, the priest hurried to his friend and in his office changed his clerical garb for a business suit of gray. Not all is told of the deeds of the cousins. Strange stories of midnight revelry are reported. Women were heard at night screaming and seen running in the halls crying for help.

MOTHER SAYS "INSANE."

There may have been other murders. Helen Greene, who had been in the company of Rev. Schmidt when he posed as A. Van Dyke, has not since been seen. Trenton, where Rev. Schmidt served as assistant pastor, reports a missing girl.

But the old mother back in Aschaffenburg has but one explanation, now that she knows the horrible truth.

"My poor boy is insane. He was insane in his youth. He was in an asylum. He is to be cured—not punished."

SHIFTING OF POLE IS GREAT MYSTERY

When Operator Fred McCredie of the Webster-street bridge met himself to work yesterday morning he was seen to pause on the Oakland approach of the bridge, looked perplexed and after examining an iron telephone pole continue on his way to the scene of his daily labors.

"What happened to the telephone pole, Horton?" he asked E. Horton, another operator of the bridge.

"What pole?" asked Horton.

McCredie explained that the iron pole on the Oakland approach had been moved several feet. Horton's sarcastic laugh answered McCredie, so the latter took him to the scene. Sure enough the pole had been moved several feet, causing the sidewalk to be moved slightly out of place.

Now the question is: How the deuce did it get there? Several theories have been advanced. Some say that possibly an old "salt" imbibed too freely of the amber fluid and mistaking the pole for an old friend tried to take him along and treat him. Others suggest that some automobile had an argument with the pole, but nobody is certain of just what occurred.

It is the greatest mystery ever known on the local waterfront and it seems certain that the affair will not be cleared and the real cause revealed. The sidewalk was replaced and the pole moved back into position yesterday afternoon. And in the meantime all of the gumshoe men on the front are skulking 'round in an attempt to fathom the mystery.

Rabid Cat Runs Amuck Among the Alamedans

ALAMEDA, Sept. 20.—Running amuck on the streets today a small cat, presumed to be suffering from hydrophobia, created a small riot, leaping on the backs of pedestrians, scratching and biting, and finally falling in convulsions on the sidewalk at the corner of Santa Clara avenue and Park street. It was finally killed by Edward Ronning, a bystander, who dispatched the animal with a club.

The cat attacked several women in front of a Park-street store. Mrs. M. Carter of this city was badly scratched by the animal, but was not bitten. The screams of the terrified women attracted Ronning, who found the animal writhing in convulsions. The carcass will be sent to the state hygienic laboratory for examination.

In Holland costume, with wooden shoes, they danced and sang. Miss Orma Reinhardt, Miss Bernice Daly, and Miss Mona Dixon led the septette, with Miss Neva Cray, Miss Carolyn Norman, Miss Leslie Clawson and Miss Rosetta Armstrong as "chorus ladies." Miss Pearl Avery and Miss Ida Schneider played a violin duet.

JULIUS CAESAR "DONE."

Another feature was the burlesque on "Julius Caesar." Miss Carolyn Norman acted in the title role while the other portions of the cast were attended to by Miss Pearl Avery as Brutus; Miss Esther Hansen as Portia and Calpurnia; Miss Margaret Jackson as Cassius; Miss Isabel Mooney as Casca; Miss Helen Crocker as the soothsayer; Miss Rosetta Armstrong as Mark Antony, and Miss Bernice Daly, mob, conspirators and et cetera, et certa. Between numbers the girls' orchestra rendered syncopated melodies.

Miss Carolyn Norman, president of the Girls' Athletic Association, spoke. The affair was conducted under the supervision of Miss Helen Robertson, dramatic manager. Refreshments were served during the course of the entertainment. The armory was tastefully decorated in purple and gold, the school colors, and about 250 girls were present.

Turner Wants Ewer Kept in Position

The controversy over the reorganization of the health department will not be settled until the return of Mayor Mott September 26, when Commissioner of Public Healh and Safety Turner and the civil service board will lay their rival plans before the mayor. Turner wishes to have Dr. E. N. Ewer, the present health officer, provided for, but the plan of the civil service board does not contemplate such provision.

The civil service plan was submitted to Dr. Ewer today for his approval. Dr. Ewer has signified informally that he considers the plan a good one.

Don Pronto Pacing King of This Coast

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 20.—Jim Logan was dethroned as pacing king of the west today. Don Pronto, handsome black stallion by Director General-Dam Siburian, by Wilton, paced him into submission and stepped the fastest two heats in the history of the Pacific coast. His opening mile of 2:03½ crushed the mile record and the second in 2:05¾ equalled the mark set by Jim Logan at Woodland some weeks back. Don Pronto's victory was predicted by those who have seen him in his early morning workouts. He had been stepping record miles in training and the track which is thought too solid suited him to a nicety.

Police of both sides of the bay are searching for Charles Hansen of Piedmont, who disappeared following a visit to a physician's office in San Francisco. The man has recently been ill and it is feared that he became mentally deranged and wandered away. His wife has appealed to the Piedmont and Oakland authorities, and an investigation is being made.

When last seen Hansen wore a brown suit and black derby hat. He also wore a deputy sheriff's badge of this county. He was six feet in height. Hansen lived at 310 Magnolia avenue. He left a wife and one child.

KEEPING MILK AT 65 DEGREES PUZZLE

Oakland Dealers Claim That Local Law Is Too Drastic

How to keep milk at a temperature of 65 degrees, as required by city ordinance, when the weather temperature is nearer 100, is the puzzle being faced by Oakland milkmen, according to the complaint made yesterday by officers of the local milk dealers' association, who have reported to the city council that 600 gallons of milk which is condemned here is daily shipped to San Francisco, where it is accepted.

The complaint is made by J. M. Santana, president, and H. P. Glasser, vice president of the milk dealers' organizreason for the recent condemnation of milk, which resulted in much of it being thrown away by the city health authorities, was that its temperature was over the 65 degrees specified. The milk, they declare, was not sour, and would be accepted anywhere else. They declare that the 65 degree rule is not enforced anywhere else and that in hot weather it is impossible for the wagon drivers, hauling bottled milk, to comply with its provisions.

The complaint will be referred to the health department and subjected to an investigation at the hands of the council.

Mrs. Pankhurst Not To Get Recognition

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Sept. 20.—The Federation of Womens Clubs of America will give no official recognition to Mrs. Pankhurst, the militant British suffragette when she arrives in the United States. This assertion was made today by Mrs. C. McMahon of the executive board of the Federation which is now in session here. She is a voter in the State of Utah.

"We do not believe in militant methods to gain the ballot," said Mrs. McMahon, "but we do believe in political equality and we sincerely hope the day will come when all women in the United States will have the privilege of the ballot on an equal footing with the men."

Miss Van Haltren Is Bride of Englishman

Miss Elizabeth Van Haltren, daughter of George Van Haltren, famed baseball player and umpire, who some years ago was one of the idols of the big league, and later a Pacific Coast League star, was claimed as a bride Wednesday evening at a simple home ceremony by Charles Hamilton Lee of London.

The bride is well known in Oakland society, having lived in this city since her father came from the east. The bridegroom is a young English business man. After a honeymoon the couple will return to London.

City Nurses Administer to Indigent Sick

To administer to the indigent sick of this city is the lifework of three nurses who daily visit their wards in the name of this municipality. To relieve those in pain and prolong their lives is the duty of these women, who carefully study their patients, who are suffering from various maladies. Miss Louise Schmits and Miss Abina Cronan represent the Associated Charities as city nurses. Miss Elsie E. Richards is working under the direction of the Alameda County Society for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, and also is employed by the city.

According to the annual report of the work accomplished by Miss Schmits and Miss Cronan from September 1, 1912, to September 1, 1913, these nurses cared for 615 patients, visited 3205, assisted in 86 vaccinations; 331 cases were cured, 150 improved and 41 are remaining under treatment; general surgery and infections, 102; contagious, nervous and fever cases, 259; diagnosis, 92; burns and injuries, 49; mental paralysis, 24; obstetrical, 25, and tuberculosis, 16.

TUBERCULAR CASES.

During the month of June 98 tubercular patients were visited by the nurses of the Alameda County Society for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. There are now many under treatment. Excellent work is being done by the organization.

The city nurses declare that the greatest needs of the day are sanitation work and more assistants to attend the sick. Steady work and higher wages are the requisites for the poor. Families are being deprived of education because they lack funds. They are unable to fight their afflictions and are consequently incapacitated for labor.

Many preventative measures are now being used by Miss Richards in treating tuberculosis. "Hope is one of the requisites," said Miss Richards yesterday. "Give the patients a word of cheer and they will forget their troubles and their health will eventually improve. They need encouragement as much as they do medicine. They need a friendly visitor who will stimulate their ambitions."

AUTOS WOULD HELP.

A number of automobiles would facilitate many tedious trips and would permit the nurses to increase the number of visits. Almost daily the three city nurses walk many miles to reach a poor sufferer who is anxiously awaiting their arrival. Often they climb over rocks and hills to wait upon their patients, who depend upon the services of the municipal nurses.

"Money is needed," said Miss Cronan, "as well as more workers, but the greatest requirement of the hour is better sanitation and healthier conditions for the stricken poor.

"We need co-operation; more free employment bureaus, more city and social workers. The poor sick people need meat which, is almost too expensive for them to purchase, and also vegetables, for which many are now craving. Money is required to supply the larder with nutritious food."

"The nurses could cover a larger territory if they were provided with automobiles," said Miss Schmits. "There is more suffering in this community than the ordinary citizen would believe. In some districts the conditions are appaling. There are many pathetic and heart-breaking cases which are receiving our attention.

"Many hearts would be gladdened if there were more friendly visits to the poor by strangers. There is a demand for a larger number of co-operative workers, who would be welcomed by the poor. I call on 18 patients daily. Often I am called out at night and I always feel it my duty to respond, no matter where the sufferer may be. All the nurses answer in the same manner and willingly leave their own fireside to cheer another."

WELL, well, I haven't told you anything about metal tubes for a long while, but of course, you are always aware of the fact that rubber of any kind will rot under any circumstances--so in talking Player Pianos we won't consider any but the metal tubed players, for we are not buying our Player Pianos for a day or a month or a year, but for a lifetime of service. Satisfactory and permanent results cannot be obtained from rubber tubes--so we did away with them several years ago--others followed our example, and now there is a stampede to get on the metal tube wagon--which spells success. Next year or the year after you may be able to purchase metal tubes in any player piano, but TODAY the Autopiano stands alone and supreme in this and other essentials. The Autopiano automatic tracking device is unfailing and insures perfect tracking of all kinds of music at all times. The five-point motor has the same advantage over the other type as a six-cylinder car has over the old two-cylinder. It means continuous and uniform power--not the jerky, jumpy music so often heard on players.

AGAIN WE INVITE YOUR COMPARISON. We would like you to look at Player Pianos elsewhere, shop around all you want to and don't look at anything under $700. Be sure you see and hear the best to be obtained for $700. Then come here and get a better Player Piano, better in the artistic rendering of your favorite selections, better in tone and better in construction for exactly $457--a saving of $243. We have the Player you would eventually buy even if it cost you more money than any of the others--but the Eilers enormous business of forty retail stores and our little-profit-per-piano-plan enables you to buy a better article at a saving of $243.

You do yourself and your purse an injustice if you fail to investigate this statement.

Terms of $2 per week may be arranged on this wonderful player. Music rolls gratis with free exchange library privilege. (A statement as strong as the above warrants investigation if for no other reason than that of curiosity.) Store open every evening until 10 o'clock. Phone Oak. 340 and our automobile will call for you.

PEEVED AT LADIES SMOKING AND IGNORING ASH TRAYS

Tom Num, house-cleaning expert at the Hotel Oakland, is peeved. Tom works all night with a corps of assistants, and the more he works the more he has to do. This is because ladies smoke in the hotel occasionally. At the smart afternoon teas silver cigarette cases are opened and Turkish cigarettes are smoked.

According to Tom, the ladies smoke differently from the sterner sex. The men drop their ashes into ash-trays or cuspidors. The fair smokers at society teas drop their fluffy Turkish cigarette ashes on the carpets. For some time Tom has had much ado to clean them up, and yesterday he rebelled. Approaching Maitre d'Hotel Petersen, he demanded that notices, calling women's attention to ash-trays in the lobby, be printed and displayed.

"Nothing doing," said Petersen. "The ladies can smoke how and where they please in this hotel, and if they spoil your carpets get new ones. We must please the ladies."

Wherefore Tom still goes over the carpet three times with the vacuum cleaner to remove the ashes, and mutters strange Chinese oaths.

King of Greece Sees Paris Like Civilian

A crowd stared at him when he sat down to lunch in a public restaurant.

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 20.—On motion of Commissioner Wilder today the matter of increasing the interest rate on the $500,000 school bonds remaining unsold from 4 to 5 or 5½ percent was referred to the city attorney for an opinion. In view of the fact that some of the bonds have been sold on a 4½ per cent basis the commissioners are doubtful of the legality of increasing the rate of interest on the remainder.

TELLS WHY SHE HAD MAN JAILED

"Thought That He Should Be Brought to Justice," Says Mrs. Dahlmeier.

"I thought this man should be brought to juctice and that is why I chas d him and had him turned over to the police," said Mrs. G. Dahlmeier, the pretty and fashionable young woman who yesterday had Peter R. Murphy, alias Thomas Mahoney jailed after an exciting chase along Jefferson, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets Mrs Dahlmeier resides with her mother at 1011 Fallon street

"I met this man, who was known as Thomas Mahoney, in Oroville," continued Mrs Dahlmeier. "I was visiting friends there at the time that Mahoney was a social lion in the town He claimed he was the son of a millionaire and had many smooth propositions to offer. The people of Oroville made much of him until he left suddenly, owing money and leaving forged checks.

"When he came to this city he asked me to recommend a physician, and I told him of my doctor, Dr. F. R. Mugler. He told Dr. Mugler that he was interested in a big mill at Oroville and wanted the physician to go there as the mill doctor. He impressed the doctor greatly and had him endorse a check.

"I was coming out of a store at Fourteenth and Clay streets, in company with my mother, when I saw Mahoney. I told my brother to watch him until I called a policeman. He ran away as soon as he saw me, and I followed him.

"The story he has given the police about presenting me with earrings and entertaining me in San Francisco is false. He is evidently trying to implicate me in his troubles. I only know him as an acquaintance, having met him, as I say, at a military ball in Oroville."

COLUMBUS DAY IS TO BE MEMORABLE

To insure that the Columbus Day celebration which will be given Sunday afternoon and evening, October 12, on Lake Merritt and at Lakeside park, shall be the greatest observance of the day yet held, invitations have been issued to all organizations in the bay cities to take part. The Portuguese and Spanish societies have been asked to participate because Columbus was of the Latin race and he is a particular hero of the southern nationalities. With the interest already shown by the civic organizations, among them the Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants' Exchange, the Progress and Prosperity committee and the Downtown Improvement association, no efforts will be spared for the most distinctive holiday yet held in Oakland.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY.

With the forming of a woman's auxiliary committee at a meeting that will be held tonight in the rooms of the park commission in the city hall annex many of the most prominent women in the city will take an active part and will act as patronesses of the festival. Among those who have already promised to participate in the fete are Mrs. Hugh Hogan, Mrs. T. P. Hogan, Mrs. J. H. Roos, Mrs. J. H. Mellon and others

Herbert Hauser, secretary of the Pacific Coast Union of the Amateur Athletic association, has agreed to help in the success of the water carnival which will be a feature of the afternoon program and will follow the pageant of Columbus and his men making their memorable voyage of discovery, and the literary and musical exercises Invitations will be extended to all rowing clubs of the coast cities to enter crews and there will be swimming and diving events and a water soccer contest.

LODGES TO TAKE PART.

Plans will be outlined this week for the big features of the celebration. The Oakland lodges of Red Men and the Daughters of Pocahontas, which heretofore have impersonated the Indians which Columbus found on landing in the new world, are again to take part this year.

Oakland enthusiasts of Columbus Day will get back of the movement which is to be launched in Boston on Columbus Day to make this holiday a Pan-American holiday by joining the observance in this country with Discoverer's Day, already held in several Latin-American countries John Barrett, director of the Pan-American Union, will be the principal speaker at the Boston meeting, where the call will be sounded.

John J. Cox, as chairman of the general committee, will complete the additional committees by the latter part of this week. Among the prominent persons taking an interest in the celebration is Gov. Hiram W. Johnson, the pioneer Italian [illegible]

'CERTIFIED MILK' GROWS IN FAVOR

WASHINGTON, Sept 20—"Certified milk" is growing in favor, according to the department of agriculture, which announced today that the daily production of 126 dairies in the United States now is nearly 25,000 gallons, an increase of nearly three hundred per cent in five years. The department points out, however, that this amount is only about one-half of one per cent of the total milk supply of the country.

The department experts lay emphasis on the fact that expensive apparatus is not so necessary to the production of certified and absolutely clean milk as is a careful and unremitting attention to sanitary details

In a bulletin which the department has just issued, the proper methods for turning out certified milk are set forth

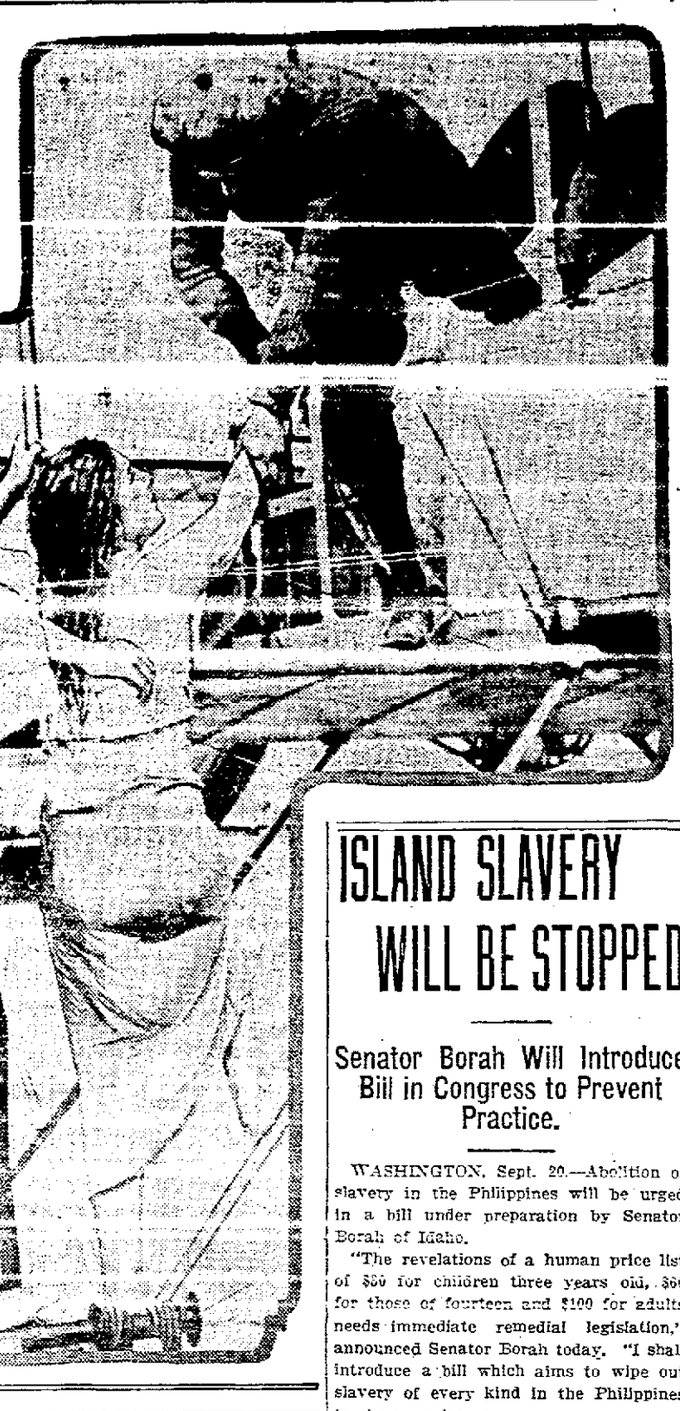
Aeroplane Proves Excellent Life-Saver

Rescues Struggling Couple From Ocean

DEAUVILLE, Sept. 20.—To demonstrate the feasibility of using the aeroplane as a life-saver, a young woman and a man, completely garbed, leaped into the ocean near here. While thousands watched an aeroplane ascended into the air and swooped down on to the water, alighting within several feet of the struggling couple in the sea. Without any difficulty the two were pulled aboard the air machine and taken ashore. So successful was the trial that it is understood that several large steamship companies are thinking seriously of equipping their ocean liners with hydroplanes or aeroplanes, believing that they will minimize the danger of drowning.

HERE IS AN AEROPLANE BEING USED AS A LIFE-SAVER IN THE WATER AT DEAUVILLE.



ISLAND SLAVERY WILL BE STOPPED

Senator Borah Will Introduce Bill in Congress to Prevent Practice.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Abolition of slavery in the Philippines will be urged in a bill under preparation by Senator Borah of Idaho.

"The revelations of a human price list of $50 for children three years old, $60 for those of fourteen and $100 for adults needs immediate remedial legislation," announced Senator Borah today. "I shall introduce a bill which aims to wipe out slavery of every kind in the Philippines in the near future.

"There is no need for an investigation of these conditions. Time should not be wasted in such proceedings. The report of Auditor Phipps proves conclusively that slavery exists."

The startling disclosures of the report of W. H. Phipps, auditor of the Philippines, filed today, moved other members of Congress and government officials to predict speedy action on any legislation drafted to abolish slavery in the Philippines.

SAY THEY ARE ADOPTED.

Phipps charges that Filipino women are sold to Chinese as wives, that it is a common practice for the Negrito Filipinos and the hill classes generally to sell girls into slavery and that the excuse offered is that these slave boys and girls are "adopted" into families of their master.

It is asserted in the report that the price for a child ranges from $30 up to ... is demonstrated by the way in which the purchase is made. In every case the origin of the sale is covered and is seldom known.

Several of the slaveholders attempt to excuse their slaveholdings by the allegation that the slaves were originally taken over as orphans through pity.

It is asserted in cold blood by some of the slave owners that it is better to adopt the orphans than to kill them, as was once the custom in the hill tribes.

From another report Phipps states:

GIRLS ARE BOUGHT.

"There is a large traffic in girls. I have personally had a number of offers of this kind and it is generally known that a large percentage of the Chinese who have Filipino wives actually bought them."

The Phipps report then explains the loan system of making slaves. A man borrows money from another and hypothecates his son or daughter for security. It is so managed that the debt is never paid and the human security is forfeited.

Another ruse for slave-making is the marriage of Filipino girls to slaves, thus doubling the human property.

The names of sixty-seven persons have been given to the department by Phipps as being slaves. He says he takes pleasure in corroborating all that Dean Worcester has said.

The effect of the report will be a call from the war department upon the service in the Philippines to push the individual slave cases vigorously.

CONSUL BRINGS JAPANESE WIFE

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—E. J. King, American consul at Hakodate, Japan, where he has resided for more than sixteen years, arrived in San Francisco today on the liner Mongolia with Mrs. King, a Japanese. The couple will pay a visit to their four daughters, who have been in California since last Christmas attending Notre Dame convent in San Jose, and thereafter tour the United States before returning to their home in the Island Empire.

King found fortune as well as romance in Japan, where he is known as "the hardwood king." The respect and regard in which he is held by the people of his wife's native country have made his services as consul invaluable to the United States.

E. J. King is one of the number of noted and notable men who have married Japanese women, among whom the best known are Sir Edwin Arnold, the English author and poet; Lafcadio Hearn, whose writings are known and admired in the languages of all the greater nations, and a millionaire nephew of J. Pierpont Morgan. Hearn alone abandoned his American citizenship, becoming a citizen of Japan before his death.

The couple will spend several months in America, and Mrs. King will see all the greatest wonders of her husband's native land.

Convict Works as Counterfeiter in Prison Cell

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 20.—That a convict in the Tennessee state prison has been engaged in counterfeiting operations was indicated today when prison authorities found remains of plaster of paris moulds for small coins in the cell of Sam Howerton, who is serving a sentence for murder. Howerton, it is said, melted the metal by means of a wire attached to the electric light in his cell.

MOTHER OF MRS. "JACK" SPRECKELS IS DEAD

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—After an illness of a month, Mrs. Willard V. Huntington, wife of Willard V. Huntington and mother of Mrs. John D. Spreckels Jr., died shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon at the Stewart hotel in this city.

Mrs. Huntington had been a sufferer from heart disease and had been confined to her bed for the greater part of the last month.

CROCKERS SETTLE CLAIM; SUIT IS DISMISSED

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—Suit for damages in the sum of $10,000 against the Misses Ethel and Helen Crocker was dismissed in San Mateo county this morning after their father, William H. Crocker, the San Francisco banker, had made a financial settlement with Mr. and Mrs. John J. Plaisted of San Jose, who claimed they were permanently injured when the Crocker automobile crashed into their buggy on the county road near Belmont, September 12, 1913.

The compromise was effected at a meeting of the attorneys for the Crockers and the Plaisteds, held at the offices of Morrison, Dunne & Brobeck yesterday. Miss Ethel Crocker was present at the conference and her deposition was taken. It is said she admitted driving her automobile on the wrong side of the road.

According to the attorneys for Plaisted the sum involved in the settlement runs well into four figures.

DITCH DIGGER STRIKES WIRE; DOOS MELTED

WALNUT CREEK, Sept. 20.—The steam ditch digger owned by the Schuyler Engineering Company was damaged to the extent of $500 by coming in contact with the trolley wire at San Ramon Junction when it was being transported on a flat car over the Oakland & Antioch tracks en route to San Jose. The trolley came in contact with the boilers of the machine and rendered into a molten state a number of the rods and ...

WOMAN NOT SURE WHO USED PISTOL

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—Katherine Gallagher, putative wife of Arthur R. Coulson, now in prison on suspicion of having shot her and killed William Acker and George Kovack, following a joy ride in which they took part, reiterated her statement that the accused man bent over her after the shooting, it is believed tonight by the police. They state that Mrs. Coulson insists that as she lay ... over her asking, "Did I shoot you, darling?" She still declares, however, that she is not certain Coulson did the shooting.

Mrs. Mary G. Stafford, who accompanied the party on the joy ride which ended in death, declares, according to the police, that the wounded woman told her Coulson did the shooting. As Mrs. Gallagher is not Coulson's wife, she will be called to testify against him.

The shooting occurred early yesterday ... a ride, returned to the Atlas garage, 74 Oak street. Coulson, a prominent seed merchant, gave himself up to the police, but steadfastly refuses to ...

CONFERENCE OF M. E. CHURCH IS BUSY

Methodists Have Extra Session at Pacific Grove; Hear Addresses.

PACIFIC GROVE, Cal., Sept. 20. — After the early morning lecture by Professor Hannan on "The Other Man," the members of the Methodist Episcopal conference plunged into the business of the morning session. The docket was full and the presiding bishop found it difficult to give to each the time for its consideration.

To meet the difficulty, the conference voted to have a special session in the afternoon. Senator Edwin E. Grant and J. H. McCallum, harbor commissioner, ... the greetings of the laymen's association to the conference.

Their addresses were enthusiastically received and were responded to by Bishop Hughes. Dr. W. E. Vaughn, fraternal delegate from the Methodist Episcopal church, South, was introduced and delivered a very winsome and humorous address.

Dr. Leonard, corresponding secretary emeritus of the board of foreign missions, New York City, spoke a few farewell words in which he expressed delight at being present.

MR. JOHN N. WATKINS.

Mr. John N. Watkins, 1501 A Clintenden St., St. Louis, Mo., writes:

"Among all the greatly advertised medicines for kidney and bladder trouble there is nothing which equals Peruna. I suffered for several years with this trouble, spent hundreds of dollars on doctors and medicine and all to no purpose, until I took Peruna.

"One bottle did me more good than all the others put together, as they only poisoned my system. Peruna cured me. I used it for four months before a complete cure was accomplished, but am truly greatful to you. The least I can do in return is to acknowledge the merits of Peruna."

A Remarkable Recovery.

Mr. John N. Watkins, whose portrait accompanies this article, has a very interesting story to tell. He sent it to us entirely unsolicited. His statement is, "The least that I can do in return for the benefit I have received, is to acknowledge the merits of Peruna."

A great many people feel this way, and voluntarily give us the privilege of using their testimonial in spite of the fact that there are some who are prejudiced against testimonials.

Mr. Watkins' trouble was kidney and bladder disease, as he states. Just exactly what the nature of the disease was we have no means of knowing. He had, however, what the doctors called kidney disease, and he had suffered for several years with the trouble.

Naturally enough a man of his means and energy would not sit down and whine because of his trouble, but he attempted to find relief.

Spent Hundreds Of Dollars.

At last he was induced to take Peruna. Just who called his attention to the remedy we do not know. We presume it was a neighbor who had taken it for a similar purpose. In beginning to take Peruna he states: "One bottle did me more good than all the other remedies put together." He continued to take Peruna for four months, at which time he claims he was completely restored to health. It was his gratitude for good health again that led him to write the testimonial and allow us to use his portrait in connection with it.

We offer no explanation as to how Peruna effected a change in his case. The operation of medicine is mostly inexplicable. The fact that he had diligently sought relief and tried other popular remedies and began to improve as soon as he took Peruna, is evidence that cannot be disputed that Peruna did for him just what he says it did.

Naturally enough, Mr. Watkins recommends Peruna to other people similarly afflicted. If anyone desires to write him and obtain further particulars they should remember to enclose a stamp for reply. Otherwise their letter may receive no attention.

Catarrh of Kidneys.

Judge C. J. Park, R. F. D. 4, Greensboro, Greene Co., Ga., writes: "For a long time I was troubled with catarrh of the kidneys and after taking Peruna I feel like a new man."

Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets

Drummond's "whereabouts" have been known ever since he violated his parole, but there has been no effort to bring him back.

DRUMMOND ARRESTED.

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 20.—The police last evening were called by telephone to a local hotel to make an arrest. When the officers arrived they found a man who declared: "I am C. R. Drummond, wanted in St. Louis for bigamy. I am ready to go back." Drummond was taken to the station and held pending orders from St. Louis. An attempt to extradite Drummond on charges of bigamy was made some time ago and failed. He is said to be the son of a wealthy man in St. Louis.

WHY HE IS WANTED.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 20.—Charles R. Drummond, member of a millionaire family of tobacco manufacturers, is wanted in Clayton, St. Louis county, for violating a parole following a six months' jail sentence for bigamy. He disappeared from St. Louis two years ago and was later said to have entered the real estate business at San Diego.

He is known here chiefly for having squandered a million dollar inheritance and for his numerous matrimonial affairs. He eloped with at least three St. Louis girls, and later was said to have married again in Paris. His escapades have taken him from eastern to western coasts across the Atlantic and back again.

Makers of Wooden Legs Running Short of English Willow

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Makers of wooden legs have appealed to the forest service to find for them a substitute for English willow which has been used in the past almost exclusively in the manufacture of artificial limbs. The willow is especially adapted to this branch of manufacture because of its lightness and strength. It is growing scarce, however, and substitutes for it are being sought. Forest service officials believe they will be able to find a substitute in the Port Orford cedar of the Pacific coast and they are now conducting experiments fgor that wood.

SONS LOST TO THEM FOREVER, BY COURT ORDER

Woman Defends Husband Against Attack by Attorney.

DULUTH, Sept. 20.—Into the court records of Douglas county has been written a story of life's ragged edge fuller of pathos and homely sentiment than the usual offices of the court room afford.

Elizabeth and James Johnson, father and mother, appeared before Judge Chas. Smith in the juvenile court and asked the state to take care of their children. Woven into the proceedings was a tale of misfortune and adversity which when finished, resulted in the commitment of two little boys to the state school at Sparta.

Side by side on the witness stand sat husband and wife. Each had an infant. One was two years old and the other six months. Standing with his face against the wall and crying was the eldest of the family, John, aged 8 years.

When Judge Smith sanctioned the commitment John and Charles were cut loose for all time from parental contact. The parting in the courtroom was one of the saddest in the annals of superior records.

Mrs. Johnson has been married twice. To her present husband, James Johnson, she has been wedded five years and their union has been illfavored. She has now four children, is a prospective mother and one child has been buried. One is in a state institute in Minnesota, and the commitment of the two yesterday leaves only a six-months-old baby in the luckless household.

THEIR MONEY DWINDLED.

The Johnsons are from Grand Rapids, Mich., where Mrs. Johnson owns a small farm, uncleared and heavily encumbered. Six years ago the first husband died and "Jim," the hired man, began suit for the woman's hand and won it. They were married.

From that time on the money that Mrs. Johnson had saved up dwindled. Little by little the stock and farm equipment was sold to pay medicine bills, taxes and to produce the necessaries of life.

A year ago the last available cent was spent and the Johnsons came to superior Since that time Mrs. Johnson and two of her children have been almost entirely dependent on the county. She was confined in a hospital for three weeks and the expense of this was borne by the county.

John has been in the children's home for two years and Charles was cared for there eight months. Mr. Johnson is a laborer and works only intermittently, owing to the periodical illness of his wife. Mrs. Johnson is a sufferer of Bright's disease and is extremely nervous.

When she began life for the second time she had $900 in money, 100 sheep, 50 pigs, 25 horses and a number of cows. All is gone and the little farm is so heavily encumbered as to make it practically valueless.

Facing one of the most difficult problems of existence, the couple appeared yesterday and asked to be relieved of the responsibility of the care of their children.

DEFENDED HUSBAND.

"You both made up your minds that you didn't want these children any more," shouted Attorney D. E. Roberts, "and you decided to dump them on the state. Why don't you get a divorce from this man? If he had a spark of manhood in him he would not abandon his own flesh and blood."

The woman confessed affection for the man and defended him against the excoriating remarks of Attorney Roberts.

"You must understand that you will never see your children again," said Judge Smith.

"Oh, your honor, can't I ever get them back again?" moaned the woman

"No, they will go to Sparta to be educated and afterward they will be adopted by some reputable family. They are lost to you forever," said the court as he made the commitment.

Mrs. Johnson broke down and wept. She kissed her children and cuddled them. As if cognizant of their separation from their mother, the little ones cried. The mother was overcome with emotion and she looked dazedly at the little ones as they prepared to be taken away by the sheriff.

Sorrowfully she watched them disappear into a store where Sheriff Carlson bought bananas and candy for them. Then she turned to her husband and they went away together. In her arms Mrs. Johnson carried the six-months-old child.

TO REVIVE OLD TOWNSITE PLAN

Town of Claus Will Be Made a Real Thriving City.

MODESTO, Sept. 20.—The town of Claus, about four miles northeast of Modesto on the Santa Fe is to be rejuvenated. This was made certain by the sale of the townsite to Fresno parties by Modesto men who purchased it about two years ago. The transaction was made through the agency of J. B. Rogers, of Fresno, the names of the parties to the syndicate that expect to redeem the town being held in confidence for the present. H. H. Spindle, W. H. Wherry, D. E. Saunders, and Dr. J. P. Snare secured the property of J. D. Gall, of Stockton, two years ago. While the financial consideration in the present deal is not obtainable, it is understood that something over $20,000 was involved.

The townsite of Claus originally consisted of 160 acres, and was plotted in lots and acre tracts about seven years ago. The area of the land in the present deal is about 142 acres. The Santa Fe depot at Claus was burned about four years ago, and while the company has continued to conduct the station as a shipping point, it has not seen fit to replace the building. It is understood that it is the intention of the purchasers to proceed at once to replace the tract, grade the streets, and make other improvements preparatory to starting a movement for a thriving village.

Claus is situated advantageously at the boundary of the Modesto and Oakdale irrigation districts and is surrounded by land that under the touch of water that is soon to be flowing in the Oakdale ditches will be subject to intensive cultivation and compact settlement. Under these conditions the time seems ripe for a revival of interest in investment in that quarter. Riverbank and Empire are far enough away on either side to permit a thriving town and trading point to grow up where now only a single store and two or three houses are located.

POSTMASTERS HEAR REPORT IN CONVENTION

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, Sept. 20.—Recommendations in favor of a mutual life insurance association, restricted to first and second class assistant postmasters of the United States, were made in the annual report of President E. W. Wooley of the National Association of Assistant Postmasters, read yesterday at the sixth annual convention of the organization here. President Wooley also recommended the retention of present assistant postmasters in their offices, extension of the classified civil service and advancement of some third class assistant postmasters to the second grade. An increase in the salaries paid to assistant postmasters is favored by the convention.

FOUR ALLEGED GUNMEN SENTENCED TO PRISON

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Four of the alleged gunmen who took part in pistol practice in the Upper West Side on Wednesday, were sentenced to 30 days [illegible] yesterday for disorderly conduct, that being the extent of the actual proof the police could bring against them.

No one of the prisoners would admit that he knew anything about the ownership of a revolver found in the automobile from which a volley of shots was fired at the supposed rival party of gang members in another automobile. Proof that the men were occupants of the car was sufficient to send them to Blackwells Island for a month.

TO TELL OF VISITS TO ROMAN SHRINES

Father P. C. Yorke Will Lecture at St. Anthony's Hall.

In early days, those who gained their jubilee made a pilgrimage to Rome to visit the various shrines. Father Yorke has made a study of the early church times.

Craig, who told of his visit to the British Isles. Vocal solos were rendered by J. S. Brittain, E. McDonald, and A. Bremmer. Mrs. Idaholt and Miss Scarborough rendered a piano duet. Miss Irene Rutherford was accompanist.

Six young women of the congregation who assisted at the supper table were Miss A. Milen Hirsch, Miss Helen Brown, Miss Margaret McDonald, Miss Valeria Lemon, Miss Bessie Tyson, Miss Pearl McMillan. The manse was prettily decorated in red and white.

CLAIM PAY WAS WITHHELD.

[illegible] following alleged holding out of pay from several fishermen, warrants were sworn to by Albert Roche, attorney of the State Labor Commission, against Joaquin Lopright and Lee Son, a Chinese. A crowd of fishermen called at the Hall of Justice to make complaint, but only two charges were approved by the attorney. It is alleged that the men's wages were held out following gambling on shipboard.

PROPOSE NEUTRAL ZONE IN AZORES

International Treaty Is Being Considered by America, Britain and Germany.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—A proposal to make the Azores archipelago an international neutral zone is being considered by the American, British and German governments, according to today's Manchester Guardian. The proposal is said to be incidental to the opening of the Panama canal.

The fact that German, American and British companies hav a joint cable station on the islands makes [illegible] portance. "It is proposed," says the Guardian, "that a joint treaty be arranged between Portugal and the other civilized nations by which a neutral zone shall be established and strictly maintained in the archipelago. It is suggested that all vessels within this zone be protected against attack or seizure and allowed to receive provisions and fuel."

CHINESE BABY GIRL CAUSES COURT FIGHT

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—Sue To Thun Han, a little Chinese girl baby, caused a three-cornered fight in the superior court, resulting today in the denial of a petition for guardian[illegible] brought by Miss Donalding Cameron, a Chinese worker, in behalf of Lun Yip, the mother. The child had been abandoned and had been taken care of by Lew Git and his wife, Ma Shee, who loved her and wished to keep her. Judge Sargent, who heard the case, would not grant guardianship to the foster parents, but referred the matter to the juvenile courts.

IS REAL AUTOCRAT IN CAPITAL OF MEXICO

Dr. Urrutia, Taken From Medical World, Rises to "Pooh Bah" Heights.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 20.—We Americans, located in this capital of thrilling incidents, have other things to fret about than possible intervention by the United States and war, or Mexican anti-American demonstrations. We have, for example, the distinguished Minister of Gobernacion, who is considerable Fret (spelled with a large F, Please).

Just now the Minister of Gobernacion is facing the possibility of being impeached by Congress, owing to the complaint laid before the standing committee of Congress by Senator Carelo, who was arrested, despite his right to immunity from arrest as a member of the Senate, and he holds the Minister of Gobernacion responsible. Senator Ca[illegible] was Minister of Foreign Relations under Madero and later Ambassador to the United States.

Since Dr. Aureliano Urrutia was made Minister of Gobernacion by President Huerta a couple of months ago his new laws and their enforcement have caused every inhabitant of this city to sit up and take notice, open their eyes in wonder and speculate continually on what to expect next. The Minister of Gobernacion in President Huerta's cabinet has duties corresponding to those of the Secretary of the Interior in the United States, but Dr. Urrutia is nothing if not progressive and energetic and dictatorial and he doesn't propose to be restricted by absurd traditions concerning the scope of his official usefulness. He is the Theodore Roosevelt of Mexico, the Pooh Bah of the Huerta administration. Nominally he is merely the Minister of Gobernacion, but in reality he is the Whole Thing. He takes an active interest in every subject connected with the public weal, or public woe. He is the only member of the cabinet who talks for publication on politics, on the revolution, on any matter of national importance. He looks after the health of the capital; he decides how the pulque business shall be run; he regulates the speed limit of automobiles and street cars; he keeps an eye on the beggars; he supervises social evil reforms; he regulates the hours for saloons and restaurants to do business; he is the foremost advisor of the president; he decides what articles drug stores may sell on Sundays; he makes rules and regulations for the police; his word is law and all the new laws are the result of his spoken or written words.

SUNDAY CLOSING LAWS.

He has given to Mexico City such Sunday closing laws as would have filled the Pilgrim Fathers with holy joy. One cannot buy a cigarette or a cigar here on Sundays. One cannot buy a loaf of bread after 10 o'clock in the morning on Sundays. Drug stores may remain open, but they cannot do any business except to fill prescriptions and sell baby food and nipples. The baby food and nipples were under the ban at first, but they have now been excepted from the prohibitory rule. All pars and pulquerieas are closed on Sunday. News stands are closed. All stores are shut tight.

Theaters are open Sundays. Bullfights are permitted on Sundays, but bullfights are national institutions. Moving picture shows may give exhibitions on Sunday. The people may amuse themselves, but they must not drink, except with their meals in restaurants and hotels.

So much for the Sundays here in the greatest city in Latin-America this side of Rio Janeiro. Now to tell of a few other reforms which Dr. Urrutia has instituted.

He has decreed that there shall be no crowding in the street cars and that everyone who pays a fare must have a seat. When all the seats are occupied a sign bearing the word "Completo" is hung up by the motorman at the front of the car. Cars must stop at every corner and at every road crossing in the suburbs. They must run at a low rate of speed in the city.

He has decreed that automobiles must not exceed a speed limit of about seven miles an hour on some streets and five miles on others. And the police see that these regulations are complied with.

MUST ASSIST NEAR-SIGHTED.

He has decreed that the police must assist all blind persons and all near-sighted persons across the streets.

He has decreed that all persons seen walking along the sidewalks reading newspapers shall be arrested and fined.

He has decreed that all beggars shall be put in a home and made to work for [illegible]

He has decreed that pulque shops, heretofore the filthiest gathering places of degraded humanity in the city, shall be lined with white tiles, kept scrupulously clean, and that no pulque shall be drunk on the premises.

The policemen carry lanterns at night now and are armed with six-shooters and clubs, so that the addition of rifles to their armament might seem unnecessary, but doubtless Dr. Urrutia has good reasons for the new rule. If he hasn't, no one will ever be the wiser, for no one knows why.

The above are just a few of the recent decrees of Dr. Urrutia and more will come. The doctor is a reformer of the most virulent type and he is not bothered with having to persuade a board of aldermen to pass the laws he suggests. What he says goes every time.

MUST BATHE WEEKLY.

Dr. Urrutia has decided that the people do not bathe often enough and so he is going to compel everyone to take a bath at least once a week and is considering plans for many new public bath houses so as to carry out his plans. It everyone to take a bath on St. John's day, June 24, which was considered quite sufficient by many of the men of the lower classes, but that was a sort of religious washing and was done to please the church. Dr. Urrutia will not make a religious ceremony of the weekly baths. He will make a police affair of it and the baths will be taken.

Dr. Urrutia is a full-blooded Indian. He is a large, muscular man and inclined to stoutness.

Until placed in the cabinet by President Huerta Dr. Urrutia was not known in politics in Mexico. He was a surgeon of note and eminent in the medical world his might whatever lies before him and that he will continue to be a factor in the political affairs of the nation is more than probable.

"Tim," Hotel Cat, Drops From Roof; Dies of Injuries

"Tim," pet cat of the Hotel Oakland bellboys, is no more. This morning, attempting to catch a pigeon on the roof of the hotel, he lost his footing and was dashed to death on the pavement many feet below.

Several days ago the cat, following workmen to the roof, was locked there and could not return. A thorough search of the hotel failed to locate him. In the meanwhile the big cat subsisted on birds which he caught. This morning he caught and wounded a pigeon, which escaped and fell to the ground below. In attempting to recover its prey the cat followed. The bellboys have "chipped in" and propose to give their pet a first-class funeral.

The cat was six years old and was presented to the hotel by one of the carpenters who worked on the building when it was erected.

STATE ASSOCIATION IS PLANNED BY ELKS

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 20.—As the result of a movement launched by the local lodge, a State Association of Elks in all probability will be organized at San Francisco during the coming Portola Festival. A committee consisting of Leo G. Fauly, James Egan, J. R. Dorsey and E. F. [illegible] tion for some weeks, and has sent letters to the different lodges over the state inquiring their sentiment on the subject. Favorable replies have been received from nearly all the lodges in California, and today an official call will be issued from the Bakersfield Elks for a meeting to organize a state association.

The initial meeting will be held at San Francisco October 22, and at the San Francisco lodge hall, the use of which has been offered for the purpose. The state association will be an organization midway between the local lodges and the national organization. State associations have been formed in Washington and [illegible] present plan go through, as there is every reason to expect, it is likely that the first chief state officer will be a Bakersfield Elk.

GRANTS PERMIT FOR FOWLER GAS PLANT

FOWLER, Sept. 20.—Commissioner Edgerton of the State Railroad Commission heard the application of A. A. Webber of Los Angeles for permission to build a gas plant in Fowler. After ascertaining the means and methods to be em[illegible] trustees in the matter, the permit to install the gas system was granted. The franchise, which is to be sold as soon as legal steps can be taken toward that end, stipulates a maximum of $1.25 gas and that the city have the privilege of buying the plant at any time within three years upon terms which are stipulated in the franchise. Fowler people are rejoicing today over their good fortune. Webber promises to begin work at once, he having secured a site in the south part of town, near the sewer farm.

S. F. Night Life ON "COAST" CAUSES RENTALS TO SOAR

THE KNAVE

Tramp "A No. 1" NOT KILLED RECENTLY, SAYS KINDELON

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—Anent the agitation for a cleaner city, cleaner pastimes and the [illegible] Coast, a good authority remarks that high rents on the coast, the political, social and business standing of the owners of lands and buildings collecting the rents and the wealth and influence of the liquor and brewery firms and companies, which find that part of town a profitable field, constitute a strong factor that will give the reform movement a big if not successful battle.

The Barbary Coast has long been a notorious locality, and for years Father Carraher of the Catholic church on the edge of it has waged almost single handed a fight to minimize its evil and varied demoralizing influences. The good father knows how strong the coast interests are. Both men and women of this city and some living in other parts of the State own the property there. Most of them would be ashamed to have the public know the kind of tenants they have.

Since the fire of 1906 they have jumped the rents very materially, so much so in fact as to make their possessions very profitable income producers. That queer phase of city and social life which popularized Ceasar's, Dante's and other resorts in the region played directly into the hands of the rent collectors. Where before the fire, for instance, one of the latter was getting a monthly rental of $400, he has for several years past been receiving $1600. About 1906 Ceasar was his own cook and sang operatic selections while presiding over the range as a star attraction for his place. He had room enough in his humble restaurant to feed forty people and was glad to make $200 a month. Of late years in a new big place he has made large profits and has been a well-dressed boss and superintendent. Others and less respectable have proportionately done as well. No wonder they are massed, along with their landlords, to fight the impending reform. And in the latter struggle, the one great fear of all of them is the aroused woman voter.

The record of the locality is particularly bad. One authority has statistics to show that in ten years there have been 200 victims of knockout drops. The robberies for the same period, including the activities there of the bunko men, exceed in the aggregate over $340.000.

Vindication Pleases Rolph

Chief of Police White has had his conduct as a police official vindicated by a three to one vote of the commissioners. This makes his tenure of office more certain and definite than at any time since he was put into the office from civil life by former Mayor McCarthy.

The decision in his favor is pleasing to Mayor Rolph and presumably to a large part of the general public.

It is distasteful to captains of police and most of the patrolmen, the principal reason in their case being a strong desire to have the chief always come from police ranks instead of from the outside. It was the same reason which caused their dislike to the appointments of Sullivan and Biggy as chief. Sullivan had been secretary of Mayor Phelan before he got the place, and he was the first civilian to get the honor.

In the history of the city only two chiefs have been removed. They were Morton and Seymour. Both met their fate during the McCarthy administration. New York and Chicago have tried with good success in having chiefs of police taken from civil life. San Francisco's success in this respect has not been so pronounced by any means.

Commissioner Cook's vote in favor of White is a strong factor in the latter's favor. Cook was for a long time a good policeman and officer. For awhile he was the chief, going over all captains' heads from the position of sergeant. Mayor Rolph when he entered office was not a strong White man. In those days the mayor thought of having a retired army officer as chief. But he changed his mind for reasons unknown and later on became a supporter of White. Probably the latter would not have fared so well had the force a captain of commanding ability for the honor. Mooney, captain of detectives, was impossible for the command for tempermental reasons. Captain Gleason was thought of and then dropped without more ado. Due to recent scandals and the resultant drastic shake-ups, the force is in good shape today. It was nonense to try and connect White with those scandals. The force was already badly demoralized when he entered office. Crowley and Lees were good chiefs in their day, probably the best in some respects the city has had. And yet in discipline and integrity the force at present is vastly better than during their respective regimes.

Another Stanford Spirit Message

Senator Leland Stanford's message from the unknown world to the Chicago mass meeting of spiritualists last Sunday night was not surprising news to the local followers of the cult. The latter, since the death of Stanford in 1893, have claimed repeatedly to have messages from his spirit. But like the Lake City [illegible] effect that he was still working for the interests of Stanford University, these messages were not compelling or suggestive in any form or manner. It is true Mrs. Stanford often told her intimate friends that she had had communications with the spirit of her husband and also with that of her dearly beloved son. But she was by no means under the domination of the leaders of spiritualism here or anywhere else. A sadly bereft mother and widow, these friends humored her in such statements because they [illegible] husband did likewise when on several occasions before he passed away she had informed him with every show of happiness that she had been talking to the spirit of their dead son. Stanford never claimed to have had a talk with the son's spirit, but, as I believe he once observed to Dr. David Starr Jordan, such communications with the spirits of the dear departed, if a person believed they had them, were a great comfort and in no sense were productive of harm. The old theory that there is a fourth dimension or space in which spirits live close and unseen to actual life was something Stanford was impatient of as a sane intellectual problem. Mrs. Stanford on the other hand in her later years looked upon the theory as both a pleasing and possible speculation. And this reasoning possibly had something to do with her firm belief that several times while riding between the Third and Townsend street depot and her Menlo Park home the spirit of her boy talked to and comforted her in the car window while the train was speeding along.

Maeterlinck Boxing Enthusiast

This has decidedly been Mrs. A. W. Scott, Jr.'s, week at the Tivoli, where she and a company of professional players have appeared for a worthy charity in the German author, Sudermann's, play of "Magda" and in Maeterlinck's emotional drama of "Mary Magdalene." Much deserved praise has been given the beauty and histrionic ability of Mrs. Scott, her beautiful and original Parisian gowns in "Magda" and the ambitious and superior sartorial art that stamped her costumes in the other play. The company is to tour Oakland, Los Angeles and other cities of the State. Mrs. Scott's husband and others, in making the necessary arrangements for the tour, have learned some interesting facts about the authors of these dramas which it will not be amiss to mention, in part at least, at this time. Maeterlinck, for instance, has of late become very fond of the manly art of boxing, in spite of the fact that several years ago he wrote the "Eulogy of the Sword" and seized the occasion in it to denounce boxing, speaking of it as a brute force and an exhibition of vulgar gestures with repulsive effects. Since then he has gone to see and taken delight in the feats of Carpentier, the French fighter, and has even taken lessons from professional boxers and now has a ring in his villa. It is also said that he has indulged in mental gymnastics about boxing, and will ere long write a pamphlet in praise of the art of Corbett, Peter Jackson, Jim Jeffries, et al.

Duffy Rule Affects Ruef

Colonel Dennis Duffy, friend of Governor Johnson and president of the State Board of Prison Directors, has evolved a new scheme for the parole of prisoners, and his fellow directors have heartily approved of it. A part of this workable and definite program provides that first termers cannot apply for a parole until half of their sentence is served. Unquestionably this action of the board is in answer to the recent rampant maudlin sentiment that a lot of convicted felons should be given another chance in life no matter how long their terms were and for how brief a time they had been in the penitentiary. There is no doubt either but what the new system of rules are the result of much thought following the recent and persistent efforts to get Ruef from behind the bars on a parole. But whether the Ruef agitation is or is not directly responsible for their formulation, the effect will be to keep him locked up until half of his fourteen-year sentence shall have expired. And this settles in the formal rules of the board what has all along been the emphatic personal belief of Governor Johnson as well as Colonel Duffy. I think Prosecutor Heney has always taken the same stand as those two men. In the light of penology and especially of very modern reformation of prisoners, the rules of parole adopted have the sanction of high authority. So it is difficult to imagine that the program will ever be changed or that anybody in power will have the hardihood to argue that exceptions be made to its general enforcement.

"Old Friends—" a Reminiscence

After having been organized in 1864, the "Old Friends," a famed society of friendship and sociability, is still in active existence and has established commodious headquarters on Market street, near Eighth. General H. Schaffner heads its list of officers and the venerable Colonel J. E. Slinkey still attends to the duties of secretary. In the eighties and early nineties Slinkey had a hotel in Sausalito on the high hill near the railroad ferry landing. In those days the society had many a meeting and bull's head breakfast in the caravansary and on its grounds, and a lot of prominent men, now gone, were always at those functions as felicitous speakers and happy participants. Those were the times when Colonel David Bank Sickels put into verse the significance and motto of the society, a sentimental rhyme which is still cherished by its members and the first verse of which, I believe, runs as follows:

"There are no friends like 'Old Friends,'
And none so good and true;
We greet them when we meet them,
As roses greet the dew:
No other friends are dearer,
Though born of kindred mould;
And while we prize the new ones,
We treasure more the old."

There have gone never to return to its sociable feasts and pow-wows the genial and brave Admiral A. Walker, Nat S. Britton, the millionaire and one of the best authorities in California on Spanish dishes, and particularly the bull's head breakfast; the old Grand Army veteran and first governor of [illegible] Gov. F. S. Salomon; the fastidious but gentlemanly Dr. F. F. Lord, Judge Robert Ferral, John Lord Love, the most popular police judge San Francisco ever had; J. A. Campbell, and a hundred and more good old souls. Today Justice H. A. Melvin is one of its treasured members, and the bench and bar, the medicos and commercial life, are well represented to maintain a good history and splendid traditions.

Noted Sleuths May Work at Fair

I saw Chief Detective P. J. Kindelon of the Southern Pacific on an Oakland ferryboat the other day. Kindelon retired as president of the International Association of Railroad Detectives and Special Agent at its recent annual meeting at Salt Lake City. J. W. Connelly of Washington, D. C., succeeded him. Connelly, Kindelon and other influential members of the association, which has about 600 members, think it will hold its annual session in San Francisco in 1915. Probably some of its members, trained for years to keep pickpockets and thieves away from railroad stations and off of trains, may offer their services to the local police and the exposition authorities to spot members of the light-fingered gentry who are bound to follow the crowds during exposition year. Kindelon is considered one of the best men in the country at the work and has in his office the photos and history of some of the most daring of this ilk. He is probably one of twenty members of the association who has made an exhaustive study of both pickpockets and tramps and a couple of hours are well spent to listen to him classify them and give them the odd names they are known by among the fellows of their different illegal callings. Kindelon, by the way, has found out that the tramp killed by a train near New Orleans some months ago was not "A No. 1—the Rambler," one of the most famous of hobos, as was at first supposed. The fellow was originally born in this city and still has relatives living here. Having the wanderlust to a marked degree, this hobo, who hides his real name under cabalistic marks, has ridden thousands of miles on a brakebeam. He is the author of a readable book on "Life and Adventurers of A No. 1" and has a graveyard lot and monument to himself in the village of Cambridge Springs, Pa.

Scott Failed to Win Harrison

It was an old, sensational fight and a disappointment to the two men for different reasons. But apparently it makes no difference to them at this late day. Of course, they make no reference to it, but their friends are quietly recalling the episode. I refer to Henry T. Scott and Burton F. Harrison, the new Governor-General of the Philippines. When San Francisco was making a desperate struggle in Washington against New Orleans to have this city selected as the site for an exposition to celebrate the opening of the Panama Canal, a strong and influential delegation was sent on from here. In the latter was Scott. When the San Franciscans got busy rounding up votes in the House, they soon found out that Harrison, then a Congressman from a district in New York City, was working tooth and nail for New Orleans. Harrison had married Miss Crocker of this city. Scott had been one of the executors of her father's will and a business manager for her and her brother and sister. On this account the consensus of opinion of the San Francisco committee was:

"Leave it to Scott. He will see Harrison and get him into the camp."

The shrewd and wary Scott, who had button-holed many a Congressman when he was trying to get contracts years ago for the Union Iron Works and knows how hard the game was to pin down a definite promise, said he would try and see what could be done.

In spite of Scott and strong influence from New York, Harrison was all for New Orleans and couldn't be reached with a forty-foot pole. Scott was disappointed. He didn't have a look in. To add to Scott's confusion and before the final vote in favor of this city, two wavering members of the House were pulled down off the fence on the New Orleans side by the New Yorker who had married a San Francisco society girl and heiress.

Chase May Play Golf All the Time

The Democrats as the "ins" and a hungry lot for office plums have dropped from federal officers a score and more of Republican office-holders in various parts of the State, including Postmaster J. N. Chase of San Jose and Collector Cornelius Pendelton down south. So he who runs may read the fate soon in store for Postmaster Arthur Fisk of this city in order to make room for Charley Fay, a Phelan pet. With Fisk, of course, will go his assistant, Billy Burke. Chase, by the way, first got his place when Postmaster Hawley died. In this connection there is an amusing story told on Chase. Not anybody at Del Monte of late has any more devotion for and love of golf than the San Jose man. He is very fond of the outdoor sport, so much so in fact that when influential parties suggested that he accept the vacant postmastership he bluntly wanted to know—

"But will it interfere with my daily golf play, or at least two or three times a week?"

When assured that he could play the game late every afternoon, Chase was much pleased and relieved and replied that under those conditions he would accept the job from Uncle Sam.

And he got the appointment against the field before the end of the week. Now the friends are chafing him with the observation that he can play golf any old time. Laughingly, he is replying that's what he intends doing.

Nixon Courted Arrest--Successful

Evidently from the gossip in police circles [illegible] E. Nixon of Reno, the fat, jovial and youthful son of the late U. S. Senator Nixon of Nevada, had more of his peculiar ambition realized the other day than he bargained for. Nixon was arrested twice within one day for auto speeding, gave bail and then jumped it by flying home to mother in the Sagebrush metropolis. There have been a good many arrests lately for fast speeding and accidents and some inevitable public indignation. Probably young Nixon did not fancy all the latter in connection with his repeated arrests. There was a time, however, when he just ached for a formal arrest by a bluecoat. Not so long ago a patrolman near Golden Gate Park stopped his machine in the early evening en route to town. The officer simply wanted to know if Nixon and his companion had just seen a big machine running fast towards the beach. For some reason Nixon thought the officer was after him, for he lost no time in blurting out after he was signalled to stop:

"Arrest me, if you want to."

Surprised, the bluecoat said he was foolish and then made his inquiry.

"Oh, I thought I was going to be arrested," repeated the talkative young fellow. "I don't care if you do, for I've never been arrested and would like to see what it is like."

"Your time will come soon enough, young fellow, if you talk like that," replied Mr. Officer, sizing him up and wondering at so queer a desire.

Hill Again Shows Democracy

Good Roads, Sam Hill's Hobby

That successful advocate and father of good roads on the Pacific Coast, Samuel Hill, who will shortly be here on one of his occasional visits, is, by the way, a son-in-law of "Jim" Hill and for awhile was in the railway service up north. Sam Hill retired from this work for other activities and is a man of means. His intelligent and devoted hobby today is good roads all over the nation, as well as on this coast. The elder Hill and his three sons, Louis W., J. N. and Walter J., see and realize the economic value and other benefits of good roads and are heartily in favor of the splendid work in that respect being done by their relative. Some people here acquainted with the family, as well as Sam Hill, say Hill pere always wanted and expected his sons to be business men after they got degrees at Yale. Louis W. is now chairman of the board of the Great Northern. At Yale he took honors in philosophy. Walter J. is in the iron business. James N. is a railroad man, although at Yale he was looked upon as a most promising student in the Roman languages. It is said of him that his professor wanted him to take a course in Europe and then come back as his assistant. Hill took great satisfaction with this compliment but is said to have remarked:

"An old gentleman out in St. Paul thinks he has discovered business ability in me. He is a positive old fellow and I'll have to bow to his decision for a career for me. And then you know, he is of the opinion he has the first claim on me."

Tipping Not Killed

The storm of agitation against the tipping system a year ago [illegible] commercial travelers took a very prominent part seems to have spent itself. At least this is what waiters, bellboys and other servants in the big hotels here think. According to them, they continue to enjoy tips and they do not hear any more about objections. This is why they are not bothering about the recent ruling of Postmaster-General Burleson that tips in the accounts of postoffice inspectors will not be honored for anybody but train porters. Burleson taboos all tips to hotel waiters, taxi drivers and stenographers. One of the officials of the Hotel Waiters' Association in town points out that last year the Treasury Department made a ruling about traveling expenses of employes still in effect. By this ruling tips are allowed for hotel servants, railway porters and steamship stewards. A waiter can be fed for fifty cents and a train porter for twenty-five cents. These treasury employes also can give a steamship steward $3. This was probably the first formal recognition by the Federal Government of the existence of the tipping system. It came at the height of last year's agitation and was consequently greatly welcomed by the receivers of tips. The tips are not as large as they formerly were in many instances, but in the big caravansaries in town all employes get them, even to the barboys. Bell boys count on $25 or $30 a month in this way, while waiters appear to average something like $60 a month. Hotels on the coast have always ignored the system. They pay, for illustration, their waiters $2 a day, and if they can get that much or more in fees they do not care. To their credit, coast hotels have never leased out or rented coatroom privileges. In the East some of these coatroom leases because of tips rent all the way from $5000 to $10,000 a year.

TIPPING GOES MERRILY ON DESPITE MUCH AGITATION

THE KNAVE

FINANCIAL TROUBLE AND DUKE OF MANCHESTER NOT YET DIVORCED

"I Am Responsible—" Osterhaus

The story from New York that Rear Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, U. S. N., retired, who is just back from a visit to his father in Germany, intends to start a canary bird farm, is not surprising to his old friends here and at Mare Island, where he was once in command under Secretary of War Von Meyer in succession to Rear Admiral Tom Phelps of Oakland, now retired. Canary birds were always a hobby with the admiral and he frequently told his friends he hoped some day to raise them on a large scale for the market. "Dutch" was the nickname his intimates had for him. His father, who became a brigadier-general in the Civil War, also had the same familiar name. But it does not run to his son, who is at present a lieutenant in the navy. The father, the brigadier-general, is mentioned by General W. T. Sherman in his "Personal Memoirs." It was in 1911 that Admiral Osterhaus left Mare Island to assume the commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet. Of rough exterior, the admiral has many appealing traits of mind and heart. Anybody fond of birds won at the outset his esteem. Years ago when captain of a battleship of the Atlantic fleet the future admiral showed through the signal flags the kind of a man he was. Here's the tale. During maneuvers his ship poorly executed a certain evolution. Quick from the signal bridge of the commander-in-chief, Rear Admiral Evans, came an inquiry:

"What is the name of the officer of the deck?"

This is a standard form of rebuke. It so happened that the officer of the deck handling the ship was comparatively inexperienced and new to the ship. Captain Osterhaus signalled back:

"I am responsible."

Of course he was not responsible, but he did not mean that the officer should be discouraged at the outset of his service on that vessel. Every one in the fleet understood.

$3000 a Month for Hotel Floor

Theodore Marx, the interior decorator of St. Louis, has mapped out some costly and artistic effects for the apartments in the new wing of the St. Francis which D. S. Jackling, the mining millionaire formerly of Salt Lake, is to occupy as his future San Francisco home. Jackling is to have the entire [illegible] floor and part of the suite will be a private ballroom. The decorations Marx has planned will cost a pretty penny. The rent Jackling will pay for the floor is said to be about $3000 a month. His predecessor as a high rent payer at the hotel, which was a year before and at the time of the fire, was, I believe, the late Herman Oelrichs. The latter paid over $1400 for a suite each month. Marx has done similar work for many people, including the St. Louis and Southern California homes of Busch, the brewery magnate. And this reminds me, the St. Louis artist has been admiring some new homes and grounds in this city, down on the peninsula and at Santa Barbara. He is credited with admiring very much the delicate and colorful study in glass and gold mosaics inlaid in cream colored Monti stone that is to be found in the entrance vestibule of the new A. B. Spreckels mansion at Octavia and Washington streets. He picks out the Charles Eaton gardens at Montecito, near Santa Barbara, as worthy of the mention and praise it is given in Baedeker's guide. There is to be found a Japanese tea garden laid out by a Japanese gardener from Tokio; also a beautiful Italian garden, with its old world trees and bulbs, and a lake over which float Venetian gondolas brought from that land of romance.

Meeting for Bryan Helped Fox

In spite of the bitter fight made against him, Tom Fox has at least been confirmed in the appointment as postmaster at Sacramento. The result of the contest is pleasing to the people of the capital city and has been received with more than general satisfaction by the rank and file of the Democratic party. For one thing, the latter people are now convinced that influences without the party cannot prevent the Wilson administration from properly recognizing faithful workers and adherents of the party in California. They have also been made to realize most emphatically that Democratic fealty is remembered and appreciated by men high in the present regime like Secretary of State Bryan, Secretary of the Interior Lane and others. By the stand they took in the Fox matter, Phelan and Caminetti have greatly strengthened themselves with California Democrats. Senator Perkins' open and fair stand in the squabble comes in for much praise, while the conduct of Senator Works of Los Angeles is looked upon as surprisingly petty and mean. In it all, Fox has good reason to thank his stars that he took a prominent part in arranging a big and noteworthy meeting at Sacramento for Bryan during the midst of the presidential campaign. That potent fact answered a multitude of objections made in the contest against him and prevented influences almost ablaze with confidence from succeeding in having President Wilson withdraw the nomination.

Walking Keeps Lawlor in Health

The announcement of the engagement of Superior Judge W. P. Lawlor takes from the ranks of eligible bachelors one of their most prominent members. In this latter respect, he long classed with James Horsburgh, the railroad general passenger agent, who became a benedict shortly after the big fire. As a superior judge, Lawlor has had a stormy career, making bitter enemies of many an old friend and yet forming a lot of new friendship in all walks of life. He is the most prominent case in San Francisco where a candidate for office was saved by the votes of women. Probably as a means for persistent exercise, Lawlor has long been one of the best walkers hereabouts. There is not a part of town but what he has hiked through and over many a time. Never posing, of course, as a champion pedestrian, Lawlor has yet walked all [illegible] of the bay for hours at a time, utterly tiring out companions who started with him and who seemed to possess more energy and strength than he. And he has found in this kind of repeated exercise, like others and more notable the late President Harrison of Indianapolis, a fine means of promoting health and strength. He properly ascribes to walking the fine health he has for long enjoyed. There was a time when he liked to see others in various sports and exercises, any old kind in fact. It was always a sane appreciation. They have tried to use this fact to his undoing in bitter election contests, but always without effect. And in this former appreciation he has never found cause for regret, and by no means has felt called upon to make apologies.

California Still Golden State

A late Washington, D. C., report shows that in 1912 California took the lead in this country in the production of gold. Its value was over twenty millions. Colorado, which has at times in recent years been in the lead, is a close second with over eighteen millions and a half. Alaska climbs steadily towards the front with over seventeen millions, while Nevada makes a splendid showing with over thirteen millions. South Dakota is fifth with over seven millions, and then comes Utah, Arizona and Montana, each with less than five millions.

It has been many a year since gold from a productive standpoint has been king in this State. Oranges have long had that honor. Fuel oil in the past few years has had second place and is constantly climbing upwards. No doubt when all the returns for the orange season of 1912-13 are in, or more exactly the year of 1913, oranges may be found to have fallen below fuel oil because of last winter's killing frosts in Southern California. Canned fruits and vegetables generally hold the third place in California, and then comes the value of lumber and deciduous fruits, if there is included among the latter in their shipping season apples and grapes. A study of all these and other products of the soil shows what a productive State California is and how large an annual tonnage they give the transportation lines. Their aggregate growth in the next ten years certainly warrants to some extent at least the belief that California will by that time have five big overland roads instead of the three it now enjoys.

Richards' Mission Story

Another story about California will soon be on the press, with the attractive and meaningful title of "Romance of the Camino Real." Its author is the Santa Barbara judge and lawyer, Jarret T. Richards, now a Palace hotel guest, who as long ago as 1879 was a formidable candidate for a Supreme Court justiceship. The subject has been a life study with him and he has written in a most appreciative and sympathetic vein. The illustrations are by an artist of Santa Barbara, the well-known Alex Harmer. The Spanish missions, their rise and decline, the king's highway and the character and work of Junipero Serra constitute a most interesting phase of the history of this coast and California, and those who have read Richards' proof sheets are of the opinion that the author has made splendid use of his abundant material. His own personal investigations have been productive of some new light and facts of the missions in their heyday and of Serra's active life in and around Monterey. As can and is to be expected, the southern lawyer's subject and consequent treatment is not as broad as that of the playwright and historian, John S. McGroarty, when [illegible] "The History and Romance," nor like that of Zoeth S. Eldridge in his writings of California history. The two latter abound in much controversy and attacks on Spanish and white leaders in the early days. Richards has aimed at a comprehensive and picturesque treatment of the one central phase of early coast history, with a personal and warm romantic note running through it "like a thread of gold."

Duke Wanted Purse Handy

The Duke of Manchester, whose wife was a Miss Zimmerman of Cincinnati, bobs up in the cable news again with financial worries from the London money lenders.

Even as long ago as 1895, the duke was short of ready cash. This was the time he came here with his pretty American wife and by appointment met at the Del Monte hotel his shrewd and hard-fisted father-in-law, Eugene Zimmerman, one of Ohio's well-known millionaires. As developed later on, the Del Monte family conference was over the duke's financial needs, his habits and his promises "to be good." Zimmerman pere unloosened his purse strings on that occasion, but to what extent was never made known. Just previously to that time the titled young man had fought and won in the London metropolis a damage suit for breach of promise and had quit in disgust his temporary newspaper career in New York, where he was being starred by an enterprising journalist. All this was very pleasing to old man papa-in-law and the duke found him in what was considered for him a very liberal mood. Zimmerman is credited with being fond of the duke, who is a good looking and most likeable fellow and has advanced him a lot of money. But Manchester in his wild days before his marriage piled up a lot of debts and he and his duchess have always had very large yearly expenditures. So what has come from Ohio has not in any way been sufficient to get a clean monetary bill of health from lenders of money. Besides, the Cincinnati Croesus in most of his moods objects to being a financial target for his son-in-law. In fact, it is one of his old, repeated complaints that a millionaire seems always to be a target for everybody and everything. Some people in town, who know him, recall that he once announced that if Roosevelt was elected President he would go to live either in England or Ireland and become a subject of King George. That was why the duke so earnestly hoped Teddy would get back into the White House. Manchester like to have his rich relative and his check book close at hand and preferably as a permanent instead of an occasional Santa Claus. The duke, by the way, has two castles in Ireland, Tanderagee and Kylemore, a broad domain and a valuable gallery of old masters. But they are either entailed or plastered with mortgages. The latter castle is said to have one of the finest views in Ireland, while Tanderagee, over a century old, is built on the stronghold of an historic Irish outlaw, Redmond O'Hanlon.

MOVE TO BETTER STREET TRAFFIC

Manager Caine of Commercial Club Has Problem Under Consideration.

A movement embracing the changing of several downtown streets to facilitate traffic is being planned by the Oakland Commercial Club. Managing Director Joseph E. Caine is now [illegible] the problem, and next week committees will be appointed to look into the matter. The plan is tentative and includes the extension of Sixteenth street and several other means of gaining outlets from Broadway.

"Four streets enter Broadway at Fourteenth," declared Caine, "and there is a great congestion as a result. No [illegible] traffic is any heavier and while some change may be cheaply made, is the time to alter this.

"I have no definite plans I presume the city engineer's office could devise them better than I. We might run Sixteenth street through in some way, or we might open other avenues into San Pablo from the north and facilitate travel, somehow, on side streets. It would not take much work or money."

The matter will be broached at the next meeting of the club by Caine and by Walter Leimert, who has made a study of the matter.

President Harmon Bell of the Commercial Club will Monday appoint a committee on harbor development the duty of this committee being to wage a campaign to gain shipping line centers on Oakland's harbor.

The recent location of the Lawrence Steamship line [illegible] move in the campaign to be started by the club. Steamship lines will be approached, told of Oakland's new harbor and the advantages of this side of the bay, and inducements offered for these firms to locate here. The plan will be considered in full Monday evening.

PRINCE OF WALES GIVEN NEW TITLE

Dubbed "Prince Peter Pan" by Undergraduates of the Oxford University.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Oxford University undergraduates who dubbed the prince of Wales "Pragger Waggett" last year when he took up his abode in Magdalen College, have now given him the new title of "Prince Peter Pan."

He strenuously objects to it because it implies not that "he won't grow up," but that he is now allowed to.

Although he has come to the age when the average English lad would be insulted by any suggestion of parental control, he still is under the absolute sway of the queen and is still treated as a young boy.

During his stay in Germany he tried numberless patent specifics in the hope of attaining the mustache for which he wants pines, but so far there is not a vestige of growth.

The prince fervently believes that the appearance of a real mustache will be signal for his emancipation.

MISCREANTS SHOW VICIOUS HATRED

Desecration of Grave of Tolstoi Angers Friends of Great Man.

VIENNA, Sept. 20.—A violent anti-Russian agitation has broken out over the systematic desecrations which are being practiced on the grave of Tolstoi. Unspeakable and indescribable atrocities are constantly being committed and although an extra guard has been set, no clew has been found.

Even if the culprits are discovered, it is doubtful if a charge could be sustained against them as it has been the Russian custom for centuries to practice [illegible] over the graves of all who die outside the Greek faith, and indeed it is considered commendable.

Unquestionably the present outrages are the work of the Black Hand, which considered Tolstoi the arch enemy of their faith and organization. Peasants in the neighborhood of Tolstoi's home are highly incensed over these desecrations and have sent [illegible] and visited the town authorities, but, although the guard has been changed several times, the miscreants still are undiscovered.

The occasion is being utilized by revolutionists outside of Russia to renew the fusillade, for Tolstoi is still the best asset of the progressives of Russia.

Madame Tolstoi is heartbroken. She is making every endeavor to stop the systematic profanation.

Russian reformers are talking of making an appeal to the outside world, whose opinion prevented Tolstoi's banishment, and asking help to protect his grave, which will always [illegible]

COAL OPERATORS FORM BIG UNION

Organize Protective Association With $1,000,000 Fund to Protect Interests.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 20.—Coal operators with mines along the Chesapeake & Ohio, Kanawha & Michigan, Virginian, and Norfolk & Western railroads held a meeting here yesterday and organized the operators' protective association. A fund of $1,000,000 is said to have raised to protect the interests of the mines in the organization. It was announced that the operators oppose the "growth of socialism and other destructive and revolutionary doctrines among their miners and employes." It is also stated that efforts of "rival coal interests in other states and their employes to injure the coal mining business of West Virginia" is opposed. The new organization insists that one of the principal reasons for banding together is to maim competition and giving employes a fair compensation.

Many prominent coal operators of southern West Virginia took part in the meeting. That mine operators of western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois had conspired against the West Virginia operators was declared in a formal statement.

Militant Suffragette's Visit Resented by Many Women

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—If Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst is not allowed by the immigration authorities to land in this country, the sighs of relief which will waft her on her homeward way will amount to a respectable gale, for the suffragists are less anxious even than the police for Mrs. Pankhurst's visit.

A woman in charge at one of the suffrage headquarters threw up her hands in despair when asked whether her organization would take any part in welcoming the English militant.

"Now it's begun!" she exclaimed. "I knew she would make trouble for us. I wish she would stay at home."

METHODS NOT APPROVED.

Although comparatively few suffragists appear to perfect apparent that many of them are laboring to conceal the same sentiment. Most of the leaders say they honor Mrs. Pankhurst as a woman, but that they don't approve of her methods. Her visit is going to put them in an awkward position. If they don't pay any attention to her they will be accused of a slight to a woman who has spent her life working for "the cause." If they do show her attention, their action may be misconstrued as approval of militant methods.

"This is the choice of evils which Mrs. Pankhurst has forced upon the American women and a good many of them are resenting it. The Woman's Political Union has almost split on the subject of the proposed dinner. This adds another element to the resentment with which Mrs. Pankhurst's coming is regarded in some quarters. Many are saying that it is not fair of the English woman to import her own troubles into this country and endanger the harmony of the American suffrage societies.

It is strange that the sensible solution of the whole difficulty seems to have occurred to only a very few of the leaders here. That solution is to follow Mrs. Pankhurst's own example, and leave her alone. Neither she nor her organization ever gave a dinner to a visiting American suffragist in England. She has had plenty of opportunities, too. But the Pankhurst Society, alone among the English organization, has never extended a single courtesy to an American leader, not even to Mrs. Catt, the international president.

WHY NOT RECIPROCATE?

"Why all this talk of what we shall or shall not do for Mrs. Pankhurst?" said Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National Society. "Why not do just as Mrs. Pankhurst does when we visit England? I have been there repeatedly, Mrs. Catt has been there, other presidents of our organizations have been there. But I have yet to know of a luncheon, or a dinner or a reception being given by Mrs. Pankhurst or her society for any of us.

"When Mrs. Pankhurst first visited this country we all entertained her to the best of our ability. The National Society gave a reception for her and there were dinners and luncheons and flowers and carriages for her wherever she went. Since then, we, for our part, have been in her country; but the Women's Social and Political Union has never extended any of these courtesies to us. Wouldn't the natural inference be that Mrs. Pankhurst had signified thus her own desires and that we should be doing the simple and sensible thing if we did not extend to her the courtesies she forbore to extend to us?

BOUGHT SASH FOR PARADE.

"It is true that, as I was reminded by some one the other day, I have spoken and lectured many times in England. But I never received one penny for it! Not only that, but I never had a carriage furnished to take me to the hall. I hired my own. If I marched in one of their parades, I bought my own sash. And what was true of me in these circumstances was true of other American women."

It is said that the only explanation ever given by the Pankhurst Society of their failure to show these courtesies was the plea that they were "very busy."

"Well," said an American leader the other day, "we are somewhat busy ourselves just now."

From all of which it may be inferred that Mrs. Pankhurst's leisure hours will be more numerous during the coming visit than they were on her previous sojourn here.

CRITICISM NOT JUSTIFIED.

"We are being criticised for inviting Mrs. Pankhurst to a public dinner," said Mrs. Nora Blatch de Forest of that organization. "I don't see why. It doesn't mean that the Woman's Political Union approves of militancy. Our board is divided on the subject. Some believe that militancy was justifiable in England. Others—including my mother, Mrs. Blatch, and myself—think Mrs. Pankhurst has made serious mistakes. But I would not refuse to honor a woman of her character, ability and service to the cause, even though I thought her wrong in some things."

"Will there be a demonstration when she comes?"

"At the dock? Not unless one person can make a 'demonstration.' When she came over before, General Henry, surveyor of the port, and a bitter antiwould issue only one pass. I suppose that will happen again this time. The pass will probably be used by Mrs. John Winters Brannan, who is an ardent admirer of Mrs. Pankhurst, and believes in militant methods—for England. The demonstration at the dock, therefore, will be so imperceptible that not even the antis will be able to detect it.

"When Mrs. Pankhurst came to this country the first time her visit was under the auspices of our organization. This trip is made entirely according to her own plans and all the money she receives will be used for her own work in England. People think there will be opposition to her now. But it can hardly be greater than it was when she first came. And you would be surprised to know how many persons have something like sympathy with her. She will probably draw crowds."

Although the suffragists are, as already pointed out, far from enthusiastic over the coming of Mrs. Pankhurst they unite in scouting the idea that her visit will stir up militancy over here.

"Mrs. Pankhurst has done what she said she would do," said one of the local leaders. "She has made the English suffragettes look like drabbling idiots. But nothing of the sort is needed over here and her methods haven't a shadow of an excuse for being considered by American women—and they won't be! Mrs. Pankhurst herself has recognized that fact repeatedly. She isn't coming here to help us, anyway, but solely to help herself. I think that lets us out."

JOHN DREW DONS TIGHTS IN NEW PART

"The Fight" and "The Lure" Prove Two More Big Sensations.

(By ROSWELL DAGUE.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—John Drew in tights! The very thought of our immaculate John in anything but dress clothes is so frightfully revolutionary that it is small wonder we are hearing coming to some strange end! However, are we going to know now what the proper thing to wear is since Drew has deserted us? Add to this calamity the police interference in the case of two "white slave" plays, after a storm of protest had been raised against their "immorality," and it is plain to see that we are having exciting times in the New York theatrical field.

No one seems altogether able to agree just how many years it has been since John Drew took to being our leading men's clothes model. Probably [illegible] without going to the records. It is, though, something like 20 years since he said farewell to Shakespeare and "howdy do" to Somerset Maugham and his ilk. And that means the younger generation knows him not at all in doublet and hose.

So his appearance here as Benedict in Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing" has been a real theatrical function. Interest ran high to see how well the now no longer youthful John would appear in fleshlings, and whether his mustache would give way to a beardless face. We are breathing easier now, though, for we find he does not need a cloak for concealment and the soldier Benedick is permitted mustachios.

PRODUCTION DISAPPOINTS.

As for the remainder of the production, it must be confessed New York has found it a bit disappointing. Not that it is not well worth seeing, with Laura Hope Crews as Beatrice, Mary Boland as Hero, and the other well-known members of the cast. But it is one thing to be a modern man or woman on the stage, uttering polite dialogue, and an entirely different matter to voice the sometimes tongue-tying lines of Shakespeare in such a fashion that they are not mere words. Mere intelligence and good intent, such as this production shows, are not enough for Shakespeare unless accompanied by training of a particular sort. Mr. Drew has had that training—but it was 20 years ago. Mr. Drew's associates, for the most part, have never had it at all.

The result is a performance of the seldom-seen comedy, which interests, but fails to thrill. The best commentary on its reception is the fact that it has already been announced that Mr. Drew will later appear in a revival of his former success, Haddon Chambers' comedy, "The Tyranny of Tears," given first some 10 years ago.

"The Lure" and "The Fight" have monopolized the remainder of the public's attention here. Of "The Lure" I wrote last time. "The Fight," in the slang of the day, "goes 'The Lure' one better." This new piece by Bayard Weiller, author of last season's biggest popular success, "Within the Law," tells of a political campaign in a small Colorado town where a woman candidate for mayor and for decency is opposed by every form of vice.

SCENE CAUSES TROUBLE.

Like "The Lure," one scene is laid in a house of ill fame. Unlike "The Lure," this scene is dragged in to make a sensation. It has. It resulted in the closing of both plays temporarily, after investigation by the police, and probably will mean their permanent extinction sooner or later. While "The Lure" would probably have been unmolested here throughout the season, because of certain elements of strength and sincerity, it possessed the sensationalism of "The Fight," and was a little too much even for the New York police to stand. And what the police of this city, with its Becker case and Rosenthal shooting, cannot countenance is surely a bit more than the average theater goer is willing to pay his money to see, when he is looking for enjoyment.

Bentley Ostrich Farm Now Controlled by Oakland Capital

The celebrated BENTLEY OSTRICH FARM, located at East Fourteenth and High streets, known as one of Oakland's most unique show places, has recently changed ownership. The new organization, backed by Oakland capital, has assumed entire charge and the place will hereafter be known as The Golden State Ostrich Farm, Inc.

The officers of the new concern are Colonel Converse J. Smith, president, Eugene Buttles, vice-president and treasurer, and Edward C. Smith, secretary.

The business will be continued as heretofore under the personal supervision of Mr. Buttles, who has managed it for the past four years, which fact is the best assurance in the world that visitors to the farm and purchasers of ostrich feather products will have the satisfaction of knowing that their wants will be well taken care of.

The aim of the new company will be to expand, not only locally, but throughout the entire country, making of this enterprise one well worthy of the consideration of our people, who take a pardonable pride in any institution that adds fame and prestige to Oakland and the east bay cities.

The most competent help only will be employed, thus giving the company a decided advantage in the manufacturing and repair departments that cannot but redound to the benefit of its numerous patrons.

Residents of the bay cities will be particularly favored by being able to personally inspect and order any designs in trimming, plumes or fancies that taste may dictate that can be produced from ostrich feathers.

There are over 75 gigantic birds continually on exhibition, and they are recognized as the finest specimens in America. During the summer season any number of young ostrich chicks may be seen, forming a curious and most interesting sight.

In the salesroom are displayed a large assortment of the most beautiful plumes, feather novelties, boas, stoles, etc., and many other articles appertaining to this wonderful and novel industry, all made of the best material by skilled workers and sold at prices that are generally recognized as lower than any others of like quality.

The middleman's profits are eliminated; you buy direct from the producer, making a saving well worthy the time and attention you give, while the company in the past has enjoyed the reputation of giving the most satisfactory results in renovating and remodeling all ostrich feather products.

The Golden State Ostrich Farm extends a cordial invitation to the public to visit the farm and salesroom and place its own estimate on the many interesting sights afforded, feeling confident that the result will be one of general satisfaction.

All East Fourteenth street cars to Melrose, Fitchburg, Elmhurst, San Leandro and Hayward, including the Key Route, pass the gate. The Southern Pacific Melrose extension is only two blocks away, making the location a most convenient one.

PARISIANS AGAIN FILL GAY PARIS

Stragglers Returning From the Country and Americans Drifting Home.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Paris is now filling up with Parisians. Last stragglers from the mountains and seashores are being driven home by bad weather. The theaters are again well patronized and at the Cafe de La Paix one hears less English than a month ago. Returning travelers are thankful to get even a berth in a crowded stateroom on the steamers; many will have to wait to get even the poorest accommodations.

After a month spent at Bad Kissengen, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim of New York have taken apartments at the Hotel Ritz, where they will remain for several weeks.

Mrs. J. P. Morgan, with Mrs. Frances Johnson, came to Paris a few days ago from a tour of Switzerland, Austria and Italy. They are staying at the Hotel Crillon.

The American colony will soon have to regret the loss of Mrs. and Miss Arthur Brevoort. Madame Gatti-Casazza and Madame Olive Fremstad sailed on the Kron Prinz Wilhelm on Wednesday.

CENTURY LACKS HISTORIC FASHION

Artists, Novelists and Musicians Voice Opinions Regarding Garb.

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Has the twentieth century yet produced a fashion for history? This is the question which is troubling the souls of our thoughtful and frivolous women. I quote the opinions of some of our leading women on the subject.

Princess Lucien Murat, who is a painter of no mean talent, is of the opinion that the most characteristic mark of the twentieth century will be found to be its successful adaption of eastern art to feminine fashions. The influence of the Russian ballet, of the wonderful coloring of Bakst, have, she says, profoundly modified French taste and will appear to our descendants as the most marked fashion of the century.

The novelist, Mme. Daniel Lasseur, does not think that the twentieth century has yet produced any fashion capable of being recollected a hundred years hence, as in the manner of the Panier skirt of the eighteenth century, or the crinoline of the middle of the nineteenth. The present tight fitting dresses and high waist lines are, she says, only reminiscent of the past modes of directorie and the empire.

Madame Armande De Polignac-Chabannes, the well known musician, says that the flat skirt seems most likely to be picked out by posterity as the dominant note of the twentieth century modes.

Madame Rachilne, the novelist, chooses the "Juppe collette" and the turban, and Madame Aymert de Pierrebourg, better known as the novelist "Claude Perval," the narrow skirt and the large hat as the marked feature of the age, while Madame Alphonse Daudet would put forward the tunic, be it Greek or Oriental, as the fashion which will live a hundred years.

Madame Anna Held, American by marriage, French by birth and Parisian by residence, says:

"The stage has no intention of allowing young women who frequent the race courses to dictate the fashion. There is no place where a beautiful costume can be shown to better advantage than on the stage, and from it will come the fashion which historians will select as characteristic of the twentieth century."

COL. GOETHALS PARDONS FORMER CANAL EMPLOYE

PANAMA, Sept. 20.—Colonel George W. Goethals, chairman of the Panama canal commission, acting on the recommendation of Governor Metcalf, yesterday ordered the pardon of J. Frank Houston of Kentucky, a former canal employe, who was under sentence to serve 10 years' imprisonment for killing Harry Stern at Gatun February 8. The killing was the outcome of jealousy on the part of Houston because of relations between Stern and Mrs. Houston. The canal zone supreme court Thursday handed down an opinion affirming the decision of the lower court which sentenced Houston.

In accordance with the policy of the canal commission dealing with prisoners released from the penitentiary, Houston will be required to leave the canal zone.

PARIS SHOT IN HAND AND THEN GETS SENTENCE

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—Fred W. Clements, aged 19, on probation for grand larceny, from Judge Dunne's court, walked the straight and narrow path until he stopped, curious, on the street some weeks ago. A crowd had gathered. A shot was fired and he got it in the hand. Bad companions were near. He was arrested for violating his probation. The wound in the hand looked suspicious. Today the court sentenced him to five years in San Quentin, but suspended judgment, sending him to the Preston reform school until he shall be 21, when his release will come.

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 20.—At the meeting of the Bakersfield Realty Board last night the plan to invite the State Federation of Realty Boards to hold its 1914 convention in Bakersfield, and the delegates elected to this year's convention, were instructed to vote in favor. The delegates are T. M. McMeans, C. E. Cooper, J. A. Lynch, alternates, C. W. Newbery. A resolution was also adopted advocating the use of home materials and labor in building the new roads under the county bond issue of $2,500,000. Another communication was sent to the State Highway Commission saying the board here favors asphalt concrete for the state highway.

Slow Work on Grand Avenue.

Paving on Grand avenue is going on at a snail's pace. Indeed no comparison does injustice to the snail. The contractors are making progress at the slowest rate possible. Apparently they are under contract to be as dilatory as they can be. They have only a few men pottering along as if the job were to last through all eternity. At this rate Grand avenue will be torn up and impassable during the rainy season.

Street Commissioner Baccus should make the contractors get a move on. They are trifling with the city. They are not going ahead with their contract in good faith. In a little while they will be asking extensions of time and making lying excuses for their failure to complete the paving job on time. The street department should call time on them and refuse to grant an indulgence. [illegible] be undeserved, but an outrage on the residents along the avenue.

The City Improvement Company, a San Francisco corporation, has the contract for paving Grand avenue. The same outfit took the contract to pave Fourteenth street. The work was held up for nearly a year when it ought to have been completed in three months. Extension after extension of time was granted the dilatory contractors. Each time the excuses offered were mere subterfuges. The paving was delayed till the people residing and doing business along Fourteenth street were infuriated.

When the contract was let for paving Grand avenue THE TRIBUNE reminded the officials of the street department that the contractors had made a record for procrastination, and warned them that the people would not put up with that sort of thing any longer. Nevertheless the old game of delay and palaver is being repeated. The street department will be to blame if it allows any flimflamming with the Grand avenue contract.

Evidently the work is being purposely delayed. What that purpose is will be exposed by THE TRIBUNE if any extensions of time are asked for. It is about time the rights of citizens should be considered by street contractors.

Seeking happiness by chasing pleasure is like joy-riding in an automobile—it often ends in disaster, sorrow and death. Happiness is a result of living right rather than an object sought by gratifying the senses. Happiness is a distinct and different thing from pleasure. Pleasure may be innocent or it may be sinful and debasing. Happiness is always innocent and elevating. It is the fruit of virtue and righteousness, and can never be achieved by chasing the vanities and vices which intoxicate the senses and appeal to appetites and animal desires. Happiness never brings one to remorse and repentance, or retribution. Pleasure often does all these things, and more. It is the ignis fatuus of life—the false beacon that brings many a bark to wreck on the rocks—a light marking the pathway to misery and perdition.

Huerta says an election will be held to choose a president of Mexico. He adds that it will be a fair election and that he will not be a candidate. How can a fair election be held with the country in the throes of civil war? In the districts recognizing Huerta's authority or overawed by his troops, the voting will be all one way. In the districts held by the revolutionists the voting will be all the other way. Fear and force will dominate the elections in every section of Mexico. Huerta's declaration that he will not be a candidate amounts to nothing, since it is certain that he will not recognize the election of anybody but Felix Diaz. The election has already been held so far as he is concerned—unless Huerta should decide to run a more subservient candidate. Elections in Mexico are farces when they are not tragedies.

The clerical college president who chastised his father for misconduct evidently believes that sparing the rod spoils the parent. Whether he got an over or underdose of parental discipline in his youth does not appear, but in applying corporeal punishment he has reversed the rule that it is the privilege of parents to flog their children. Still we do not think flogging parents will ever become popular in this country. Even in Indiana it is considered cruelty to animals.

It does not appear that Dr. Aked's advice to Judge Van Fleet to be lenient with Diggs had any effect. The sentences are certainly stiff. The judge could have ordered the young men confined in a county jail, and he could have omitted to say that the prisoners were to stay in jail till their fines are paid. On the whole it can be safely said that he did not unduly temper justice with mercy.

Interest in State Highway Bonds.

In the scramble to get State highways built in the different counties, the provision of the highway law requiring each county to pay the interest on all money expended within its borders seems to have been overlooked. The act of 1909 provides that the interest on the four per cent bonds shall be paid by the counties in which the money is expended, each county being liable for the proportion of the money expended within its borders; but the bonds are to be redeemed with the proceeds of general taxation. Perhaps the eagerness to get State highways would abate somewhat if it were generally known that the interest on cost of construction is a charge against the counties traversed by such highways. Some of the counties seem anxious to grab more than their share. They should be reminded that they are grabbing taxes as well as road benefits. The State furnishes the money to build the highways and to redeem the bonds when they fall due, but the interest on the bonds must be paid by the counties in which the roads are located.

This provision of the law seems equitable. Otherwise some counties would be taxed for road improvements which benefit them only in a small degree. The wording of the statute indicates a desire to distribute cost and benefits as equitably as possible. The cost of building the roads is borne by the State, but the interest on the expenditures is borne by the counties through which the roads pass.

In Tulare County they are quarreling over the location of the [illegible] to compromise the dispute by building two highways. Conceivably stated, the suggestion involves robbing some other county that [illegible] may be given two roads. But even if that were done Tulare County would have to pay the interest on the money expended on both roads. It would cost her something to satisfy [illegible] A better proof that the statute was wisely drawn could [illegible]

A TERMINAL BUILDING FOR FOURTEENTH STREET

It is a pity the Southern Pacific officials cannot be induced to improve for business purposes the unused portion of the block bounded by Franklin, Webster, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. In its present condition it is a blight on adjacent property and an obstacle to building development and business growth on Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets east of Broadway. Because it deters others from building or engaging in business in the immediate vicinity, it is driving business west of Broadway and north of Fourteenth street and travel away from the Southern Pacific's ferry lines. Improvements on Franklin and Webster streets are held back because of the neglected state of the Southern Pacific's property.

It is easily demonstrable that modern business buildings erected on this splendid property would return a handsome income on the investment. A valuable property now lying idle could be made a source of profit by improving it for the accommodation of business. The example set by the Huntington electric roads in Los Angeles is one for the Southern Pacific to follow here. By building on their terminal grounds in Los Angeles, the Huntington roads enhanced the value of their property, adorned a vacant space and made it profitable and increased travel over their lines. The Southern Pacific can do the same with the Fourteenth street station grounds.

By cleaning up a waste dedicated to cat courtships and used for many years as a depository for old cans and rubbish, the Southern Pacific has improved appearances somewhat, but that does not lift the embargo on development in that section of the city. Keeping this fine property idle and vacant not only depresses the value of real estate in the neighborhood, but it drives ferry travel away from the Southern Pacific lines to those of a rival corporation. It is strange that the Southern Pacific officials are so short-sighted in this matter as not to perceive that their company has an interest here in common with the interests of the adjacent property-owners and the city in general.

We will frankly state that in commenting on the strange neglect of opportunity on the part of the railway officials, THE TRIBUNE is not solicitous on account of the Southern Pacific or any individual holder of real estate in the vicinity. We are looking to the improvement and welfare of the city, and in a friendly spirit admonishes the big railroad corporation that it is hurting its own business and standing in its own light by neglecting to build on its terminal grounds on Fourteenth street. The Southern Pacific ought to erect a fine building on that block, with stores fronting on all four streets and an arcade for the car tracks. It would be a paying investment in more ways than one, and would stimulate building and business development in territory immediately tributary to the Southern Pacific's ferry lines, besides promoting the growth and harmonious expansion of the city.

The commercial and civic bodies of the city should urge the Southern Pacific to improve its property. An imposing terminal station is needed at Fourteenth street. The rents would pay a big interest on the money invested, and the improvement would lift the ban that now rests on the district lying between Broadway and the lake. It would increase the company's ferry business besides adorning the city.

Other fine buildings would be erected on adjacent property, business would follow and new life would be infused in the entire region traversed by the line connecting the Alameda ferry and the Sixteenth street station. At present the Fourteenth street property is dead; it yields no income, and the district in which it is situated is forlorn and dilapidated; meanwhile travel is decreasing on the Alameda ferry line because business and building improvements are being driven away into territory exclusively served by the Key Route lines. Building on the Fourteenth street property would reverse this decadent condition.

It is suicidal for the Southern Pacific to pursue this policy of inaction and indifference. It is unjust to the citizens who own property on the east side of Broadway. It is an injury to the city at large because it tends to create an Alsatia in what should be a flourishing and prosperous business district. It discourages building, banishes business, makes the town lopsided and gives the whole east side a dejected, broken-down, hopeless aspect. Incidentally it depresses the value of the Southern Pacific's property, diminishes its traffic and decreases the value of its transportation system.

If the railway officials could be made to see this matter in the right light, a magnificent terminal station would speedily grace the block on Fourteenth street, to awaken the east side and revolutionize the aspect of that section of the city. Business would immediately expand to the east, and the tumble-down wooden shacks which now line Franklin, Webster, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets would give way to substantial steel, stone and brick structures.

Can't the Southern Pacific be persuaded to make an improvement which means as much to its stockholders as it does to the people of Oakland? Let us try. It can be proved to the railroad officials that the Southern Pacific is injuring its own business by blighting the district traversed by the Alameda ferry line.

Protest Against a Filthy Corruption.

Why the term cadet should ever been applied to young men who engage in the business or pastime of seducing young girls preparatory to embarking them on a career of postitution has never been explained. Clearly it is a misnomer when used in that sense. The word cadet is honorable and innocent, and using it to describe persons engaged in an infamous trade is utterly without warrant. Yet it has become the fixed habit of persons who discuss white slavery and kindred redlight themes in lectures and the public prints to employ the word cadet as a term of opprobrium. They have robbed the word of its original and legitimate meaning to give it a spurious and infamous definition.

Now the students of our military schools are styled cadets. In Europe youthful members of noble families are called cadets. Cadet is used to describe a young man being trained at Annapolis or West Point as an officer in the navy or army. Hence it is singular to find the same term applied to youthful miscreants who debauch young girls and betray them into lives of shame. The derivation of the word affords no justification for the corrupt meaning attached to it by social reformers.

Fortunately the authorities at West Point and Annapolis have taken the matter up, and have succeeded in rescuing the word from the base companionship into which it has been thrust by persons who have insisted on corrupting speech in their eagerness to reform morals. Reformers like Miss Jane Addams have promised to quit using cadet as a term to describe a youthful maquereau. They admit they have created a word implying honorable distinction into a term of vilest reproach by calling recruiting agents for the underworld by the same name used to designate young men in training to wear the uniform of officers in the [illegible] and navy of the United States. They promise that the offense shall cease, but they give no reason why it was ever committed.

The heat would be bearable if it were not for the idiot who persists in indecently exposing his intellectual nakedness by asking, "Is it hot enough for you?" The law of compensation requires that there should be an old-fashioned hell for the punishment of this intolerable pest.

REMARKABLE NEW SOCIETY

The new French Society of Optimists, which is beginning to make itself felt throughout the civilized world, is formed by a number of people with first-class brains who, contrary to all traditions of their forerunners, intend to be happy themselves and to show the rest of the world how to recover this almost lost art. The movement, which had been "in the air" for some time, and which had been heralded by a growing body of frankly cheerful French literature, was only definitely organized a few months ago, the founder being a prominent and popular Paris physician Dr. E Dagincourt, who, when the time seemed ripe for action, found no difficulty in gathering around him [illegible] being in the front rank of the intellectual life of Paris today.

Among those who are on the committee (and not, be it noted at once, mere general sympathizers with the new outlook, but active workers for the cause), are such people as Metchnikoff, renowned the world over for his bacteriological work and his startling theories on old age; Camille Flammarion, the great astronomer; Eugene Brieux, the dramatist, whose work is known throughout Europe and America.

These are not merely pious aspirations. The Optimists turn to hard facts to support their doctrines. M. Jean Finot pointed out lately at the last brilliant dinner of the Optimist Club that "the last century has seen a great increase in our longevity. A hundred years since the average lifetime in France was 29 years. Today it is 48. And we know now that the human organism is constructed that it could easily go on working for 150 to 200 years if we did not do everything in our power to put it out of order."—C. F. Bertelli, in Leslie's.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

[illegible] ably with those of the past. Mrs. Hannah Wooller author of "The Gentlewoman's Companion," the standard seventeenth century book on etiquette, found it necessary thus to warn her readers. "Gentlewomen, discover not by any vaterous gesture your angry appetite, nor fix your eyes too greedily on the meat before you, as if you would devour more that way than your throat would swallow. * * * In carving avoid clapping your fingers in your mouth and licking them after you have burnt them. Close your lips when you eat, and do not smack like a pig. Fill not your mouth so full that your cheeks shall swell like a pair of Scotch bagpipes. It is very uncomely to drink so large a draft that your breath is almost gone, and you are forced to blow strongly to recover yourself."

New England's or even old England's cotton trade is but in its infancy compared [illegible] what are 300 years against 3000?" says a writer. "Fabrics as fine as any that can be turned out at the present day by the most perfect machinery in Lancashire were produced by the nimble fingers of Hindu spinners and the primitive looms of Hindu weavers a thousand years before the invasion of Britain by the Romans." When Britons were shivering in their woad, in fact, the Hindus were glorying "in garments of a texture so fine as to have earned the poetic description of 'woven wind.'"

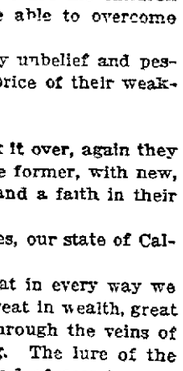
What was the date of the earliest hunger strike? In the second or third century of this era a Greek student wrote "Theon to his father Theon, greeting. It was a fine thing of you not to take me with you to Alexandria. * * Send me a lyre, I implore you. If you don't, I won't eat, I won't drink. There now!"

Short Sermons for Busy Readers

"THE LAND OF PROMISE"

"Behold I have set the land before you; go in and possess it."—Deut. 1:8.

The above are the words of the Almighty through His ambassador, Moses. Five centuries before these words were given, a young man, with visions of the future and responding to an inner call, turning his face away from the land of his Chaldean ancestors, set his eyes toward the west and the land of promise. For to him it had been promised—"Get thee to a land that I will show thee and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great, and thou shalt be a blessing; and I will bless them that bless thee, and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed."



Rev. Harvey Leech

He saw that land, he dwelt in it. At an old age, when it seemed impossible for the fulfillment of the promise, there came the child of blessing. But many years were needed to fulfill all the promises. Four long centuries his descendants served in slavery in another land. The greater, the heavier, the harder their burdens the more rapidly they multiplied. A ruler's edict failed to quench maternal longings or the increase of the race. Neither edict nor heavier tasks could crush the growth of that people. They were the children of promise and of faith. No human hand could stay their increase, for the hand of God was greater and mightier.

Four centuries they served as bondsmen, preparing for larger growth and development. From the ranks of those slaves there came one born to leadership. Humanly speaking it seemed impossible, but "all things are possible with God." Hence it followed that a child rescued from the river was reared in the palace of the ruler, taught, trained, schooled in the best that the oppressing race afforded, but afterwards he leaves it all, "refusing to be called the son of the ruler's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction."

It is this Moses who becomes the ambassador of God, as well as the leader, statesmen, law-giver of Abraham's people.

Forty years before this, his people had come to the same place under the same leader, but refused to enter into the land. And why?

LEADERS OF NATION.

A committee of investigation, composed of twelve leaders of the nation, were sent across the border. Returning they reported unanimously that it was all that had been said of it. They brought of its fruits, evidence, proof visible that no words of exaggeration were uttered. But there was a majority and a minority report.

The majority said, "Yes, it is all that, but it is a land of great cities, walled and peopled with a gigantic race," and what are we? A nation, a race untaught, unskilled in the arts of war. For centuries we have served, bearing the burdens for a stronger, an oppressive people.

The minority said, "Let us go up at once and possess it, for we are well able to overcome it." All that the majority have said about the cities and the people of that land is true, but we, we are the children of Abraham, the children of promise, and we are able to overcome them and possess the land.

The voice of faith, of optimism, was overruled by unbelief and pessimism. For forty years, then, they must pay the price of their weakness.

RICH BLOOD IN VEINS.

Once again they come to the land, again they look it over, again they long to possess it. But these are the children of the former, with new, rich blood in their veins, and iron in their hearts, and a faith in their leader and faith in God.

Today the United States is the land of promise; yes, our state of California is the land of promise.

For ours is a most wonderful land and state, great in every way we consider her. Great in extent, great in resources, great in wealth, great in influence; the best blood of the nation courses through the veins of her people. We have the climate beyond excelling. The lure of the Golden State is attracting the world; she is the land of promise.

Coming to our shores are people of every clime, class, condition, intelligence; the best and the poorest all mingling. What will the result be? Truly it must be that the children of the King of Kings must with Christian optimism enter in and possess this land and state. We are on the border of the civilization of the east and the west; one or the other will and must prevail; which is it to be? With the voice of Caleb and Joshua, let us say, "We are well able to overcome it; let us go up and possess it." For we are abundantly equipped.

Dontello, the sculptor, once asked Michael Angelo to come and see his figure of St. George on the outside of the church in Florence. The great master looked at the piece of work in mute admiration and surprise. For every limb was perfect and every line complete, the brow uplifted and the foot forward as if it would step into life. The sculptor who had wrought it waited anxiously for the judgment of Angelo, who looked steadily, said not a word, until slowly lifting his hand he said, "Now march!" It was the best and highest praise he could have given to the superb figure of St. George in marble.

This great state and nation must be possessed by the best blood of [illegible] and men [illegible] and here under Providence.

Censuring the Merchants' Exchange and similar organizations for their alleged encouragement of butchers to violate ordinances of the city," Justice R. B. Tappan of Alameda yesterday filed a statement with Judge Mortimer Smith of his conduct of the case of E. A. Young, a butcher and former president of the Merchants' Exchange, for alleged violation of the city meat inspection ordinance. Tappan sat for Judge Smith in the case tried in Oakland a few days ago which resulted in the jury being dismissed, and in Tappan rebuking Young at length in a telephone communication.

The Young case came up for further hearing yesterday and was reset for trial October 7. It will be tried next time before Judge Smith. The hog presented in evidence is still in cold storage.

EXPLAINS CASE.

Tappan's explanation of his conduct of the case, and his censure of the commercial organizations are contained in a lengthy statement. Wilber Walker, secretary of the Merchants' Exchange, was in court during the trial, as were other members of the organization.

The statement follows:

The defendant does not claim that the ordinance is invalid. The public realizes that some butchers are ready to sell diseased meat to consumers. This ordinance wisely attempts to prohibit such conduct on the part of the butchers.

Because the jury rendered no verdict after having deliberated upon the facts in this case for a period longer than it took to try the case, the court made some pointed remarks to the jury. This court was not desirous that the jury should convict the defendant for violating Sub. 2 of this ordinance, but the court was desirous that the jury should arrive at a verdict. If the jury desired to acquit the defendant it could have found the defendant not guilty and if any explanation were necessary or convenient from this jury it could have said that the carcass of the swine showed thereon no mark, brand or stamp as required by law, but that in this case it was not necessary for such a mark, brand or stamp to be placed thereon by the health authorities.

NOT READY FOR STAMP.

It was not the intention of the deputy inspector who inspected the swine at the depot of the Southern Pacific Company, to place any brand upon the said carcass in accordance with this ordinance, because the carcass was not in such condition as to receive this stamp of approval of the board of health. Therefore there is pending against the defendant an alleged offense without any foundation whatever.

The court presumes the defendant could have been charged with having had a mutilated carcass of a swine in his possession and against the provisions of a law of this city. The law gives the power to the health authorities to spoil such carcass by an application of coal oil. The deputy inspector went to the Southern Pacific depot to inspect this carcass and finding it mutilated and knowing he had the power to spoil the meat, took from his pocket a bottle of coal oil and emptied it upon the carcass.

Let us hope we are credited with having common sense. Should we expect that this deputy inspector should place the stamp of approval of the city of Oakland upon this carcass after it was spoiled by the application of the coal oil?

STAMP OF DISAPPROVAL.

The court instructed the jury that if the swine referred to by the witnesses was lawfully condemned, it required the application of no stamp, mark or brand; that such a stamp, mark or brand is only permitted by law when the carcass is not subject to condemnation, and a stamp of approval on a carcass is not consistent with an empty bottle of coal oil, the contents of which had been poured upon the carcass. This instruction was not proper as being within the lines of the charging clause of the complaint, but the instruction was proper as to the law under the evidence adduced at this trial, and had the defendant moved for a non-suit at the conclusion of the case for the people the court would have granted such a non-suit. In this case it would be ridiculous and nonsensical, absurd and foolish to hold that the city of Oakland, through its proper officials had a right and was required by the law to put this stamp of approval upon this carcass when coal oil permeated it throughout. In the opinion of the court the coal oil took the place of the stamp of approval. The aroma and taste of coal oil was decidedly a stamp of disapproval.

The foregoing is presented herein to the end that another set of citizens should not be annoyed by being brought into court to hear evidence under a complaint which cannot be substantiated by the authorities. The court believes that the proceeding should be dismissed, and that the city authorities may take such further action as they may be advised.

This court has noticed on this and on former occasions that the Merchants' Exchange seems to be represented by its prominent members. Ordinarily the court would believe that these esteemed gentlemen should be engaged in other business than assisting defendants to violate, and perhaps encourage them to violate ordinances of our cities. It is quite possible, however, that the ordinances just referred to are so unreasonable and harsh that these esteemed gentlemen are trying to impress the courts of this fact. If it be true that these esteemed gentlemen are laboring in this matter, it would seem proper for them to go before the legislative bodies [illegible] these bodies to retract. Courts are loath to invalidate ordinances because the ordinances do not meet with the personal ideas of the judges of the courts. If a law be not well received by the masses it would seem that the proper step in such cases would be to have the matter taken up with the legislative bodies of the municipalities.

Baritone to Sing

FOSTER KRAKE.

Society is showing keen interest in the recital which is to be given at the [illegible] Oakland on Thursday evening, October [illegible], by Miss Marie S[illegible] pianiste, and Mr. Foster Krake, baritone. Both artists are favorites in the best circles of San Francisco, and members of the faculty of the largest conservatory on the Pacific coast.

European and American critics alike have been lavish in their praise of Miss S'loss. The Dresden Daily Record in 1909 said: "The playing of Miss Sloss of the Grieg Concerto was in the nature of a triumph for American Musicianship." The Musical Leader: "Miss Sloss again proved that she possesses a piano talent of high order, if not even of the highest order. Her remarkable technic, coupled with an apparently inexhaustible fund of temperament and vitality, would alone serve to make her a most interesting player, even did she not have the charm of a distinct personality and a subtle mental grasp of the music she plays. America should hear more of this talented daughter of hers." The Musical Courier, Berlin Letter, October, 1908. "Miss Sloss possesses a finger technic which conquers with ease the most difficult and intricate passages, and she exhibits an astonishing velocity coupled with the subtlest dynamic shading. She played her program on Thursday with an ease and with an absolute intelligence to the physical demands made on the player and an aggressiveness which was surprising."

Mr. Krake has a most pleasing baritone voice, and the groups of songs which he will contribute will add greatly to the enjoyment of the evening for the musically elect who attend this recital.

GIVE PROPOSITION OF DOUBLE CROSS

Special Committee Announces Units of International Emblem.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—A special committee of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, of which Dr. Henry Barton Jacobs of Baltimore is chairman, announces today the exact proportions of the double red cross, the international [illegible] emblem which have been adopted for use in the United States. Every organization or institution dealing with tuberculosis will be urged to use the emblem in its correct proportions.

Although the double red cross was adopted for use in the United States in 1906, as the symbol of the crusade against tuberculosis, no effort was made to standardize the shape or proportions, with the result that hundreds of differently formed emblems are now being used in this country. After a year of study of the history and artistic merits of all the designs available, the national association has finally chosen one in which all of the arms are pointed, the two crossarms being of the same length. The width of the cross is taken as the unit in determining the proportions. The length of the lower leg is 7 units; the arms are 3 units on either side; the point above the arms, 2½ units, and the distance between the arms, 1½ units. These measurements hold good for any size.

The double red cross was first adopted as the symbol of the International Anti-Tuberculosis Association in Berlin in October, 1902. The proposer of the symbol was Dr. G. Sersiron of Paris, who is now associate secretary of L'Association Centrale Francaise Contre la Tuberculose. Today the emblem is being used by anti-tuberculosis workers in every part of the world, even in Iceland, India, South Africa, Labrador, Japan, China and the Philippines. The double red cross is similar in shape to a cross used frequently in the Greek Catholic churches, and also to the Lorraine Cross of France.

In the United States over 1200 anti-tuberculosis associations and committees, nearly 550 sanatoria and hospitals, 400 dispensaries and about 200 open air schools, besides a number of other organizations, are using the double red cross as their emblem. Wherever it is seen, it means war against tuberculosis.

PLAYS HIDE-AND-SEEK WITH BURGLAR

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—H. Eisenberg, a wealthy wholesale jeweler, played hide and go seek with a burglar on the second floor of his residence, 2439 Pacific avenue, last night. He caught sight of the intruder climbing in a window, obtained a weapon and decided to be his own policeman. The robber was crafty like a fox. He knew a thing or two of his trade. When he went to work in a bedroom, he locked the door. Eisenberg couldn't get in. He did the next best thing, however, he made an awful noise and scared [illegible] who somersaulted out of the window.

POINT BARROW ESKIMO IS NAMED AFTER PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Of the many children named after President Woodrow Wilson probably none can boast the hardihood of a little Eskimo boy, who was carried a mile in a temperature of 30 degrees below zero to be christened.

The Rev. Dr. Charles L. Thompson, secretary of the Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church, wrote in a letter received by President Wilson today that "a baby endowed with that name, who at two weeks of age could stand such a trip should do well in the world. Mr. Thompson enclosed a report from the Rev. D. W. Cram at Point Barrow, Alaska, the most northern mission of the church, in which Dr. Cram wrote:

"Doubtless there are many other little Woodrows scattered throughout the country by this time, but if this one at the farthest north does not hold the record for the earliest public christening, climatic conditions taken into account, I am very much mistaken."

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 20.—Developments today in connection with the impeachment trial of Governor Sulzer which is to be resumed Monday, were:

Valentine Taylor, legal advisor of the impeached governor, denied that there had been any admission by Sulzer of the right of Lieutenant-Governor Glynn to act as governor.

FEDERAL LAW NOT TO OPPOSE STATE

Game Laws Here Will Remain Same as Regards Migratory Birds.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20. — According to T. S. Palmer, assistant chief of the biological bureau of the Department of Agriculture, in charge of game preservation in the United States, there will be no conflict between the Federal and California laws concerning the hunting season for wild ducks, geese and other migratory birds. Under the law passed just before the close of the last administration, the biological bureau is now drafting regulations covering the closed season for hunting migratory game birds.

With but one or two exceptions these will closely follow the open seasons already established in the States. For wild ducks and geese the Federal open season will probably run from October 1 to January 15. This will not conflict with the California law, where the season fixed by the State is shorter and where the local laws will prevail over the Federal statute.

The Federal law will prevail where the season is fixed for a shorter time than fixed by any State. This will occur in one or two eastern States and hunters who shoot under the State law in contravention of the Federal regulations will be haled into the Federal courts and made subject to a fine of not more than $100, or not more than 90 days in jail.

Five Killed, Others Hurt in Explosion

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Five men were killed outright and several others were hurt this afternoon in a terrific explosion which destroyed part of the molding house in the Deering branch plant of the International Harvester works. Calls were sent out by the officials of the plant for fifteen ambulances.

Metal was being poured into a large mold when an explosion shook the entire plant. Four men were standing within a few feet of the mold. Dozens were working in that part of the shop.

A sheet of liquid metal spurted from the mold. The explosion wrecked the big furnace. The east wall of the molding room crumbled. Many of the workmen escaped. Others ran wildly out of the building, their hair partly burned away and their clothing ablaze.

Is 'Bogus Mr. Busch' Involved in Bigamy?

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—Has the bogus Mr. Busch, who mulcted trusting San Francisco debutantes out of $1500 in money and jewelry last March, turned up again in Seattle as one of the principals in a sensational bigamy charge?

This was the question put to the police of the coast cities today when Mrs. J. H. Meyer, of Seattle, procured a warrant for the arrest of the so-called Busch, who, like the San Francisco imposter said he was a scion of the wealthy family of brewers. Mrs. Meyer accuses him of having married her daughter, Dorothy M. Meyer, while he had another wife living. Busch and his bride are aboard the steamer Titan bound for the Argentine Republic. He will be taken back to Seattle.

C. G. HINDS BACK FROM STATE FAIR

C. G. Twin Oaks Farm of Livermore capturing first hen and first pullet in white Plymouth Rocks; first cock, first, second, third and fourth cockerel, first and second hen, first and second pullet and first pen in white Wyandottes. All awards in Columbian Wyandottes, first cock, first, second and fourth cockerel, first and second hen, first pen in buff Orpingtons; first cock, first, second and fourth cockerel, first and second hen, second and fourth pullet and first pen in white Orpingtons; best male and female in American and English classes. Fanciers from all over the state were in attendance at Sacramento and everyone interviewed promised to exhibit at Oakland for as they termed it "The Oakland Show" was the largest and best on the coast and the show where sales were made. SOLVING THE CROSSING PROBLEM

Put An End To Your Tooth Troubles

What's the use of suffering with your teeth when you can get them fixed without having to endure a moment's discomfort?

The person who neglects his teeth usually does so through fear of suffering at the hands of a dentist. He doesn't like the idea of being tortured in the dental chair, and, as a result, he lets his teeth go from bad to worse until they make life miserable for him.

There's no need of anyone dreading a [illegible] to my office, no matter what condition his teeth are in. I can perform every operation known to dental science without causing pain. It doesn't worry me a bit when a patient tells me that his teeth are so very sensitive he can't bear to let a dentist touch them with his instruments. Just as soon as I apply my wonderful Terrysthesia to the affected [illegible] it impossible for pain to exist. After the work is all finished, the nerves which were put to sleep return to their normal state and the patient experiences no ill effects whatever.

My method of preventing pain is so simple and easy that many people think it is too good to be true. Here's my invitation to all who are skeptical. Come to me and demand that I prove my claims before you pay me one cent. If I fail to make good you will not be obligated. That's a fair, liberal proposition, and if you really want to avoid suffering in the dental chair you should take advantage of it.

Understand that painlessness is merely a feature of my work, and no extra charge is made for it. I do high-class dentistry of every kind, backed by an absolute guarantee of satisfaction. My 16 years' experience should be enough to convince you that I possess the skill and ability to do the very best work you can procure anywhere.

OAKLAND IS NOW LUMBER CENTER

A lumber cargo of 5,000,000 feet is being loaded by the English freighter Harmatton at Long wharf for Australia. Considering that this is not a lumber-producing port and also that cargoes of more than a million feet are not ordinary this emphasizes the excellent facilities for the handling of lumber in this city.

The Oakland Launch and Tugboat company shifted the schooner Taurus from the inner harbor to the Pacific shipyards where it will receive repairs.

The American-Hawaiian freighter Georgian is at Long wharf loading for the south

MILITARY RECRUITS WORRY ENGLAND SERIOUSLY

(By PHILLIP EVERETT.)

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The war office is seriously worried at present over the ever-increasing difficulty in obtaining recruits to keep up the regular army to its present strength. Time and again the [illegible] forced to lower the standard of physical requirements until it is now practically impossible to go any further in this direction, and the number of men willing to put on the king's uniform is continually decreasing.

Driven by necessity the war office is now going to make a supreme effort to get the required number of recruits during the coming furlough season. Information is being sought from all the large [illegible] and towns as to the number of men who would be required to act virtually as "walking advertisements" of the different regiments. Birmingham is one of the principal recruiting centers, and, though no definite instructions have been received it is expected that the novel poposal will be given a trial there this month.

It is proposed to divide the city into eight districts and to have two soldiers belonging to different regimnts parading the streets for four hours each day. The men will patrol the streets, enter into conversation with any likely young fellows and obtain as many recruits as possible. For this they will receive twenty-five cents a day, and in addition the usual fee for any recruits they might obtain. In this way it is thought the army might be considerably strengthened.

Soldiers have been given permission to wear mufti when on furlough as a reward for good conduct, and it has been suggested that many of the best men are not seen in uniform in the streets, and that this may account to some extent for the falling off in the number of recruits. Last year 719 recruits were enlisted in Birmingham, compared with over 900 in the previous year. During the South African war the numbers went up to 2000. The falling off has been general throughout the country, one reason which is given being that trade last year was unusually good and employment was plentiful.

In other words our young men are under ordinary circumstances only willing to enter the army as a last resort to escape starvation, a fact which better than anything else shows how unpopular general conscription would be and which explains why Lord Roberts' efforts in that direction have met with such scant success.

ENGLAND PLANS MANEUVERS.

To the best of our ability we are to have autumn maneuvers just as Germany and France are having them with the very material difference that while the generals of these two continental powers are operating with actual bodies of troops British army leaders must be satisfied to experiment largely with skeleton regiments and divisions.

During the coming maneuvers, which with unusual frankness, are merely called military exercises Field Marshal Sir John French in command of four divisions and a cavalry division, officially designated the brown force, will operate against a white force, the main part of which will be in skeleton, and to carry out even these miniature maneuvers it has been found necessary to employ a number of territorials, whose military training has been limited.

It is therefore small wonder that the war office, not wishing to have the blunders which must necessarily be committed become generally known, has forbidden officers to give any information whatever to the press. But one really cannot help smiling when it tries to justify this order by stating that "the Bulgarian successes against the Turks were greatly assisted by he secrecy that was maintained as to their movements and intentions. This secrey was obtained by means of a strict and efficient censorship.

The order of the war office may keep English newspaper reporters away, but it is absolutely certain that some of the great Berlin dailies will have correspondents, who are experts on military matters, follow every phrase of the maneuvers and German newspaper readers will be able to enjoy their daily reports of British military and tactical blunders.

SEEK MILITARY TRADE MONOPOLY.

The question of army domestic and personal supplies has been under consideration for some months at the war office. At present the men and officers, their wives, families and dependents, buy their clothing, household necessaries, etc., mainly from ordinary shopkeepers and from Canteen and Mess Co-operate Society, a trading concern of which the directors are officers. The object of the inquiry, it is understood is to ascertain whether the best interests of the army are being served in this matter under the existing system.

Meanwhile, anticipating the result of the investigation, a number of officers who are associated with the management of the South African Garrison Institutes, which were formed primarily to supply the every-day needs of our soldiers during the South African war, are seeking power to establish in the United Kingdom a big trading monopoly which would absorb the canteen and Mess Society and take all army business entirely out of the hands of the private shopkeeper.

The directors of the institutes, which have now been broken up owing to the withdrawal of troops from South Africa, have a sum in hand of some $400,000 representing profits made during the war, so that they have all the money necessary to inaugurate such a scheme should it be favorably received by the war office and responsible commanding officers.

TWO ACRES IN FIGS NET $1050 PROFIT

REEDLY, Sept. 20.—Y. Wake, who owns 40 acres near the city, raised this year Adriatic figs to the amount of $1050 on two acres of his ranch. The trees were old ones which had been given scant attention till Wake took charge of them. Fifteen tons of the figs produced on the two acres were sold to [illegible] total of $1050 and Wake would not sell those two acres today for $2500, whereas five years ago he paid but $3200 for his entire forty acre tract.

The balance of the parcel, thirty-eight acres, were set out to vines and the owner intends rooting up a portion of them from time to time in order to plant more fig trees of the White Adriatic variety which thrives exceedingly well and bears profitically in the Reedly district.

Old Spanish Rule Recalled

C. SHOTTEE, CHAIRMAN OF THE BARBECUE COMMITTEE IN CHARGE OF SEPT. 28 FESTIVITIES.—Bushnell Photo.

Among the many features to mark the revival of the Spanish barbecue and early California fiesta, which are famous in the history of this state before the coming of the "gringo," that is to be held under the auspices of the Fruitvale lodge, No. 1152, Loyal Order of Moose, in Lorenzo Grove, San Lorenzo, on Sunday, September 28, will be the use of egg-shells filled with cologne and other scents for the bombardment of those participating in the Spanish dances. During the dancing in the early fiestas egg-sheils, from which the contents had been "blown" in the method familiar to all naturalists, were filled with perfume, sealed, and then thrown as favors between the partners in the dances. A big pavilion, with floor space sufficient to accommodate 1000 persons, has been erected in the grove for the accommodation of the dancers.

ANOTHER CUSTOM.

Still another early custom will be revived at the barbecue and that will be in the manner of selecting partners during the fandango. In this the women appear on the dancing floor first and start the fandango and the men select their partners by placing their hats upon the lady of their choice. If the woman retains the hat the offer of a partner is accepted but if the partner is not acceptable the hat is thrown aside.

The attendance at the revival of the early Spanish barbecue will probably reach the hoped-for mark of 10,000 according to all indications at the present time. The greatest interest is being evinced in the approaching affair and the various committees have their work well in hand. S. R. Jacobs, district deputy of the Moose and prelate of Fruitvale lodge, and Mrs. Jacobs are among those who are working earnestly for the success of the barbecue. A general invitation has been extended to all residents of the bay cities to join in the festivities.

GENERAL COMMITTEE.

S. R. Jacobs, district deputy of the Moose and prelate of Fruitvale lodge, and Mrs. Jacobs are both actively interested in making the affair a success. The general committee in charge is as follows: Captain Thorwald Brown, chairman; S. R. Jacobs, A. H. Perry, J. O. Brown, J. F. Brooks and I. Ury.

Tommorow night in Carpenters' hall, Fruitvale avenue and East Fourteenth street, the Fruitvale lodge will give a dance for the purpose of interesting the people of East Oakland in the barbecue. Stating the reasons which prompted the lodge in giving a revival of the early Spanish barbecue S. R. Jacobs said yesterday:

"There is no other form of celebration which is more distinctly Californian, that harks back further in the history of this state, than the barbecue and early Spanish fiesta. The barbecue has fallen, of late, into some disrepute but the members of the Moose hope to be able to restore it to its original favor and popularity. We point with pride to the fact that in California we can live out-doors the year around and a big open-air feast impresses this fact on the mind of the stranger far better than any amount of temperatures, mean, average and maximum.

THOUSANDS TO ATTEND.

"Only recently a barbecue was held in Kentucky at which there were 10,000 persons present—the number that we hope will attend the Moose affair—and it attracted nation-wide interest. Yet California, the original home of the barbecue in this country, is practically unknown for anything of that sort outside of its own borders.

"Then again there is a general movement throughout the state to make California the playground of America and we hope to be able to assist in that work by reviving a form of enjoyment which will be sought and received by those familiar with Californian history as being part and parcel of the state's recreation. It is for these reasons that the Moose will give a barbecue in the most accessible spot and the one most fitted to the needs on Sunday, September 28."

BOOSTERS' COMMITTEE.

A booster committee has been appointed, which is working up interest in the affair, and the members of that committee are as follows:

D. M. Jones, chairman; O. Kleinman, Peter Bright, J. P. Chestnut, Thorwald Brown, S. R. Jacobs, A. A. Barber, Sanders Hayes, George Barber, E. H. Horsketter, F. Wolff, J. L. Leal and J. Thomas.

The barbecue committee in charge of preparations for the big feast, is as follows:

C. Shottee, chairman; L. De Lusa, R. R. Fisher, I. Ury, J. Simmons, L. Levy, Frank Ladett, J. L. Leal, J. F. Brooks, John Bold, N. Raentsch, M. Campbell, E. Rose, M. Hauso, Manuel Lewis, Owen Paul and J. Thomas.

Harry L. Boyle, the Oakland school director, is chairman of the transportation committee and the other members of this committee are Peter Bright and D. Tutt. Mrs. Boyle is also assisting in the work of making the affair a success.

ATHLETIC EVENTS.

There will be a number of athletic events, a tug-of-war for the championship of Alameda county, a club passing tournament and several other features on the day's program. The committee in charge of the athletic events is as follows:

H. Robert, chairman; F. A. Tagg, W. G. Marks, G. J. Dugan, Dr. E. S. DePuy and Dr. H. L. Dietz.

P. A. Tagg, past dictator; A. A. Barber, dictator; Thorwald Brown, vice-dictator; S. R. Jacobs, prelate; D. M. Jones, secretary; E. R. Dawson, treasurer; E. H. Horsketter, sergeant-at-arms; Fred Wolff, inner guard, and Frank Ladott, outer guard. The trustees of the lodge are M. B. Zepperlen, Sanders Hayes and A. H. Perry.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's recipe to bring color, lustre and thickness to hair when faded, streaked or gray.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic. You can get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and [illegible]

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

MUTTERINGS OF BATTLE HEARD ON WATERFRONT

Mutterings of battle—possibly an attack by a hostile fleet—were current on the local waterfront shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Three loud detonations in rapid succession instilled horror into the hearts of the bravest of the waterfrontiers, while the traffic on the Webster street bridge which at the time was especially heavy was held up for several minutes. The yacht Alice M., of the Alameda fleet of Alameda, and skippered by Commodore Jones, was responsible for the excitement. The craft, with a four-man crew, slipped out from the inner harbor late in the afternoon for a cruise in the outer bay. Hardly had she gotten clear of the bridges than a small cannon carried on the stern was discharged. The gun boomed twice, its detonation having all the earmarks of the big coast guns.

CHINAMAN RELEASED ON HABEAS CORPUS WRIT

PANAMA, Sept. 20. — Thirteen Chinamen returning from China who had been held on board the steamer Acapulco in Panama harbor for the last week by order of the Panama authorities becuse they had refused to register again in compliance with the new law, were released yesterday on a writ of habeas corpus. Some adverse sentiment is being expressed in mercantile circles here with reference to the action of the Panama government in handing to Ou Yang Kong, the Chinese consul general, his exequatur, thus relieving him of his official status.

This action was taken by the government because it was alleged that the consul general was creating opposition among his countrymen to the provision of the registration law.

Fashion Decrees— False Hair Must GO

Fashion's decrees are frequently of an uncompromising nature, and yet we all bow to her mandates with humility.

The late reaction to plain styles in hair dressing is decidedly gratifying to almost everyone. The prevailing idea seems to be simplicity, coolness and comfort.

The uncomfortable masses of germ-harboring false hair and rats are, when possible, being cast aside, and the woman or miss who cares to be strictly up to date is relying upon her own natural hair for adornment.

This means that more painstaking care must be exerted in saving one's own hair and in enhancing its beauty.

The Modish World Adopts

Newbro's Herpicide

Long, thick, luxuriant hair is merely a question of care and cultivation. If your scalp itches, and the hair is dull, brittle, uneven and coming out with every combing, it is because its life is being destroyed by the presence of dandruff.

Such a condition demands the regular and intelligent use of Newbro's Herpicide. The best informed and most fastidious people everywhere are aware of this and rely upon the world's best-known scalp prophylactic to keep the scalp free from dandruff and to give to the hair that life, lustre and luxuriance which are so beautiful.

The odor of HERPICIDE is exquisite, the sensation of coolness and cleanliness a delight and the visible results are frequently astonishing.

Watches 'Movies' of North Husband Took the Pictures

BERKELEY, Sept. 20. — In the audience of a San Francisco moving picture playhouse last night sat one woman to whom the pictures meant more than to all who occupied the other seats. Three films were shown of fields of ice and a straggling party of men fighting its way across them. Some ... at the very South Pole itself whither unfortunate Captain Scott of the British navy penetrated and whence he never returned alive.

The pictures were taken by Herbert G. Ponting of 2535 Dwight way, a member of the expedition. The woman who watched was Mrs. Ponting, the wife he left here when he set out for the pole and whom he has not since seen. Step by step Mrs. Ponting was enabled in the pictures to follow her husand and those whom he accompanied through the long marches of their perilous trip.

"My husband had previously sent me some of the pictures," said Mrs. Ponting today, "and told me much of the trip. Much more I was able to read in the papers. But altogether the ideas I had of his trip were but hazy and dim beside the story these pictures told. It was so very, very interesting to watch them, to seem to be right there beside him through all that hard journey."

Ponting went to London immediately upon his return from the polar expedition, in which Captain Scott, the leader, and others lost their lives. As soon as his business arrangements there are completed he expects to return to his home in this city.

The British expedition of which Ponting was a member left for the pole more than two years ago. He took with him a moving picture machine and carried this as far as possible into the frozen heart of the south. Up to the "Cove," where the party made its last camp before the dash to the pole, the pictures were taken. This was, however, too heavy to be taken along on that last ... and for the ... the south's most bitter cold, and a pocket camera was substituted. The pictures were thus made complete, covering every step of the way from where the party landed on the southern ice continent to the pole itself.

The pictures have been shown over a considerable portion of this country and Europe. From San Francisco they will be taken into the interior, returning for display in Oakland toward the end of this month.

COUNTY W. C. T. U. TO HOLD SESSION

Meetings to Take Place Tuesday and Wednesday at Methodist Church.

BERKELEY, Sept. 20.—The twenty-ninth annual convention of the Alameda County Women's Christian Temperance Union will be held in Berkeley next week. This in many ways is to be a notable gathering. The annual convention goes by rotation to the various towns in the ... has been held in this city for several years. The sessions of the convention will be held in the Epworth Methodist church, at the corner of Durant and Telegraph avenue, next Tuesday and Wednesday, September 23 and 24. There will be a morning and afternoon session each day and an address by J. Stitt Wilson Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Dorcas Spencer, the acting president of the county, will preside. Mrs. Spencer is one of the oldest temperance workers in California and enjoys the distinction of having been the secretary of the first ... in the state, organized in 1874. She is at present national superintendent of Indian work and, as state historian, has written the history of the W. C. T. U. of California, which is just now coming from the press.

Mrs. Hattie McMath of East Oakland, who for thirty years has been an ardent worker for the cause, is spoken of very favorably for the next president of Alameda county.

Delegates will be present from the twelve unions in the county who will read reports of the work accomplished by their respective organizations during the year. These reports will be made Tuesday forenoon. In the afternoon session the special feature will be a symposium led by Mrs. Cynthia J. A. Jump of Oakland, who will speak on "Local Union: What Is It?" Other speakers will be Mrs. George Cranford, Mrs. McClintic and Mrs. Jessmer.

An especially interesting program has been arranged for Tuesday evening, which is as follows: Addresses of welcome, Mrs. Walter S. Brown, response, Mrs. S. M. Woodman of San Leandro; vocal solo, "To the Lord, Our God" (A. R. Gaul), John W. King, director of the choir of Trinity M. E. church, declaration of principles, Mary Cass Lord; address of the evening, J. Stitt Wilson, former mayor of Berkeley, entitled "The Second Coming of Christ in the Form of Justice and Economic Freedom"; tenor solo, Harvey Parkinson.

The principal speakers of Wednesday will be Mrs. Ella Brown, late professor in Fairmount College, Kansas. Mrs. Brown is an attorney by profession, a recent comer to Berkeley. Her topic will be "Prohibition Kansas." Mrs. Julia Wilson will read a paper entitled "The Clock Is Striking the Hour," and Mrs. Dorcas Spencer will give an address on "Proportional Representation."

A most cordial invitation is extended to every one to attend all of these sessions. It is hoped that the temperance people of Berkeley especially will show their sympathy and interest in the cause and give the visitors a royal welcome.

WHO IS TO REPAIR CANAL BRIDGES?

Question of Reflooring Comes Up in the City Council.

ALAMEDA, Sept. 20. — A three-cornered altercation that ... has created much interest, that of the supervision of the tidal canal bridges, has again been brought up. Councilman Conrad Roth is the particular personage responsible for the revival of the matter.

Roth, in response to frequent requests ... of the bridges, brought the matter ... in the city council. It was voted to communicate with the supervisors and ask that the bridges be properly floored. In answer the supervisors disclaim any authority over the bridges and state that the matter of their repair rests with the federal government.

The agitation brings up an old condition and agreement between the city of Alameda, the county of Alameda and the government, whereby the government ... to provide for their maintenance and operation and the city of Alameda to furnish the piers ... for same.

Alameda and the government carried out their part of the agreement but the supervisors, on recommendation of County Surveyor P. A. Hartland, decided that the bridges were not properly repaired and therefore were in no condition to accept.

Holes in the floors of the bridges threaten to do damage to horses, but who will be responsible in the event of damage is a matter that is now attracting considerable attention.

ALAMEDA GIVEN PATRIOTIC BIRDS

Play Supervisor Urges Appropriation for Building Eagles' Aviary.

ALAMEDA, Sept. 20.—The city is confronted with an expense of erecting an aviary to house two full-fledged and life-sized eagles. The birds were given the city by Clarence De Bernardi and no accommodations have been provided for them as yet. Supervisor of Play John Gutleben will ask the recreation commission at its next meeting to set aside $100 for a proper aviary for the eagles.

When the gift of the birds was offered Gutleben appeared before the local council and urged their acceptance.

"American eagles," he said, "are becoming extremely rare and I think as a lesson in patriotism and nature study for the youth of the city the kind offer of Mr. De Bernardi should be accepted."

It is expected that the commission will grant the request of the supervisors and authorize the expenditure of enough money to construct the aviary. It will be located in Lincoln park.

ELECTROLIER FUND TO BE DISBURSED

Property Owners May Present Receipts and Obtain Money.

ALAMEDA, Sept. 20. — The surplus amounts in the funds of electrolier districts Nos. 4 and 5 are to be paid back to the property owners October 8. Property owners in these districts who have their receipts may present them to the city auditor on that date and obtain warrants.

MANY AGAINST CHARTER PLAN

City Council Lays Matter Over Until Next Budget.

ALAMEDA, Sept. 20—Opposition to the adoption of a new charter by the city of Alameda is developing strongly and talk is rife of the formation of a club to resist the efforts of the Alameda Charter Club, which is using its energies to have an entirely new charter adopted. Sentiment is about evenly divided.

Exponents of the idea of an entirely new charter favor the adoption of one that will be in every respect modern. Lochiel M. King has prepared a charter setting forth the various good points in a score of charters of different cities, and the club he represents proposes to embody these in a new governing document.

Former Mayor E. K. Taylor has given his opinion that the surrender of the old charter will also be a surrender of the state rights granted under it. Taylor's plan, which has the support of many, including some of the councilmen of the city, is to revise and amend the old charter, but to preserve it as a legal document by allowing one or two paragraphs or clauses to remain. Taylor also points out that in this way considerable expense, the most important item of which is a freeholders' election, will be saved.

Some pressure was brought to bear upon the city council to include in the budget for the current tax levy an amount of money necessary to call the election of freeholders and the charter ratification election, but after some discussion the governing body decided to let the matter stand at least until the next budget is made up.

The procession was rudely interrupted by a shower of brickbats and vegetables, hurled by a crowd of youths, not high school students, who gathered in poolrooms as the procession passed. Merrill Wright, in charge of the procession, and several others, were slightly injured by the missiles.

The students put up a stiff fight and succeeded in clearing their path into the hall where, after the "initiation" literary exercises were held. The police declare that the ring-leaders of the students' assailants will be arrested and punished.

MOTORCYCLE BOYCOTT EXPLAINED BY CLUB

LIVERMORE, Sept. 20.—J. O. McKown, president of the Livermore Valley Chamber of Commerce, has received an answer to his letter to the San Francisco Motorcycle Club protesting against the boycott declared against Livermore by that organization. The letter follows:

"Livermore Valley Chamber of Commerce, Livermore, Cal.—Gentlemen: Your favor of the 19th ult. received and answer was delayed owing to the fact that your letter was misplaced and overlooked which we regret very much:

"In regard to the alleged boycott which is claimed was put on the town of Livermore, would advise that the motorcyclists of the bay cities did not exactly boycott the town of Livermore, but only advised the members to stay away from that vicinity on account of unjust arrests which were being made by the motorcycle police.

"We object very much to the underhand methods used by the police in enticing motorcyclists to speed and also to the poor judgment used to determine the speed of a machine.

"The clubs of this icinityv are opposed to speeding and the use of the muffler cutout, and are at all times exhorting the members to keep within the law.

"A ll we desire is fair play, and if the proper influence can be brought to bear to make the police officers use better judgment and be square at all times in making arrests, we can assure you that all towns that were under the ban will receive as much of our patronage as we are able to give it.

"Trusting that we may hear from you further in regard to this matter and that proper steps will be taken to assure us of justice at the hands of the motor police, we are, yours truly,

"C. L. LOGAN, Secretary."

BURGLARS LOOT STEGE P. O. STORE

Also Planned to Rob Postoffice Safe, But Were Frightened Away.

RICHMOND, Sept. 20.—Burglars undertook to rob the postoffice and store safe in the postoffice and store of the Stege Lumber and Hardware Company Thursday night, and the proprietors and police, who have been working on the case, kept the matter dark until today in the perpetrators. The burglars effected entrance to the store by forcing the lock on a rear door and while endeavoring to work the day lock combination which was on the safe lock, they threw on the full combination and were unable to work it. It is thought by the local police that they had intended to blow open the safe with explosives, as evidence of that theory was found, but that they were probably frightened away by some noise, possibly the arrival of a train at the station nearby.

As it was, only a few dollars in money from the cash register, a quantity of stamps from the postoffice drawers and sundry articles of merchandise from the store is the extent of the loot secured by the thieves. There was considerable money in the safe at the time, and it is supposed that the burglars had knowledge of this fact.

There have been a number of suspicious looking characters around here lately and the police have several clews upon which they are working. The adroit manner in which the lock on the door of the store was picked and the general evidence indictes that the job was done by experts at the business of burglary, and that if they had not been scared away by some cause they would have undoubtedly used explosives on the safe and effected an entrance to the strong box where the money was.

COUNTY LINE TO HAVE TELEPHONE EXCHANGE

RICHMOND, Sept. 20.—Owing to the fact that the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company is arranging to establish a separate exchange to handle its telephone service in Albany, the county line and Rust sections, its plans announced early this year of changing all of the county line and Rust telephones over to the Richmond exchange have been modified. Until the new Albany exchange is established the service will remain as it is. All residents of Stege, Pullman, Stege Junction and Rust who have asked for the Richmond service have been accommodated and their phones cut in here, but the remainder will have their old service until such time as the plans of the company for a new exchange at Albany are completed and put into operation.

LARGE LOAD OF PRODUCE OBTAINED BY FRAUD

RICHMOND, Sept. 20.—S. Hermann, a local wholesale produce merchant, has sworn out a complaint before Police Judge Lindsey, charging Philip and Joseph Winer, keepers of a fruit and produce stand, with feloniously obtaining goods under false pretenses. According to the allegations of Hermann the men visited his place of business yesterday while he was away and represented to one of his employes that they had purchased a large wagon load of melons and vegetables from the proprietor. The goods were delivered and Hermann claims the men skipped out with them before he could attempt to collect for them or had even heard of the transaction. He said that they never gave him an order for produce of any kind at any time. The police are looking for the Winers.

NEW POSTOFFICE FOR LIVERMORE

Concrete Building to House the Institution Very Shortly.

LIVERMORE, Sept. 20.—Postmaster T. E. Knox has received official notice that the proposal of the Farmers and Merchants' National Bank to erect a fireproof building and to equip the same with standard furniture for the Livermore postoffice, had been accepted. Knox was instructed to notify the bank officials to hasten the erection of the building in order that the postoffice might be removed to its new location at the earliest possible moment.

The tentative plan submitted by the Farmers and Merchants' National Bank with its proposal calls for a one-story reinforced concrete building, 90x60 feet in dimensions. It will be divided into four compartments or storerooms. The portion to be devoted to the postoffice will be 20x50 feet in dimensions and will be equipped with metal or hardwood fixtures and partitions, patent lock-boxes with combination locks, safe, etc.

Carl H. Rasmussen is drawing the plans for the new building. They will be completed next week and submitted to the inspector in charge for approval. As soon as the inspector expresses himself as satisfied the construction of the building will be submitted to bids.

Postmaster Knox says that the building will be sufficiently advanced so that he can move and begin the first quarter in the new year in his new quarters. The original order stated that the office must be moved by October 1, but this was made impossible by the delay of the Postoffice Department in making a decision.

LOCAL TEAMS PLAY BALL AT RICHMOND TODAY

RICHMOND, Sept. 20.—At the First street ball grounds tomorrow afternoon the ball teams of the Santa Fe and the College of Winehaven will start their series of three games for a purse of $50 and the local championship. Both teams have been practicing every evening this week and are in excellent fettle for the opening game. The Santa Fe battery will be O'Brien and Happy Bradley, and the latter claims to be able to beat Doc Kieley's record of 48 strike-outs in three games. Bradley is a high school boy who is sure to make a name for himself in the baseball world if he keeps up the article of ball he has put up the last two seasons. The railroad men will be strengthened by Ash, their shortstop. Pinkerton and Moss will form the battery for the winery boys, who declare they intend to draw down the money.

VALUABLE STATUES PLACED IN CHURCH

HAYWARD, Sept. 20. — Several valuable statues, which have been conveyed from Barcelona, Spain, are now installed in All Saints' church, Hayward. Rev. Father James Viladomat had the statues specially carved by Reixach Vilas of Barcelona. Two of the statues, one representing the child Christ, and the other an altar boy dressed in church vestments and holding a coin tray in which the parishioners will place their offerings, were purchased with money raised by popular subscription.

Three other statues donated by members of the S. P. R. S. I. society will be used in the Good Friday exercises. These three statues consist of a figure of the Mater Dolorosa, the Lady of Sorrows, dressed in robes of crimson and purple and figures of Christ.

PUBLIC HEARING ON HARBOR PLANS

RICHMOND, Sept. 20.—Business men and boost bodies of Richmond interested in the construction of the inner harbor, tunnel, highway and wharf have asked the city council to call a special session for the purpose of considering all the plans now before it, to review what has already been done, and to get everybody busy pushing the projects so that a year now since the $1,170,000 harbor bonds were voted by the people here. This the council has promised to do at an early date and the mayor and councilmen are desirous that upon that occasion the business men and commercial organizations be present and help with any suggestions they may have to offer to expedite matters.

The council has carried the propositions along as fast as possible, but has been delayed and hindered much by the fact that many tide land questions and the ownership of various parcels of land affected by the tunnel have had to be considered, condemnation suits brought and many other preliminary matters attended to, all of which take up much time.

It is expected that a large number of citizens will attend the proposed meeting and assist with any practical suggestions, as well as familiarizing themselves with the various phases of the projects and the proceedings had to date.

Colonel Thomas H. Rees has written another communication to the rivers and harbors board of engineers in Washington telling them that the Richmond people can be passed upon independently of the greater east bay project, and will dovetail in with the latter without change in case the people of the other communities interested decide that they want to put through the big proposition.

Smith of Oakland, after investigating the manner in which street proceedings records are kept in the office of City Clerk A. G. Faris, on his visit to this city yesterday.

This system was devised years ago by H. H. Turley when he was city clerk here, and with the succeeding clerks following and enlarging the plan until the street work record from the first step to the last can be found at a moment's notice.

ORGANIZATION DOWN TO PERFECT SYSTEM

Associated Press Not Monopoly, but Servant of Subscribers

(The subjoined article on the Associated Press by Frank B. Noyes, president, gives an excellent outline of the methods of operation, organization and collection and distribution of news by the greatest news gathering organization in the world. It was presented to Congress this session and was ordered printed by the government. The exclusive Associated Press franchise for Oakland is owned by THE TRIBUNE.)

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BY FRANK B. NOYES.
President The Associated Press.

Probably no institution is more widely known by name than the Associated Press, and on the other hand, more vaguely understood by the public generally as to its organization and its functions. For whatever cause this may be, that it is a fact is daily apparent.

The Associated Press is an association of something over 850 newspapers, operating under a charter of the State of New York as a mutual and co-operative organization for the interchange and collection of news. Under the terms of its charter "the corporation is not to make a profit nor to make or declare dividends and is not to engage in the business of selling intelligence nor traffic in the same."

In other words, the Associated Press is simply a common agent of its members by which they arrange an interchange of the news that each collects and is bound by its membership obligation to contribute for the common use of its fellow members and also as the agency through which reports of foreign and certain classes of domestic happenings are collected and distributed to the newspapers served by the organization.

The fact that in the present year we celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the first nation-wide co-operative and nonprofit-making news gathering organization in the world seems to make the publication of something respecting it timely.

SERVANT OF PRESS.

The Associated Press is in no wise the master of the newspapers constituting its membership; it is distinctly their servant.

Its board of directors is composed of active newspaper men chosen at annual meetings by the membership, and, in an experience running through 20 years of intimate connection with the present organization and also that of the older Illinois corporation, I have never known an instance in all the changing personnel of boards of directors when there was any departure from the most rigid observance of the highest obligations of trusteeship and disregard of private and selfish interests. The president, vice-presidents, and members of the board of directors serve without salaries.

The Associated Press of today is the outcome of a many-year struggle between two opposing systems. One, that of news gathering concerns with private or limited ownership, which dealt at arm's length with newspapers to which they sold news at such profit as might be secured and over which the newspapers who bought from them had no more control than over the paper mill supplying them with print paper.

The other system is based on the theory that a powerful, privately owned and controlled news gathering agency is a menace to the press and people.

ACTS FOR SUBSCRIBERS.

Determined to establish an agency subject only to the control of the newspapers for whom it acted, in 1893 a group of western men composing the Western Associated Press began a fight to attain this end, and since that time a contest between these two opposing principles has been waged. In asserting that the Associated Press, as today constituted, is the servant and agent only of the newspapers for which it acts I have no thought of minimizing the tremendous importance of the work it does as such an agent, but wish simply to emphasize the thought that properly speaking it has no entity of its own, no mission save to serve its members.

Its members are scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from Canada to the Gulf, and represent every possible shade of political belief, religious faith, and economic sympathy. It is obvious that the Associated Press can have no partisan nor factional bias, no religious affiliation, no capitalistic nor prolabor trend.

Its function is simply to furnish its members with a truthful, clean, comprehensive, nonpartisan—and this in its broadest sense—report of the news of the world as expeditiously as is compatible with accuracy and as economically as possible

To do this the newspapers composing its membership contribute, first, the news of their localities, and, second, weekly assessments of money aggregating about $3,000,000 per annum, with which an extensive system of leased wires is maintained (22,000 000 miles of wire at night), bureaus in the principal American cities supplementing and collating the news of local newspapers and bureaus for the original collection of news throughout the world.

VOLUME OF NEWS.

The volume of the news report to members varies greatly, ranging from 500 words daily by telegraph or telephone to papers able to utilize but a small amount of general news matter to more than 50,000 words daily or 35 newspaper columns in the more important cities.

The method of collecting foreign news has been greatly changed in recent years. Formerly the Associated Press collected its foreign service in London, receiving the news there of the Reuter Company, of the Wolff Agency of Germany, and of the Havas Agency of France, with smaller affiliated agencies in Italy and Spain.

The objection to this method was that the news as received in London was alleged to be impressed with an English bias; in any event it was concededly not collected from an American viewpoint.

To meet this criticism the Associated Press has established regular bureaus of its own in all the great news centers, and now maintains offices and staffs in London, Paris, Berlin, Rome, St. Petersburg, Vienna, Tokio, Peking, Mexico City, and Habana, in addition to hundreds of individual correspondents scattered throughout the world.

It is probable that in the foreign news field the extraordinary genius of Melville E. Stone, the general manager of the Associated Press, has been most strikingly exhibited. Just prior to the Russo-Japanese war Mr. Stone secured from the czar of Russia the abolition of the censorship, and newspaper men still remember the remarkable frankness with which the Russian government gave out the news of Russia's reverses in that conflict.

MESSAGES EXPEDITED.

Orders expediting the messages of the Associated Press were issued at his instance by the German, French, Italian, and Russian governments, and as a result it has come to be common for European capitals to get the first news of continental events through Associated Press reports cabled back from New York.

One beneficial result coming from this more direct relationship is to be found in the minimizing of the ill effect of the occasional outbreak of some utterly inconsequential German, French, English, or Japanese "yellow" sporadically abusing the United States and its people.

Formerly profound significance of a widespread hostility was attached to such outpourings. With the closer understanding that comes from more intimate knowledge, we now understand the relative importance of the newspapers of other countries as we are able to weigh and grade our own.

The disadvantage of lack of news touch is strikingly apparent in the relations of the United States with the Central and South American nations. These countries secure their news of the United States by way of Europe, and it consists mainly of murders, lynchings, and embezzlements. The antipathy of the United States by the people of these countries is undoubtedly largely due to the false perspective given by their newspapers. If in truth we were the kind of people they are led to believe we are they would be fully justified in their attitude.

It has been the aim of those intrusted with the management of the Associated Press to secure as its representatives both at home and abroad men of high character and attainments, and it may, I think, be fairly assumed that the reputation for accuracy and fairness that its service enjoys is largely to be attributed to an unusual measure of success in this endeavor.

NOT ABOVE CRITICISM.

While the Associated Press is generally held in good esteem, I would not be understood as indicating that it has been exempt from criticism and attack.

If in a campaign all the candidates, or their managers or press agents, did not accuse the Associated Press of the grossest partisanship as against the particular candidacy in which they were interested, those bearing the responsibilities of the service would feel convinced that something was radically wrong and would look with suspicion on the report themselves.

This is but human nature. During the last campaign for the presidential nominations every candidate either in person or by proxy expressed his conviction that the Associated Press was favorable to somebody else.

Mr. Wilson's press agent asserted that our service was pro-Clark and in the opinion of Speaker Clark we had sold out to the Wilson people. Mr. Taft's managers felt that he was not being given a fair show and Mr Roosevelt was firm in his conviction that the avenues of information had been choked to his disadvantage.

Of course later we know that Mr. Wilson does not share the only-for-publication views of his press agent and Speaker Clark is as emphatic in his withdrawal as in his hasty charges. Mr. Taft's managers realize that the Associated Press can not report speeches that he does not make, and Mr. Roosevelt must see a humorous side to the suggestion that anyone has interfered with his getting a fairly adequate representation on the first page.

[illegible] more a fundamental misunderstanding of the functions of the Associated Press. The individual correspondent or reporter for a given newspaper or a small group of newspapers having a common bias may be permitted to indulge in partisanship or in propaganda.

NOT TO BE PERMITTED.

This is absolutely not to be permitted in the Associated Press. No bias of any sort can be allowed. Our function is to supply our members with news, not views, with news as it happens—not as we may want it to happen. Intensely as its management may sympathize with any movement, no propaganda in its behalf can be tolerated. Very jealously indeed does the membership guard against their agency going outside its allotted duties and argus-eyed is the censorship of every handler of our "copy."

It is not, naturally, to be claimed that no mistakes are made. They are made and will be made. But in the very nature of the business, with the heart so worn upon the sleeve, detection very swiftly follows, and the mistakes are few and far between.

The desire to enlist the Associated Press in propaganda or advocacy is usually to be found at the bottom of criticisms of its service. Added to this often is misinformation as to the real facts and sometimes, though happily rarely, actual malice.

The service from Russia, for example, has been harshly criticized by some who thought that the province of the Associated Press was to undertake a crusade against the Russian government because of its anti-Semitic attitude. Our theory of our obligations is that we should report the facts as they occur, without fear or favor, but that it is no part of our duty to draw indictments save as the facts alone are damning.

The case of the Koreans charged with a plot to assassinate Governor General Terauchi has recently been much discussed.

These Koreans were almost all converted Christians and the American missionaries in Korea were naturally intensely interested in the matter.

THE KOREAN INCIDENT.

It was freely alleged that the Associated Press, unduly influenced by the Japanese government, had suppressed the fact that these Koreans had made confessions implicating American missionaries as accessories to the plot and had subsequently retracted these confessions, asserting that they had been extorted by atrocious torture inflicted by the Japanese police, the intimation being also that the missionaries were in peril by reason of the repudiated confessions.

Based on this some of the missionary authorities here became much perturbed, and indeed one of the great New York papers printed news and editorial articles criticizing the Associated Press for the suppression of the matter.

As a matter of fact an inspection of the news service received by the Associated Press and distributed to its members showed that it carried the full facts: the confessions, the implications of the missionaries, the allegations of torture, the fact that the allegation of torture was believed by the missionaries, and also the fact that the Japanese denied the torture stories and attached no credence whatever to the prisoners' statements implicating the missionaries.

On learning the real situation the New York newspaper in question promptly printed an ample amende honorable, but I do not doubt that many still ignorant of the retraction feel that the Associated Press was guilty of some dereliction.

Another cause of frequent misapprehension is in the general tendency of newspaper readers to attribute anything seen in print to the Associated Press, and it is constantly necessary to explain that some violently partisan or inaccurate article was the work of a "special" and not a part of our service.

Away back in the middle of the last century an alliance, offensive and defensive, existed between the old New York Associated Press, a news selling organization owned by seven New York papers, and the Western Union Telegraph Company, under the terms of which the New York Associated Press dealt solely with the Western Union, and the Western Union, in turn, gave discriminating [illegible] to the New York Associated Press.

Although this arrangement (in the light of today a very improper one) was abolished more than 30 years ago, many people think that it still exists, and occasionally someone arises fiercely to denounce this unholy alliance.

The simple truth is that the Associated Press has, during all these 30 years and more paid exactly what other news associations pay and that the rates charged by the telegraph companies for the facilities furnished us are greatly in excess of those charged individual newspapers, and still more than those charged stockholders having leased wires.

The Associated Press leases wires, many thousands of miles of them, from the Western Union, the Postal, the American Telegraph & Telephone Company, and from several of the independent telephone companies.

The firs three have a common basic rate, charging us $22 a mile a year in the daytime, and $12 a mile a year at night. For exactly the same wire they charge an individual newspaper $20 and $10, respectively, and a stockholder gets a still further reduction.

Far from receiving discriminatory favors, the Associated Press feels that it is being distinctly and heavily discriminated against.

In these days when all transactions on a large scale are being subjected to so rigid a scrutiny it is natural that so conspicuous a mark of public attention as is the Associated Press should not find itself immune from critical inspection.

From time to time some voice is raised denouncing the Associated Press in the same breath both as a monopoly and because it is not a monopoly and insisting that it become a monopoly by admitting to its membership all desiring its service, the theory being that in some way the activities of the association impress it with a public use and subject it to the obligation of a common carrier to serve all comers.

From an ethical standpoint only, then, is there anything improper, unsafe, or unwise in a group of newspapers, large or small, associating themselves together to do a thing that each must otherwise do separately and of reserving to themselves the right to determine to what extent the membership of such a group shall be enlarged?

It does not seem possible to hold fairly that a newspaper in New York may not join with one in Chicago and one in Philadelphia to maintain a common correspondent in Washington without making it obligatory on these three newspapers to share the fruits of their enterprise with other New York, Chicago, and Philadelphia newspapers.

EACH HELPS OTHER.

If, in addition, they arrange that each shall supply the others with the news of its home city, is it within the bounds of reason that they are required to furnish to competitors the same facilities?

I give this illustration because that is exactly the relation of the newspapers composing the Associated Press, the scale only being enlarged.

The obligations of a common carrier are, however, in no wise dependent on the magnitude of its transactions. The ferry sculled across a stream is just as much impressed with a public use as is the Pennsylvania railroad. Each is a common carrier. It is the nature of the transaction and not its size that determines its obligations. As respects the question of common carriership, what is right for three to do is proper for 300 or for 800 do do.

To compel the Associated Press to assume an entity of its own and to serve all comers would, in my judgment, bring about a condition fraught with the gravest dangers to the freedom of the press and in turn to the freedom of the people.

At present about one-third of the daily newspapers of the country are represented by membership in the Associated Press.

There are a number of concerns engaged in the collection and sale of general news to non-members of the Associated Press, and in one way or another they supply their customers with what are declared to be satisfactory services.

In nowise desiring to become anything approaching a monopoly, the Associated Press has avoided even the appearance of any competitive rivalry, admitting additional members solely on the ground of a common benefit to the members of a co-operative institution.

If by some occult reasoning the Associated Press could be held as a common carrier, these news selling organizations would be wiped out and the Associated Press would, if the end sought for was accomplished, become a real monopoly and the incentive for co-operation no longer existing, it would naturally drift into a concern for pecuniary profit in private ownership and subject to private control.

PASSING OF CONTROL.

No more dangerous situation can well be imagined than the passing of the control of the greatest news gathering and news disseminating agency of the world from the hands of co-operative newspapers to the control of some individual interested in manipulating the news—the master and not the servant of the newspapers.

Because this [illegible] would be so grave it will not come, but for another reason also a very basic reason.

There can be no monopoly in news.

The day that it becomes apparent that a monopoly in collecting and distributing news exists, that day, in some way, by some method, individual newspapers or groups of newspapers will take up the work of establishing a service for themselves independent of outside control.

The news of the world is open to him who will go for it. Anyone will-[illegible] and the money to approach it may dip from the well of truth.

The news service of the Associated Press does not consist of its leased wires or its offices. Its soul is in the personal service of human men, of men with eyes to see, with ears to hear, with hands to write, and with brains to understand, of men who are proud when they succeed, humiliated when they fail, and resentful when maligned. The telegraph wires are but the blind instruments of this service, though the wire has brought the uttermost parts of the world marvelously close. These human entities are ranging the world to send word of its doings, its rejoicings, and its sorrowings, to satisfy the thirst of the people for intelligence of the march of events.

The news service of the Associated Press of the horror of Martinique was not the event itself. It was the personal service of a man who at the first hint of the disaster that had wiped out a population took his orders, chartered a boat, and went to Martinique, where no correspondent lived, and sent a story, his story, of the great tragedy, wrecking his health by the effort required.

To get this report, this "news" was open to anyone.

To get it cost the members of the Associated Press more than $[illegible],000 in addition to the human waste and prodigious effort.

And as today devoted men labor [illegible] and die in order that the Associated Press, an organization that neither owns nor prints a newspaper, may lay before their readers a fair picture of all these and other things, so always and die bravely that men serve [illegible] have tidings of sport the world [illegible] of birth and death, of and [illegible] and parliament, of battle [illegible] and [illegible] of shipwreck and rescue.

Titan Rugbyites Give Varsity Hard Contest

U. C. FRESHMEN DEFENDING THEIR GOAL AT A CRITICAL MOMENT IN THE GAME YESTERDAY IN WHICH THE OAKLAND HIGH SCHOOL RUGBY TEAM WAS DEFEATED 6-0. THE BALL HAD JUST BEEN SENT SPINNING OUT OF A SCRUM AND LIES AT THE FEET OF A CALIFORNIA BACK.

'PREP PLAYERS' ARE GREAT SURPRISE

University Freshmen Win From Oakland High in Preliminary

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, Sept. 20.—Only the masterly kick of Captain Peart of forty yards for a field goal saved the California Varsity from a dressing this afternoon at the hands of the Titans, a new Rugby aggregation composed of preparatory school graduates. California won by a score of 4 to 3.

In a preliminary game the freshmen won from Oakland High School by a score of 6 to 0.

The 4 to 3 score in the Varsity game fails to show the prowess exhibited by the Titans. Time and again they rushed the Varsity off its feet and were prevented from two or three more trys by unfortunate penalties. Despite this fact, however, the Varsity showed a marked improvement over a week ago, in all parts of the game.

The fourteen-man team had the most successful try-out of the season in this afternoon's game and won marked favor with the four thousand persons who attended. It resulted, especially in the varsity game, in a notable increased fastness and openness of play that made the game, as a spectacle, most pleasing to the bleachers.

STRENUOUS CONTEST.

The varsity game from the start was a rough and tumble fight. California dribbled and passed to the one-yard line, but lost the ball there on a fumble, and the Titans promptly rushed it back to the other end of the field. The Titans secured a gain in an exchange of kicks and finally carried the ball across on a passing rush in which practically all of the backs figured. The goal was missed.

Kicking, dribbling and passing followed during the remainder of the game in bewildering succession with the Titans constantly gaining the advance. California made one stand toward the end of the game, carrying the ball on six passes almost the length of the field only to lose possession by a forward pass within a shadow of the goal.

Soon after the opening of the second half, Captain Peart, in possession of the ball, darted out of the muck to the 40-yard line and punted one of the longest field goals that has ever been seen on California field. Score, 4 to 3 for California.

TITANS VENGEFUL.

The Titans came back with a vengeance after this and swept the varsity offers feet with a mad rush down the field in which LaFar cut a notable figure. The Titans lost the ball, however, on a foul, though they kept the play in California's territory throughout most of the remainder of the game. There was no further scoring.

Oakland High School's team put up an excellent exhibition of Rugby against the heavier and more experienced freshmen. The Freshies carried the ball to the two-yard line by a series of kicks and dribbles and went across on the line-up with a passing rush. Later in the first half California secured the ball by a forward pass and two of the backs carried it across. Neither goal was kicked. Oakland high gave the freshman a tough battle throughout the second half of the game, holding them without a tally.

Final score California 6, Oakland 0.

HOW MEN LINED UP.

California—Forwards, A. King, McKim, Douglass W. King, Shaw, Fish, Brant, half, Montgomery; five-eighths Hayes, Peart; three-quarters, Dills, Lane, Smith; full, Canfield.

Titans — Forwards, Shuwand, Bond, Hills, C. Slater, Reimers, Haynes, Pape, Hunt; half, Slater; five-eighths, S. Forbes, Knowles; three-quarters, R. Forbes, Kirk, Lasar; full, Hanley.

Oakland—Forwards, Miller, Gaves, Montagne, Lacoste, Crawford, Milliken, Murray; half, A. Gimball; five-eighths, Black, Haynes; three-quarters, Klopton, Egelbert, McMahon; full, C. Hill.

Stanford Varsity Wins From "Barbs"

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 20.—Stanford's varsity team won a rugby game from the Barbarians on Stanford field today by a score of 8 to 3.

The game had several remarkable features.

The two halves of 25 minutes each were played without a second's time being taken out for injuries.

During the course of the 50 minutes play there were only 11 scrums.

Stanford only used three substitutes.

Judging by to-day's exhibition the "fourteen-man" game is going to be a success. Designed to speed up the game and prevent close play the abbreviation of the playing strength of the sides worked like a charm today. The most exacting crier for speed could not possibly have found any fault with the game, and the small but enthusiastic crowd of Stanford students that gathered on the shady side of the bleachers on the big college stadium went wild with delight.

Stanford has a good team. That much is apparent even at this early stage of the season. The forwards are lighter than we have been accustomed to see in the intercollegiate games of the past seven years, but the lack of weight is balanced by an increase in speed, and the aggresiveness that has been a characteristic of the Cardinal forward play is as strong as ever.

CHARLTON HAS OBTAINED LAWYER

Accused Man's Nervousness Over Outlook Is Partially Ended.

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.

ROME, Sept. 20.—After a fortnight of intense anguish, during which a thirty-year sentence stared him in the face day and night Porter Charlton, now breathes a little more freely.

He has received a letter stating that through the intervention of some sympathetic friends who want to give him every possible chance, Judge Palmieri had reconsidered his decision not to defend him and had retained as associate Signor Giovanni Porzio, a deputy in the Italian Parliament and one of Italy's foremost criminal lawyers.

Until a few days ago Charlton's chance of having even a fair trial was slim, and the young man brooded over it.

He informed Judge Rognoni, who conducted the preliminary investigation, that his father's financial resources had been exhausted during the long legal battle for the United States to wrest from the Italian court and he had now no alternative but to avail himself of the free legal assistance to which, under the Italian law, a destitute is entitled

IN PECULIAR POSITION.

The answer was anything but reassuring, as Charlton was unable to submit to the proper authorities a certificate proving him not a property owner, nor could he assert he came from a family of paupers.

Besides, the judge told him that while at the trial a lawyer would be assigned to defend him, still his chance of getting a short sentence rested wholly with his lawyers ability in conducting the case and preparing the defense and in the alienists' opinions.

The judge asked for a list of Italy's well known lawyers and asked them to come to his aid. The replies were utterly discouraging—they showed him that Italian criminal lawyers are nearly as expensive as their American brothers.

In despair, Charlton wrote to an American here whose name had been suggested to him. The final result was that Judge Palmieri consented to induce Deputy Porzio to look after Charlton's interests while the financial question was being discussed.

Deputy Porzio's first step was to acquaint Charlton with the Italian penal procedure, under which witness for both the defendant and the prosecuting residing abroad are not required to come to Italy to testify, but may be heard either before the Italian consul or a United States Commissioner in the district where they reside, their deposition being read at the trial.

CONTEST IN NEW YORK.

It is now clear that the first fight over Charlton is to be fought in New York, where former Judge Palmieri will conduct an examination of witness before the Italian Consul.

This, however, will cause considerable delay as the matter must be conducted through diplomatic channels.

These examinations over, the preliminary investigation will be closed and the case will be turned over to the indictment section of the court, which is equivalent to the American grand jury. It is only after this verdict has been returned that the date of the trial can be fixed.

Under the Italian code, Charlton will be prosecuted for the equivalent of murder in the first degree; the penalty for which is a life sentence, including six years of solitary confinement, which very few survive and those only to find themselves mental and physical wrecks.

If extenuating circumstances are granted the sentence can be reduced to twenty years.

Red and Blue Gridiron Warriors Look for Great Year

WEIGHT BIG ADVANTAGE TO COLLEGE RUGBY CANDIDATES

Weight, the important factor which has been an absent member in St. Mary's football candidates in the past, is back among the candidates this year. In fact, it seems certain, that the local collegians are in for a successful season. There is but one handicap in the team's makeup and that is lack of experience. Many of the new men [illegible] bulk have had previously practically no experience and hence it will be necessary for Coach Otto Rittler and his assistant, Louis Watts, to devote all their time to drumming the rudiments of the sport into the new material.

McInerney, a youngster from Honolulu, bids fair to make good in the scrum. He has the weight and can cover ground fairly well. There are also a number of other promising youngsters who can be depended upon to work hard to bring their colors to the front. Rittler is contemplating several changes in the position of the men of last year. Harold Roth and Joe Oeschger, wing and full back respectively of last season are to be moved to the scrum.

Rittler will send his second team candidates against the Alameda high fifteen tomorrow afternoon on the college grounds. He has decided to try out the seven man scrum, bringing the team to fourteen men. In case the new trial does not prove successful, he will swing in a wing forward.

"FARM LIFE FINE FOR PITCHERS"—W. J.

There is no pitcher better qualified to tell his fellow craftsmen how to succeed in their profession than Walter Johnson, the star of the Washington American league club. Johnson attributes his success to the following program of living.

"I was born on a farm and I love the life. A good many ball players don't, but I do. When the baseball season is over I go back to our farm out in Kansas and work on the place right through the winter, just like any of the men. I get enough of the big towns and the bright lights during the summer, and I am glad to get back to the farm and do farm work just as soon as I can. And I always hate to come back east every spring to begin playing baseball again.

"I have often said and no one has disputed me, that I work harder every winter than any other ball player. The result is that in the spring I am just as hard as I was in the autumn. Instead of hanging around hotels and poolrooms in some big city, I am out on the farm, getting up every morning before daylight and going out to help feed the stock. Then I come back to the house for breakfast, have a good, healthy appetite and eat accordingly.

"After that there is a lot of more work to be done around the place. I put in a good day every day in the week, and by the time night comes I am ready to turn in early, for I know that the next morning I must get up just as early and start out again, lantern in hand, sometimes with the thermometer way down below zero, for we have it cold out our way lots of times during the winter. I don't do it so much because I have to, but because I like to. I have not time across any ball players with whom I would swap places during the off season."

KNIGHTS FAIL TO STOP MOOSE

The modern symbol of the strenuous and energetic life demonstrated its superiority over the dominating force of mediaeval days when nine knights of the Tribe of Pythias went down to defeat before the rushes of the Fruitvale Moose in the tournament lists at the Y. M. C. A. club passing contests last night.

The contest was held at the gymnasium of the local Y. M. C. A., Twenty-first street and Telegraph avenue, and is the first of a series of three games, the other two to be held on the 23d and 30th of September. The game was closely contested throughout.

The teams lined up as follows:

Knights of Pythias—Al Levine, captain, J. F. Petrice, M. C. Vaughn, R. E. [illegible], John J. Nagle, J. P. Weisn, L. Neitert, [illegible] Jr., Geo. H. White.

Next Tuesday night the Foresters of America, Woodmen of the World, Oakland Moose, Fruitvale Moose and Knights of Pythias will meet each other in the tournament.

THE MAGNATE SINGS TO HIS STAR.

Believe me, if all that endearing young stuff
Which you're flashing so proudly today
Were to pack by tomorrow and hike to the rough,
I'd boot you with glee on your way.
For I've got no gangway for has-beens or limes
Who've arrived and are beating it hence,
For I'm running this stunt for the little old

They slip me from outside [illegible]

So get this direct from your Meal Ticket, son,
Produce all your goods from the jump;
Don't lag on the landscape, for when you are done
You'll land in the book with a thump.
This pinching to friends from the wire to the tape
Sounds great when it's printed in books,
But up in Fast Co you must grab off the dough
Or else they will soak you the hooks.

BEST FIGHT FANS WERE THE STURDY OLD '49ERS

California recently paid its annual tribute of respect to the '49ers, those brave and hardy pioneers who put the Golden State on the map of the Union. It is worth while recording that those Argonauts were enthusiastic boxing fans, and from the very first California was a Mecca for the pugilists. It was largely the better class of pioneers, too, who supported the sport. The tin-horn gamblers and other disreputable parties usually settled their arguments with a pistol or a dagger, but the real pioneer whom the native sons delight to honor, was a sturdy, two-fisted gent who took naturally to the fair, stand-up encounter with the fists as a means of deciding a difference of opinion.

In those early days on the coast real prize fights were pulled off with bare knuckles to a finish. The present style of boxing, which the reformers are now trying to prohibit in California, would seem mighty tame to a '49er.

John Morrissey was one of the first of the great fighters to scrap in California, and in his wake have come the most celebrated boxers of the last 60 years. Jeffries and Corbett both began fighting on the coast, and the latter was a native son. Bob Fitzsimmons fought his first American bouts in San Francisco. Jeff's great battles, including those with Fitz, Sharkey, Munroe, Ruhlin, Choynski and others, were fought on the coast. In fact, no other State, not even New York, has ever witnessed so many sensational boxing matches.

Among the notable contests staged in the Golden State may be recalled the Corbett-Sharkey, Jackson-Corbett, Corbett-Choynski, Fitzsimmons-O'Brien, Fitzsimmons-Gardner, O'Brien-Burns, Hart-Johnson, Johnson-McVey, Nelson-Britt, Gans-Britt, Gans-Nelson, Attell-Moran, Johnson-Ketchell, McFarland-Welsh, Ketchell-Papke, Nelson-Young Corbett, Langford-Barry and many other historic contests between the stars of the pugilistic arena. Many of these battles have been fought on Admission day, and since that holiday was established it has been a festival of the boxing fans.

"Life"—as the philosopher, George M. Cohan, has observed—"is a very funny proposition after all." All good people know that a boxer is a low-browed, abysmal brute, and yet when one of them is accidentally killed they set up a wail as if he had been their nearest and dearest relation. If that boxer had repented him of his evil ways, and had gone to work in a coal mine, and his life had been sacrificed to the cupidity of the stockholders—good people, all—nobody, I take it, and I think you will take it, would have given a continental whoop. Truly, we strain at a go-cart and swallow a motor truck.

Santa Clara Defeats Stanford Freshmen

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 20.—With a backfield of veritable sprinters, who showed they understood how to back up their team-mates, the Santa Clara University rugby 15 defeated the Stanford second team by a score of 15 to 0 on the Stanford turf this afternoon. Both teams played the eight-man scrum, but the visitors seemed to have the better of the game.

LITIGATION MAY BARE INSIDE OF MOVING PICTURE FARCE

If Welsh Carried Through His Program Law Suits Will Likely Follow.

(By W. W. NAUGHTON.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—If Freddie [illegible], lightweight champion, went through with the program he mapped out for himself today it will probably be some little time yet before the Ritchie-Welsh affair at Vancouver. There will be lawsuits and sworn testi- There will be lawsits and sworn testimony and it may be that the public will learn the inside of the acts of one of the biggest farces the sport of pugilism has known.

Ritchie, it will be remembered, was to have boxed Welsh at Vancouver today. Ritchie did not like the way things were going up there and came away without going through the formality of bidding Welsh and the promoters goodbye. It looked as though Welsh was left in the lurch, but after spending some days in deep thought he discovered a way to turn Ritchie's perfidity to profit. He decided to go through with his end of the great international moving picture championship in Ritchie's absence.

FINE BILL OF FARE.

Here is Freddie's schedule as it came over the wires from Vancouver: "Weigh in 12:15 p. m., at 135 pounds; hop through the ropes at the Brighose Arena an hour later; shadow fight an imaginary Ritchie, land an imaginary knockout; declare himself world's champion; visit the lawyers and make a claim for the $2500 forfeit money together with other amounts said to have been lost in declining other bouts."

It is presumed of course that Welsh acted under his lawyer's advice in everything he did today, but even at that he may have failed to establish a complete legal basis for an action or actions against Ritchie.

EASY TO FIND LOOPHOLE.

To justify a suit for damages he will have to prove that he carried out his part of the contract to the minutest detail. To protect his interests he should have had moving pictures taken of his battle with the imaginary Ritchie, otherwise Ritchie's lawyer can set up the claim that Freddie engaged in a fight that did not conform with the articles signed by Ritchie and Welsh.

Another thing Ritchie may urge that he was not represented today when the imaginary receipts of the imaginary championship were being counted and that there again the provisions of the original articles were violated.

If all these counter claims or charges are overruled Ritchie can play his trump card. He can furnish proof that when Welsh fought his phantom fight, Jim Griffin, the man mutually agreed upon as referee was [illegible] thousand miles away and argue that, in the absence of a referee and decision there is nothing before the court to show that the contest described by what actually took place.

GOOD AS A COMEDY.

As a producer of amusing complications the Welsh-Ritchie matter has been as prolific as a Yellowstone geyser from the beginning. But if all law suits fail there is one direction in which Welsh can gain a slight amount of satisfaction. After having disposed of an imaginary Ritchie he can cable to England, that he is now "theoretically" the light weight champion of the world.

"It's an ill wind, etc," and the Welsh crowd is not allowing the disappointments it has experienced to cloud its vision. It sees in the turn affairs have taken one grand chance for advertising and is taking full advantage of it.

The mail sacks coming across from Vancouver are freighted with newspaper clippings which are replete with vitrolic criticism of Ritchie's "cowardice" and in addition every large sized envelope contains typewritten emanations from Harry Pollock, manager of Welsh.

PASSING THE BUCK.

The latest to hand denies that Pollock sent out press matter praising himself for having outwitted Ritchie in a managerial war. Harry says it was Jack Robinson, the hired publicity dispenser, who did the dastardly trick.

Possibly the next mail will bring a statement from Robinson "passing the buck" to some one else in the boost bureau, although as Jack has unblushingly admitted that his was the master mind that conceived, planned and set in motion the Battling Nelson wedding pageant it is not likely that he is thin-skinned enough to deny anything.

Meanwhile even with Welsh out of it the lightweight situation continues to excite mingled merriment and disgust. The championship title at the present time is plastered all over with the dollar sign and there is nothing in the prospect to give promise that there will ever be a genuine bout for the trophy if the present holder can avoid it.

Sporting writers in every quarter of this big country keep repeating that Harlem Tommy Murphy is the "logical candidate" for evasive Willie Ritchie, yet Ritchie dismissed the subject with the remark that Murphy "will keep."

From all appearances the scheme is to "keep" Murphy away at the bottom of the list of preferred candidates, and if any new men bob up meanwhile the Murphy case would be subject to further postponement.

As an inkling of what is going on it might be cited that a New York promoter who has an option on Ritchie's next public appearance apparently wired the other night that if Leach Cross did not quickly accept the terms offered him for a match with Ritchie, Johnny Dundee would be substituted.

Maybe if Dundee rebelled at the smallness of the amount set aside for him, Kid Broad or Eudie Unholz would have been given a chance. The boy the public wants to see in action with Ritchie is Tommy Murphy. It is bad enough to have the followers of ring sport deploring that the days of worth while champions such as Erne, Gans, Nelson and Wolgast have passed without having the lad who gained the title through a fluke disinclined to take a sporting chance with the laurels that came to him through the "other fellow's punch."

With only four more games to be played, the Oakland Amateur League teams are exerting an extra effort to pull up nearer to first place, which has been held by the International Correspondence School from the beginning of the season.

Last Sunday the I. C. S. met their third defeat, at the hands of Rock Ridge, this being the second time the leaders have been held down by Rock Ridge, and Hale Bros. should be credited with the other lost game. They anticipate no more trouble, however, for with the fast fielding of "Red" Powers on short and the heavy hitting of Powers, Witt and Allison, the team expects to walk through the rest of the season. Both Arlett and Nattress, the pitchers, are going fine, and besides, Arlett is batting his .381.

The Rock Ridge Athletic club seemed to outplay the I. C. S. at every stage of the game last Sunday, and but for the errors of Hodgman catcher and Milton Dorman, second base, a shutout might have resulted instead of 4 to 2 score. The high batting average of Rock Ridge has had a great deal to do with winning the last four games played, also Lester Dorman is proving himself one of the first pitchers of the league, while home runs in recent games of Chesley Roberts, Fred Raulino, Monk Hodgman and Lester Dorman have assisted in putting their team in second place.

The batting average of all teams has been called for, but the above is the only one received.

We understand that Hale Bros. wanted the Vernon-Rock Ridge Improvement Club to quit about the seventh inning last Sunday, but their manager was game and would not give up until the score had been piled up by Hales to 21 to 5. The result has put Vernon on its mettle and Rock Ridge may expect to face a set of determined men tomorrow at 10 a. m. at Bushrod park.

Kahn Bros. and Santa Fe broke even last Sunday in their double header at Bay View park. The unfortunate injury to Figeroid, pitcher for Kahns, a wrenched shoulder, will put him out of the box today, when they meet I. C. S., but if Hicks Simmons (Kahns' second pitcher), is in good form, the I. C. S. team will be given a good fight and Kahns may go into fourth place if they defeat the leaders of the league.

Hale Bros. is the team on whom every one has his eyes these days, however, and the wonderful burst of speed shown on the last few Sundays has aroused an unusual amount of interest and a few are expecting that first place may still be claimed by Lee Matheyer, their manager. Today they play Santa Fe at 10 a. m. at Bay View park, and Hales will endeavor to tie Rock Ridge for second place by defeating the Santa Fe men.

The Vernon-Rock Ridge Improvement club team will give a benefit theater party at the Rock Ridge Photo theater next Monday evening, and every member of the league should attend to assist in making it a success.

The Rock Ridge Athletic Club is arranging a smoker and meeting in the near future at which a couple of four round bouts will be pulled off, and any of the guests will be called on to put on the gores for a round or two who care to assist in the entertainment. All certified players and officers of the Oakland Amateur League and the Rock Ridge League are invited to attend. There will be no charge.

The Rock Ridge League, consisting of eight teams, was organized last Wednesday night and a series of 21 games is to be played, the first to begin today on the public playgrounds. [illegible] this league has not been selected, but the president [illegible] will be invited this week to complete the list.

All aboard for Newark today. Time, 8:24 a. m. Station, Fruitvale. The crack Twenty-third Avenue Merchants of East Oakland suffered a severe relapse in form during the past three weeks, owing to injuries to the majority of the team. Al Moir, the mainstay in the Merchants' pitching department, has been troubled with illness of late and Manager Ben Green will tender him a day of rest in this afternoon's game against Newark, while Handyman Dick Boyen will officiate instead. Moir twirled against Alameda last Sunday, and it was easily indicated that he was far out of form. He issued eight free tickets to first base, and gave six singles. A return game will take place Sunday, September 28, at Lincoln park, Alameda, and the wise followers of the bush teams claim uneasy verdict in view, with Moir in form after a week's layoff. The Merchants will endeavor to swamp the Newark aggregation today and Manager Ben Green states that when the boys get their customary start this afternoon they will pile up 17 more consecutive wins.

Al Moffitt's Braves scored another victory over their rivals, the Post Journal boys, by the score of 5-4 in a very exciting contest. The Journal boys started off like sure winners, making four runs in the first inning, principal [illegible] the ninth no more runs were scored, as Cortez and Jones pitched air-tight ball. The ninth inning came around with the Journal boys very confident, but confidence began to go when Jones smashed out a hot two-bagger, scoring Barney and Plummer. Benbeau kept the good work up with a hit, but Jones was held at third, where he scored from Durkee's triple. Tie score. Durkee then stole home, putting the Braves in the lead. In the last of the ninth Jones pitched great ball, striking out two of the three batters who faced him. Jones allowed but [illegible] and struck out nine while Cortez allowed nine hits, four bunched, and struck out six. Jewell played a good game at first base, as did Holtkam at leftfield for Moffitt's team. For the Journal boys, Stall and Moverhill starred.

CHARLEY SWAIN, BETTER BEWARE

Charley Swain continues to carve out long hits for the Victoria club in the Northwestern league.

Charley recently landed on the ball for what is universally acknowledged to have been the longest drive ever made at the Spokane park, getting the same off "Wee Willie" McCorry, the ex-Seal.

Incidentally, Swain holds the Los Angeles Washington park record in this respect, having landed the ball against a flamboyant work of art on the leftfield fence for a wagon-load of household junk early in the season.

Swain, to date, has cracked out 33 home runs this season, as follows.

Seattle, rightfield fence, seven.
Seattle, leftfield fence, seven.
Vancouver, rightfield fence, two.
Spokane, leftfield fence, three.
Victoria, [illegible] fence, [illegible]

All of which would seem to indicate that Charley is no respector of fences. Portland is the only place in the Northwestern league which he has not devastated with home runs this season.

Here is Swain's record for home runs and other varieties of extra base hits since he began batting the ball in a professional way:

	HR.	2B.	3B.	Av.
1905—Spokane	5	10	8	258
1906—Spokane	4	15	9	305

1911—Vancouver	8	34	9	302
1912—Sacramento	16	28	9	286
1913—Victoria	33	35	4	328

HOGAN'S MAN-EATERS AGAIN WALLOP PORTLAND, 6-5

Two Hits and a Walk Account for Oakland's Activity

WE have with us today Mr. Ralph Stroud, annihilator of batting averages. Mr. Stroud condescended to allow Oakland two hits and one free pass at Recreation Park yesterday afternoon, but that was the extent of his [illegible] as helpless before the Sacramento flinger as a fly in a bottle of ink. They didn't even buzz. Sacramento swatters fell upon the cherubic Charley Pruitt for four runs and eight markers in six innings, and collected another fare from Bill Malarkey, taking possession of the box score hands down.

Wolverton's fourth victory of the week was accomplished with singular smoothness and dispatch, only one local athlete reaching first up to the seventh inning. Guest boarded the circuit on a pass in the third and perished there.

Cook spoiled Stroud's ambitions for a no hit no run record by puncturing the Sacramento infield for a clean hit in the eighth, and a moment later Rohrer put in a bid for a $5 Kelly by rapping the advertising sign in rightfield, Cook striding to third. Kenworthy killed off the side by pocketing Malarkey's easy lofter, and the Oaks once more subsided.

Eddie Hallinan was the star cannonader for the Wolves, leading the field with three steaming singles out of four attempts. The first five men in the Wolfville batting array crossed the plate at various stages of the afternoon's soiree.

Sacramento's start was painfully sudden, a walk, three hits, and double steal producing two taps of the scorer's gong, in the first inning.

Tennant opened the fourth with a sizzling line to right, good for two pillows, and moved up a station when Lewis singled past Leard. Leard threw out Hallinan, keeping the Wolf runners to their bags, but Tennant beat it to the plate when Guest fumbled Kenworthy's effort and found he had just time to nail the batter at first. Lewis moving up to the sack vacated by Tennant. Cheek lashed savagely to rightfield, scoring his brother Wolf. Stroud whiffed for the third out.

Young's single greeted Malarkey in the seventh and a moment later Moran doubled to center accounting for the fifth and final insult.

CARLISLE BRINGS HOME SECOND VICTORY FOR VENICE

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 20. — Did you ever see hardened ball players fall en masse on the necks of a teammate who delivered the hit that won the game? That's what the Venetian did this afternoon when Walter Carlisle smashed the ball to center with the score five all and two on.

Carlisle did not delay the reception that had been planned for him by his overjoyed gang, for when Chadbourne let [illegible] centerfield fence, he ran all the way around. The victory today makes the count stand three games to two for the Beavers.

Cubs Offer $7000 for Koestner

And now it develops that the Ty Lober-Art Kreuger trade was not the only bloomer pulled on the coast this year.

With the release outright of Soldier Carson by McCredie Happy Hogan comes forward with the news that he refused $7000 for Elmer Koestner, whom he took from Portland in exchange for Carson.

The Chicago Cubs offered the money and also put in a draft for Koestner, but the draft was lost in the lottery.

BONESETTER REESE, M. D. OF REAL BASEBALL WIZARD

Famous Surgeon Uses Only His Fingers in Re-setting Broken Bones.

They say that "Bonesetter" Reese of Youngstown, Ohio, used to break the bones of the family cat when he was a boy just for the pleasure of resetting them.

But Reese says it's just one of the many fables concerning him and his work.

Here is a true story of this remarkable man, whose ability to set bones and replace dislocated tendons and muscles has won him a national reputation:

John D. Reese broke into the surgeon game late in life. He was born in Wales, he says, and came to this country when he was 32, heading straight for the Pittsburg steel mills. He was an ordinary workman, but had strong, deft fingers and a little practical knowledge of how the human frame is put together. In fact, he had a natural gift for setting bones.

In the mill opportunities to mend broken bones and replace tendons were frequent—so frequent that before long Reese was paying more attention to his fellow workmen than to his work for which he was paid. His experience gave him confidence to quit the mills after five years and move to Youngstown and take up natural surgery. Almost at once he acquired a big practice.

The bonesetter has repaired so many ball players, boxers and men in other lines of sport that he has difficulty in recalling individual cases.

But he does remember Tommy Leach. "Tommy the Wee" sprung a tendon when the Pirates were having a neck-and-neck finish in the flag race. In fact, he sprung the tendon thrice in two weeks, and his baseball career seemed ended.

In the end Pittsburg won the flag, and no man did more to bring this about than Leach, the cripple, thanks to Bonesetter Reese, who sent the jumping tendon back where it belonged every time it hopped.

Reese also remembers "Pop" Geers, thrown from his sulky and a broken ankle resulted. After the doctors were through he went to see the bonesetter for relief. He found Reese's house after difficulty, but saw no shingle, and when he finally saw Reese he allowed that a patient ought to be able to discover where a doctor lived without having to climb to the front door to read his name on a two-by-four doorplate.

Three years ago the "Silent Tennessean" revisited Reese with a broken wrist, and now swears no one compares with him. Geers' advice is that anyone who contemplates breaking a bone had better do it while Reese is in business.

Not long ago Reese had a patient in the person of Battling Nelson, to whom he refers as the most mussed-up piece of humanity in the land. He thinks the Dane's name should be "Battered" instead of Battling.

The mere mention of Nelson's broken hand brought a sigh from the bonesetter. The veteran boxer carries such a choice collection of fractures that he is beyond help. Although the gamest man in the ring, Nelson flinched in the hands of the bonesetter, who grins as he tells of it.

One look at Reese's hands betrays his secret. Large, sinewy and knotty, they are the sort you'd expect to see upon a steel worker. The very sight of them creates an impression of power, but gives no hint of the wonderful delicacy of touch that enables him to locate instantly a displaced muscle or a tiny broken bone.

A callous on the knuckle of each middle finger is significant of the great number of cases Reese has treated. These callouses, about the size of a 5-cent piece and as hard as stone, are the result of his bonesetting practice.

It is with the knuckle of his middle finger that Reese forces the broken bones together. These callouses, his sensitive fingers and powerful arms and shoulders, are his only instruments.

Y. M. C. A. ATHLETES TO ADVANCE CLUB

Forty-five picked athletes of the Oakland Y. M. C. A. were called together last night to discuss the formation of an athletic club to promote this phase of work in the association. It was unanimously decided that this kind of an organization would be most profitable for this work. C. F. Martin acted as temporary chairman.

After a lively discussion on many points of interest, it was decided to have a regular constitution and by-laws to govern the club. A committee, comprised of Emil Nielsen, member of the physical [illegible] Captain F. G. Lawson, and Assistant Boys' Work Director Howard Brier, was asked to transact this business.

The next meeting is called for Wednesday evening. All members of the Y. M. C. A. physical department are entitled to membership in this club. Standards will be set for men to make the special club team. Men qualifying for this special team will represent the association in special uniform. This does not prevent others who are not in the club from using the association name, but they will not have the privilege of receiving the advice of the physical directors and the [illegible]

GOLFERS SHOULD COMPLY WITH REQUIREMENTS FOR SCORING

Another case where many players disqualify themselves before they have gone two holes is in the mere matter of complying with the rules for keeping score. Where no official marker or scorer accompanies the players each player should provide himself with a score card and keep accurate checks on the other.

Here is the rule, as simple as it is easy to understand:

RULE V.

"(1). The score for each hole shall be kept by a marker or by each competitor noting the other's score. Should more than one marker keep a score, each shall sign the part of the score for which he is responsible. The scores should be called out after each hole. On completion of the stipulated round, the card shall be signed by the person who has marked it, and the competitor shall see that it is handed in as soon as reasonably possible. The penalty for a breach of this rule shall be disqualification.

"Scoring cards should be issued with the date and the player's name entered on the card.

"A caddie cannot be considered a 'marker.' Under urgent and exceptional conditions, however, the committee may after this interpretation. (Decision of the rules of golf committee at St. Andrews.)

"(2) Competitors must satisfy themselves before the cards are handed in that the scores for each hole are correctly marked, as no alteration can be made on any card after it has been returned. If it be found that a competitor has returned a score lower than that actually played, he shall be disqualified. For the additions of the scores marked the committee shall be responsible.

"(3) If, on the completion of the stipulated round, a player is doubtful whether he has incurred a penalty at any hole, he may enclose his scoring card with a written statement of the circumstances to the committee, who shall decide what penalty, if any, has been incurred."

In medal play competition every player is the representative of all his clubmates or fellow competitors in seeing to it that all penalty strokes or other penalties, such as disqualification, be counted against the individual who plays around with him. He cannot overlook some slight offense as he would or might in match play.

Many golfers remember the unfortunate incident that took place in an open tournament at Deal, where the man who apparently had made the low score of the qualifying round was later on disqualified with his partner, who had failed to notice that the low scorer had flagrantly faked the score of the 12th hole.

The player has no discretion in stroke competitors. If the competitor's ball strikes his he must see that a penalty stroke is charged against the competitor. The integrity of the whole competition rests largely upon every player knowing and insisting on the application of the rules.

Introducing a New Oak--Herold Schwenk

This lad is the first direct shipment from the big major leagues to reach Oakland in many, many moons. Signed by St. Louis, and farmed to Michigan without trial, he was recalled a short time ago and won the first time out, downing the Chicago [illegible] surprise at his sale to Oakland, but the fact that St. Louis had three other southpaws is the probable explanation. He arrived here yesterday and makes his debut this morning.

(By BILLY FITZ.)

Permit us to introduce Oakland's entry in this morning's game: Herold E. Schwenk. You mustn't blame him for his handle piece, the same having been wished on him. Schwenk is known variously as "Lefty" and "Iron Man," and we hasten to assure you that he is a real pitcher even if he did come from the St. Louis Americans.

The only reason that Oakland was able to buy the lad whom we picture above was because the St. Louis club, for the first time in history, succeeded in collecting a major league pitching staff. In fact there was an over production of good south paws, wherefore Branch Rickey, having taken our manager from [illegible] consented to assume the Angel role. Thus Herold Schwenk reached "My City Oakland" in time to don a uniform and grace the bench yesterday afternoon. Now Mitze only needs a pitcher like he does his right eye, which will explain the announcement that the new arrival will get into his working clothes this morning and show us how they do it (sometimes) in St. Louis.

Biographically speaking, Schwenk broke into baseball in the Pennsylvania bushes in 1911, played independent baseball in 1912, and was signed up by an observing scout with orders to report to the Browns in the spring of this year. Schwenk did, but was consigned to the Saginaw Club of the South Michigan league to ripen for awhile. Here's where he earned the right to support the sobriquet of St. Louis—Twight Stone—drew his release to Oakland at the same time. Saginaw lost June needed a series very badly and Schwenk had been particularly effective against this particular enemy. The manager talked it over with our hero and the upshot of it was that Schwenk worked in seven games that week, five full games and one inning in each in the other games! The best part of it all was that Herold E. S. won three of his full games, lost two, and saved the other two.

Mitze has been angling for a E. S. all year, but couldn't connect 'till now.

St. Louis recalled the youngster only a few weeks ago, and sent him against the White Sox, whom he beat 6 to 5.

Then came the news. St. Louis boss Branch Rickey, and the club pruning shears. St. Louis has three other southpaws, and four were too many. Another product of St. Louis—Twight Stone—drew his release to Oakland at the same time. Stone is our [illegible]

FAMOUS TENNIS PLAYERS OF ALAMEDA COUNTY

EDWIN MASTICK OTIS.

By NELSON G. WELBURN.

Less than 40 years ago a fat, good natured, enthusiastic and blue-eyed youth stepped out upon the tennis courts of the Bellevue club in Alameda and slowly gazed around. Hardly the inspiration for the brush of a Millet or Tillac. It was only his debut, if you please.

In his playing, which at times was slow and extremely irritating to his friends, he nevertheless showed indications of possessing good tennis material.

The wise ones in the tennis world watched him closely, and though he threw them into periods of nervous prostration time and time again by his inability to cover ground, they nevertheless felt that like wine he would improve with age. He soon developed a remarkable back-hand drive which was instrumental in earning him many a point and game. But his serving was the despair of the tennis world. His dainty coming up to the net with the premeditated purpose of smashing a ball was a sight to behold. Cast-iron stakes and reinforced concrete holdings were torn up and swept aside like mere flies; his opponents were indiscriminately knocked down by this onrushing individual, and the court showed the usage to which it was put.

His overhead work was a revelation in tennis. What the McLoughlins, Johnsons and Strachans would give for control like this is hard to say. Spectators at times thought it was a combination of tennis and football.

Possessing wonderful and inexplainable recuperative powers, in which at times he resembled a drooping sunflower or weeping willow, appearing at times absolutely lifeless. When in this state of mental and physical incapacitation, the mere mention of monetary remuneration would invariably work wonders in his demeanor. It was here that the great [illegible] was seen at its best.

His greatest powers of physical deception usually displayed itself immediately after a vigorous game upon the courts. His opponents who were not successful in taking his number usually waited for this sign, and then they pounced upon him with eager vengeance. It was here that he achieved his greatest number of victories.

It was nothing unusual to see youths stationed two blocks away gazing "skywardly" with wondrous expectation marking their features. Yea, two blocks away from the scene and smoke of battle, and yet these youths were busy chasing tennis balls. Incredible, you would say. Nay the truth. In fact, it became such a nuisance to the neighbors to have boys scaling fences, trampling down rose bushes and running over their lawns, that en masse they registered their complaint with the tennis club.

After a great Hayne and Webster confabulation and debate, this militant individual was persuaded to try his hand at indoor playing.

Holding the record for years as the greatest indoor player that ever crossed the pike," he soon rightfully earned the undisputed sobriquet of the "Grand Old Man of Indoor Tennis."

Holding the record for years as the of retrospection and witnesses the promenade of events displaying to him his past activities and marvelous achievements.

SUES MILLIONAIRE FOR FISTIC NOSE BREAKING

suit on file in the superior court today, E. L. Doheny, the multi-millionaire oil operator, is asked to pay $25,000 damages for having broken the nose of Adolph Falkenrath, an architect of St. Louis. Falkenrath, according to the allegations, was in charge of the construction of a large conservatory for Doheny, and the citman landed heavily on his nose one day when a dispute arose over plans that had been prepared by another architect.

Soccer League Game at Dow's Park

Instead of playing on Lincoln Park grounds today as was at first intended, the Alamedas and Vampires will meet this afternoon at Dow's football grounds, in Alameda. The other California soccer league games will be played as previously scheduled. The line-up for the Alamedas is announced as follows: Plumtree, goal; Loney and Sutherland, backs; Bostock, Kaiser and Smith, halfbacks; Jewitt, Brace, McNab, and Gough, forwards.

ST. LOUIS BROWNS TO BE "REFORMED"

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 19. — The St. Louis Browns, with Branch Rickey at the managerial helm, probably will be the most unique baseball team in either of the major leagues.

Branch Rickey as a leading Y. M. C. A. worker and Sunday school teacher has some fixed ideas regarding the running of a baseball team that undoubtedly will conflict with the ideas of the men making up the Browns, in other words, the team will be run on Sunday school principles.

Rickey objects to Sunday baseball and in his major league career never took part in a Sunday contest. He believes in his players keeping early hours and reporting for work early in the morning. No more joy parties for the Browns.

Every member of the team will be expected to breakfast at 8 o'clock in the morning and not at 11. He believes that no player can be at his best in the afternoon if he whiles away the morning in sleep.

OVERALL PITCHES SEALS TO 4-2 VICTORY OVER THE SOUTH

(By H. M. WALKER.)

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 20.—Several interesting facts were developed out parkway today. [illegible] First and most important is that the San Francisco Baseball club can win a game. Secondly, that Orrie Overall still retains the ability to work nine innings without the aid of drugs or batteries. Thirdly, that Ivan Howard's skull is made of that substance technically referred to as "solid ivory."

And most surprising of all that Goodwin [illegible]

The Seals took their first game [illegible] 4 to 2. The Angels could not hit Overall's hits meant runs. On the other hand, the [illegible] stepped in close and [illegible] most opportune moments.

Jerry Downs batted in a run in the [illegible] round. During the last half Ivan Howard [illegible] evened the count by lounging a homer [illegible] right field bleachers. Mr. Corhan stole across the plate in the second. Dutch Schmidt [illegible] a man from second in the seventh. The double steal gave the northern crowd their last [illegible] in the ninth. In turn, the Angels put a runner over in the ninth and had started a nice [illegible] hitting into a double play.

BASS FISHERMEN FIND FAIR SPORT IN LOCAL WATERS

San Antone and vicinity has been the mecca for bass fishermen recently. Pedro Missouri landed some nice fish averaging eight and ten pounds.

J. Burns and W. Ahrens took a large one apiece out of Back Door slough.

A. P. Rispand accounted for a nice pounder. He lost everything he had later when a big one tapped him. [illegible] hooked a five-pound bass from Back Door slough.

Dick Cunningham had some exciting sport last week, landing a 20-pounder, and losing 25 feet of line to a fish that nearly pulled him from the boat.

Adam Hackmuer fished at the bridge at Wirgo and brought back an 11-pound bass. W. Gaffney and M. Url also fished there with fair luck.

Merle McCray caught a couple of nice bass at Napa No. 2, the fish weighing seven and eight pounds.

J. Gomez and M. Fonge tried salmon fishing above Point Bonita and hooked two big fellows, 25 and 29 pounds, respectively.

Doc. Street fished at Middle River and certainly had fine sport with black and striped bass.

"Happy Otto" Huestler had the time of his life fishing in Eel river, Mendocino county. He caught his limit of trout and will go back there next year.

At the Lighthouse buoy near Napa, fishing is at the highest point. Quite a bunch of bay fishermen will be on hand to toss clams this coming Sunday.

There are thousands of smelt running at Sausalito, the best run in years.

"LARRY" HILLS.

L. J. Hills, better known as "Larry" by his athletic friends, has been appointed track and field coach for the Oakland Y. M. C. A. He will assume his duties Monday.

Hills, who for several years was the successful coach for the team of the Reliance Athletic Club, has been actively engaged in athletic work for many years, having begun as an understudy of that old warhorse, Tom Carroll. After two years with Carroll as a wrestler in the 125-pound class Hills spent 18 months touring the Middle West with Dan McLeod, the world's champion wrestler. During these tours Hills met many of the best amateurs in his class, and always acquitted himself in a manner satisfactory to his sponsor.

Returning to the coast Hills took up track work and for two years competed successfully in many amateur events from the mile to twenty-six. His success in a long distance race in the oil fields when he defeated Thomas, then known as the champion of the Southern States, and White, a well known runner from England, put him into the professional ranks—where he achieved fame and glory in many a hard fought contest.

As coach of the Reliance Athletic Club Hills developed many good track men, who have since become well known on the coast and some whose achievements have given them nation-wide prominence.

With the material now in training at the Y M C A Hills should be able to bring the colors of the local organization to the front and cause the followers of clean sport to again look upon the wearers of the triangle as they were wont to do in the old days when the headquarters were at Twelfth and Clay streets.

STANFORD JUNIORS ARE IN LINE FOR RUGBY HONORS

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 20 — The [illegible] rugby game played last Thursday between the Seniors and 1915 has brought about a new probability in the Cardinal football situation which may have a vital effect on the personnel of the team that will meet California in November.

Although the Juniors were defeated by a comparatively large score, the playing of some men on that team was of varsity caliber, and it is likely that these men will have many chances in the practice contests this season to show whether or not they deserve to play in the Big Game. The forwards, especially, were every bit as good as those representing the seniors, and the excellent work of Soper, Jacomini, Rehm, Bedeau and Wines has been the sole topic of campus conversation ever since. These men, fighting against the tremendous odds of a near-varsity team, showed enough sterling worth to entitle them to all the consideration possible.

Franchesehi, Clover, Hall, Gard, Cail, Watkins and Darsey of the senior team forward line played the football that was expected of them, and being supported by a wonderfully fast backfield, much superior to that of the junior team, won with ease.

The contemplated struggle for forward positions will be a warm one, and the outlook for a forward line, equal to that of the Blue and Gold, is now not so near complicated as it was a week ago. "Tiny" Wines and Soper especially, will bear watching, and should their work come up to the standard of Thursday, with a reasonable amount of improvement as the season advances, it will take almost superhuman efforts to dislodge them from positions that they seem so likely to earn.

ERB SHOWS WELL.

The junior backfield was good, although inferior to that of the older team. Arthur Erb, at half, played his usual steady game and must be conceded an excellent chance for the place in the big conflict. His chief rival, Tilton, of the Senior team, seemed to be a little off form but he, too, showed that he will not allow himself to be forgotten when final choice is made. Artie Wynne at wing played a sensational game, his following of the ball, knowledge of Rugby and natural speed contributing to nearly every appreciable gain made by the 1915 team. Without doubt, if he were only ten pounds heavier, Wynne would seriously threaten any position in the backfield; as it is, he is one of the most valuable men that Coach Brown has on the squad.

It is rumored that Captain Thoburn will move from the forward line back to [illegible] and his playing that position for the last few days in the practice scrimmages would seem to bear out this probability. How this will effect the Carroll-Austin combination is not known, but the logical move that should follow is the placing of Carroll at second five, with Austin farther out at center three-quarters.

In the Freshman-Sophomore interclass game, Carroll, playing at second-five, did not give to Austin, playing at first five, the support expected of him. With Thoburn nearest the scrum, Carroll next and Austin farther out, no opportunity for advancing the ball would be lost—[illegible] of the first water. Any way, they are placed should give thorough satisfaction, however, although the Stanford skipper would be of more service nearer the scrum than farther out on the line.

ADOPT TEAM OF 14.

The 14 man team will be tried this season, the seven man scrum supposedly holding out the ball much faster to the half than one composed of eight men. This will liven the action of the game, it is said, and will have a great influence [illegible] remaining Rugby with the outside public. A faster game than the one [illegible] played, is no doubt debatable, [illegible] between the [illegible] will mean a maximum of passing rushes and dribbling methods and a minimum of scrums—all contributing to a speedier brand of football.

The freshman team is beginning to assume a definite shape. The babies were badly beaten Wednesday by the fast Palo Alto high team, but they showed results of the careful tutoring of Coach Brown and his assistants, and their playing was by no means of the inferior order that a lop-sided score would indicate. The "Paly" team is again a powerful organization. The passing of the backs would have done credit to a varsity team, and the forward line, too, [illegible]

N. Y., CHICAGO, PITTSBURG FORM A PENNANT TRUST

Same Clubs Always Win in Both Big Leagues Figures Show

New York, Chicago and Pittsburg, that's all! They form the pennant trust in the National league. In the American, there is little difference, Philadelphia, Boston, Detroit and Chicago have been on the long end always. It has been one of the above named in both circuits for the last dozen years.

Leaders of the pennant trust — Johnny McGraw and Connie Mack! Unless something entirely unlooked for happens [illegible] will win their fifth Giants and Athletics. Neither team has clinched the pennant for 1913, but each has a good lead and almost certain to win out.

If the Athletics capture the title in the A. L. this campaign, the east will have a lead on the west, gaining leading honors, 8 to 6, since the organization was formed back in 1900. The Tigers and White Sox are the only reason why the west has not been swamped. Each of these clubs has captured three flags.

The Sox won in 1900, 1901 and 1906, while the Tigers [illegible] on top in 1907 1908 and 1909.

CUBS AND PIRATES LEAD.

It's just turned around in the National, though. Through the efforts of the Cubs and Pirates, the west has the edge on the east, 8 to 6, since 1900. The Cubs managed by Frank Chance landed on top four times, while Fred Clarke chaperoned his team out in front a like number of seasons. If the Giants win this year, they will capture their fifth flag, so the only pennant unaccounted for since 1900 was the one gained by Brooklyn under Ed Hanlon.

In the batting since 1900 the East and west in the two major leagues have come out even-steven. The west has won 14 pennants, while the east has been on top the same number of seasons. But in this length of time St. Louis, Cleveland and Cincinnati were never in the running.

While Chicago has won its share of pennants, another honor goes to the Windy City. Frank Chance chaperoned the Cubs to a pennant in 1906 and set a record for victories, which has not been equaled since then, when his men were returned on the long end in 116 contests, with a percentage of .763.

That's the best mark that has ever won a pennant in either the parent or junior body. The closest to it was the record made by the Pirates in 1902, when they finished with .747. The Pirates' mark of .724 in 1909 is next best in the N. L.

In the American it has been different. Since the league was started in 1900 not a pennant winner has finished with a percentage of .700. The nearest was .691 made by the Red Sox in 1912. The last season, also is the best total in Ban Johnson's league.

Hugh Jennings captured a pennant with the lowest percentage of any in 1908, when his Tigers showed the way for the other clubs, with a mark of .588. The lowest percentage to win in the National was 1900, when Brooklyn landed on top with .603.

Wolgast, Only 25, but Passe; Age Limit Growing Shorter

What is happening to the boxing game when a man is passe at 25 years of age? Adolph Wolgast doubtless is passe and spent in a physical sense. Does this incident serve to show that the general speed of the world these days is reflected in athletics to this extent? In the old days a man was pretty good until he was well by the 30-year mark and wasn't considered old as long as he had a spark of vitality left in him. In the present boxing age a man gets a couple of defeats and he is considered thoroughly down and out and past all athletic redemption.

The ring never had a flashier career in its history than that shown by Wolgast. He started battling in 1906, was a sensation out on the Pacific coast in 1908, became lightweight champion of the world by defeating Battling Nelson on February 22, 1910, twice broke his arm on mediocre opponents, suffered an attack of appendicitis and went through an operation and then lost his title to Willie Ritchie on a foul on November 28, 1912. Less than ten months later, after vainly trying twice to come back and regain his old laurels, the Cadillac boy, now seven months past his 25th birthday, is written down as a dead one as far as possibilities are concerned. Surely the world do move swiftly these days!

RECOGNITION CAME SLOW TO AD.

Despite the fac that Wolgast must be tabbed as one of the world's greatest fighting machines he always had a tough time getting any sort of recognition [illegible] and the fact that he whipped one of the country's idols in order to gain preeminence in his class that brought about the conditions for the little German. Perhaps it was a noisy manager who wasn't particular whether or not he made friends that framed these unhappy conditions for the tough little Michigan boy. At any rate he never was a popular champion, even in the face of sterling fighting qualities.

One thing always will stand out magnificently in the Wolgast record and it is something that nobody can take away from him. No more courageous man ever tapped a pair of hands in the boxing arena than this selfsame boy from Cadillac. His fearlessness was of the dare-devil type that makes the successful aviator and the leading jockey. Had he been less ably handled in his business dealings with other fighters he would have been whipped to a frazzle long before he was because he never realized the importance of drawing the line closely in the matter of weight. He was once heard to offer to fight Stanley Ketchel for the championship of Michigan, and that, too, when Stanley was at his best and the undoubted champion among the 158 pounders of the day.

SIGNED WITH PACKEY.

That Adolph never met that Irish star, Packey McFarland, was due entirely to circumstances over which the German had no control. Weight was always the big argument between the managers of the men, but it concerned Ad not in the least. Several times he signed with Packey in the absence of his manager at a weight that was out of all reason from a Wolgast viewpoint. Ad always thought he could make Packey jump out of the ring and never cared what he might weigh going into the fray. And Wolgast at the time could easily do 126 pounds and perhaps lower.

Like most men of his slipshod business methods, Ad was lacking in the appreciation of the value of physical conservation. He liked the bright lights as well as anybody and seldom turned down genial companionship. And he wasn't slipshod when it came to providing for the future for himself and his family. They will never have to give the former champion any benefits.

Mental Attitude in Golf Necessary for Scoring

The difference between good scoring and indifferent scoring is more often than not just the difference between playing along easily according to the ability of the player and trying to do the impossible. It is very seldom that even the expert makes his best rounds when engaged in medal play competition. He is affected by the same mental complications as is his skillful competitor.

Nearly every golfer has been surprised to find that he has scored best when for one reason or another he has least expected to do so. Perhaps he has gone to the links with a slight headache or very much tired from business worries. In such a mental attitude he hopes for nothing more than the refreshing exercise of a round to fill his lungs with fresh air and drive away dull care.

On the very first hole, or perhaps the second or third, good fortune overtakes him in the shape of a deadly approach or a long putt holed from off the edge of the green, and the whole world looks differently to him. Things go right with him for the rest of the round, and all recollections of headache or other ailment have departed for that day at least.

On the other hand, oftentimes when a golfer goes to the links after a good night's rest, feeling stronger and better than at any previous time in his life, things golfwise go wrong from the very first stroke. The golfer simply feels too good and too strong for low scoring. The drive goes wild, perhaps, and the recovery is weak, and so on until all chances of low scoring are gone.

It requires a high order of mental discipline in addition to skill to accomplish persistent rounds in creditable figures. Even the expert is apt to let his mind or imagination wander too far afield, only to be waked up with a jolt like a fall from a skyscraper when he finds that the temporary lapse has placed him where it will take all of his skill plus a moderate degree of luck to recover the lost ground.

Many an opportunity to hang up a glorious achievement in the way of cutting down the golfer's record for the links is lost by a failure to hole out a putt. Later in the round, when everything breaks his way, he has clipped off enough strokes to have more than offset the really trifling slips on one or two holes.

I well remember my first card on a full length links of 185 for 18 holes and 23 strokes on one hole. The recollection is all the more pleasant when considered in relation to a subsequent visit to the same links, when I made an 82 with the element of luck against me and a 5 on the hole, which had previously cost me 23. My later score would probably have been even lower if I had not been so bent on making a score.

Some years ago when Walter J. Travis first visited the Deal links, where the amateur record stood at 79, he got out to the turn in 42 or 43, and after a 4 on the tenth failed to hole out a trifling putt on the 11th when his subsequent play entitled him to a 78, which would have been a new record for the course. Travis subsequently made his 78, and the course record was recently lowered to 70 by P. W. Kendall.

BUYING ENDS A MARKET DECLINE

[illegible] on a scale down and their buying soon stopped the decline. Prices later went back to yesterday's close.

Quotations drifted downward on the first transactions today. Union Pacific was the only active stock to open above yesterday's close, and it quickly gave way until it showed the loss of a point. There was active selling of Reading, Steel, Southern Pacific, all of which were set back by substantial fractions. Canadian Pacific dropped 1¾, Rock Island was again under pressure and dropped a point to 14¼, a new low record for the movement.

The market closed firm. Speculation languished during the day's brief session. The holiday in London cut off the chance of leadership from that source and at home traders saw nothing in the situation to provide a fresh impulse. Bears were not inclined to follow up the advantage gained at the opening when they forced down Rock Island to a new low price for the movement and unsettled the Pacifics. Attempts to get back stock revealed the character of the selling, the market apparently being bare of actual stock. By the time the average had been restored to yesterday's closing level interest in the market had vanished. The only feature of financial importance was the sharp recovery in sterling exchange rates, demand bills jumping 25 points to near 486. Scarcity of cotton and grain bills and preparation for remitting funds to meet the interest and dividend payments due abroad [illegible] the rise. Bonds were easy.

Kissel Kar Driver Has a Thrilling Tour From Los Angeles

Motorists who prate proudly of their accomplishments over the comparatively easy grades that most of them encounter, will open their eyes and ears with interest to the graphic description of a tour recently undertaken by D. A. Whitaker, vice president, and W. R. Letton, secretary and treasurer, of the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards company. Whitaker is author of the narrative, which runs in part as follows.

"We loaded our camp outfit on board my Kissel Kar '60,' including 1200 pounds of baggage and four weeks' provisions, and started north out of Los Angeles, through the Antelope valley and across the Mojave desert through an ocean of sand

"When we left Mojave we ran into a number of water spouts which washed out much of the road and all of the bridges The most of our party were afraid to venture, but we took the lead of thirteen machines. There were only three of them that went through that day. Now, I venture to say that our Kissel '60' went through mud and ditches that an eight mule team could not have gone through with the same load Then we struck Red Rock canyon and I don't believe we could have been able to make it but for Letton being at the wheel. A good driver and plenty of power landed us on the summit.

"We drove to Freeman, and stayed over night. Then we went on through Lone Pine, Independence and Bishop. There we struck Dead Man's Grade, which I believe to be one of the roughest and steepest grades in the state of California. We proceed [illegible] up to Mono Mills, a summit of 8000 feet, then down to Mono Lake, through sand and boulders. The road we traveled over down to the lake has not yet been built. There we met Wallace MacPherson, the manager of the Mono Valley Improvement Company, and received the best of camp accommodations. We bought lubricating oil, which proved to be nothing but plain crude oil just out of the well, but it was all we could get; so we filled our crank case and started for Silver Lake. I believe that the KisselKar would go her work on soap grease if she could not get anything better

"We arrived at Silver Lake, about 9500 feet elevation, where we won new laurels by taking our car and dragging the biggest pine log into the camp for fire purposes. I sometimes think if I had mud hooks on the car ,I could climb any mountain in the Sierra Nevada range. During our stay there we made a side trip through Bridgeport, while a big '90' [illegible] and another big car failed. We made the return trip of 78 miles in 7½ hours, over mountain and sand roads

"On our return trip we came over Gas Pipe Grade, by way of Benton. This is one of the most crooked and sandy grades I ever saw. It is nine miles constant climbing. I made most of it on second gear. When we struck Red Rock Canyon, on our return, we were in the lead, and just at this point the '90' refused to move, so all that was left to do was to hook her on behind the Kissel '60' and draw her in. One of our party wanted to bet me his life or his ranch that we could not move in, but when we turned on steam, she rolled along as though she was hooked to a traction engine. We pulled her clear through Red Rock Canyon to the Mojave desert.

"Reaching Los Angeles, with all safe and perfectly good natured, we can truthfully say no profanity was used. How many automobilists can say this, after returning from a 3500 mile trip through rocks and sand. The people of our party declare that the Kissel Kar is the most powerful and best puller that they ever saw tackle a mountain road. A good demonstration in the right place tells the story. If you think I have made this strong, I still have the old Kissel '50' and am also the owner of a new 1914 model '6,' and believe me she too is some wagon."

FRANKLIN CAR CROSSES EIGHT MOUNTAIN ROADS

Cumberland, Md., to Baltimore and return in eleven hours and forty-four minutes is the excellent time made in a Franklin touring car by A. E. Gilsan of Cumberland. He averaged over 25 miles an hour, which was exceptionally good time considering the fact that eight mountains were crossed. The route picked out by Gilsan is one that is regularly shunned by automobilists.

The trip was made on a hot summer's day when the thermometer registered near 100 degrees in the shade. Despite the rough road and the mountains which were crossed, Gilsan and his passengers were not fatigued at the end of their day's journey.

The trip from Cumberland to Baltifore was made in five hours and thirty-four minutes and the return in six hours and ten minutes and the Franklin averaged seventeen miles per gallon of gasoline.

PHOENIX EXPERMENTING.

Phoenix, Arizona, is to try out the motor bus in competition with its trolley cars and, if it likes the substitute, may legislate the rails out of business. For the test the Phoenix Rapid Transit Company has bought a KisselKar 25 passenger bus and it will be placed in commission immediately with a pay-as-you-enter system. Phoenix citizens are favorably impressed with the [illegible] is rapidly and practically proving that trolleys are an unnecessary noise and nuisance and an inartistic blot on the landscape.

SPEEDY MEDICO.

Over roads good and bad, but mostly neither, Dr. W. J. Kofmel of Iron River, Michigan, drove to Elgin, Ill., in two days. The distance is 458 miles and the doctor's good opinion of his trusty Kissel Kar has increased several degrees since this performance. The return home would have been made in even better time but for [illegible]

MOTORCYCLE NOTES.

A motorcycle trip to New York is being made by Boyd Leubbing and Julius Kegel of Freeport, Ill.

Hugh Sharp and Walter Martin of Milwaukee, have just completed a 277-mile pathfinding trip through the Badger state. The riders were maping out a route for a three-day-run of the Milwaukee Motorcycle club.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Daniels of Madison, [illegible] motoring to Chattanooga Tenn. Mrs. Daniels rides in a sidecar attached to her husband's motorcycle, and with this outfit they have been averaging about 175 miles per day.

What is said to be the world's motorcycle record for 100 miles on dirt track was recently made by Harry Goudy of Chicago, who covered the mile track 100 times in 92 minutes.

MRS. KNOWLAND A CHALMERS OWNER

The Pioneer Automobile Company reports the sale of two Chalmers Coupes, inside drive, to Mrs. J. R. Knowland, wife of Congressman Knowland of Oakland. One of the cars will be delivered to Mrs. Knowland during the present week and the other is to be delivered to her in Washington, D. C., not later than January 1st.

TRUCKS PLEASE TRADE.

There are multitudes of broad-visioned business concerns in the United States who scout the idea of basing the value of motor delivery on actual operation figures. The Providence Ice Company, of Providence, R. I. in speaking of the work done by a KisselKar special delivery truck, says: "It is impossible to compute the earnings of our special delivery motor wagon, for we have to measure them in pleasure and satisfaction of customers rather than in dollars and cents." The company also substituted two KisselKar four ton trucks for horse-drawn vehicles, one important and interesting result of which has been to reduce waste from melting by more than four per cent.

DEALER ENTHUSES ON CHALMERS SIX

Penfield Says Master Six Is Hit Here.

"The 'Master Six,' as applied to the Chalmers Model 24, is no misnomer," says C. A. Penfield of the Pioneer Auto Company. This car certainly is the master 'Six' so far advertised for the season of 1914. Not one point has been overlooked in the Model 24 'Six', cylinder. Like all models of Chalmers in past seasons, [illegible] feature which appears only in the highest priced cars and that is four speeds forward. In the purchase of a car the [illegible] of the Chalmers 'Six' you are entitled to four speeds, and a prospective purchaser should bear this in mind and, if not familiar with the advantage of the four speeds forward car, he owes it to himself to make a thorough investigation. This feature alone I consider worth $500 over the three speed car.

"The building of 'Six' cylinder cars is not new to the Chalmers Company. It's first 'Six' cylinder was produced in 1912 when 200 were built to test the car and also the market. These cars were sold so rapidly that nearly one-half of the output of the Chalmers factory for 1913 was 'Six' cylinder cars. The result of their experience is that for 1914 a very large percentage of the output will be 'Sixes' of the type of the 'Master Six.' The superiority we claim over any other 'Six' on the market is silence, power, flexibility, economy. These are dominant qualities of the Chalmers 'Six' and all you have to do is to call at our store here, any of our chanches or agencies, and have this demonstrated to your entire satisfaction. Believing that the season of 1914 will be largely a 'Six' cylinder season, and having in mind building the best 'Six' cylinder car on the market, at the lowest price, the Chalmers engineers and factory organization have achieved this object while other manufacturers have stood still or merely planned.

"Another advantage gained by buying the Chalmers 'Six' is all types of bodies are interchangeable. A person so desiring may purchase a Chalmers 'Six' Limousine, use it through the winter months, and later the limousine can be removed and either a runabout four or five-passenger body can be put on the car for open weather. This is a practice quite general in the east, and when it is known among buyers this can be done with the Chalmers cars, I believe it will be well received by prospective purchasers in California.

"The question of wire wheels is one that is now in the eye of the public, for approval or disapproval, and in order to accommodate Chalmers buyers we give options on wire wheels, and will furnish to those who desire them. I would call your attention to the slope of the hood, which is in keeping with European designed cars of high price, and not as severe as some of the cheaper cars turned out in this country The body design of the Chalmers car cannot be improved upon."

OVERLAND MOTOR SHOWN IN TESTS

New Models Put Through Pace [illegible] Francisco.

"The new 1914 Overland car have been put through their California test," says J. W. Leavitt, the head of J. W. Leavitt & company, coast distributors for the Overland cars.

"We never receive a new model without first giving it our own test, that is we [illegible] if the severest test that it will undergo in the hands of a California owner. It is a known fact that the roads and hills of California are the best to test out the capability of a car there is There is no place in the United States or practically any place in Europe that is frequented by motor car owners that will test a car out as perfectly as the roads and mountain grade of the Pacific coast.

"Hence it is that cars that make good in other localities fail to come up to expectations when used out here. We therefore, make it a good practice that whenever we get a car to thoroughly test it out and find out if it has any short comings. This has proved most satisfactory in the past and we have been able to make suggestions to the factory that have overcome little difficulties that have caused much annoyance to the owner, thereafter.

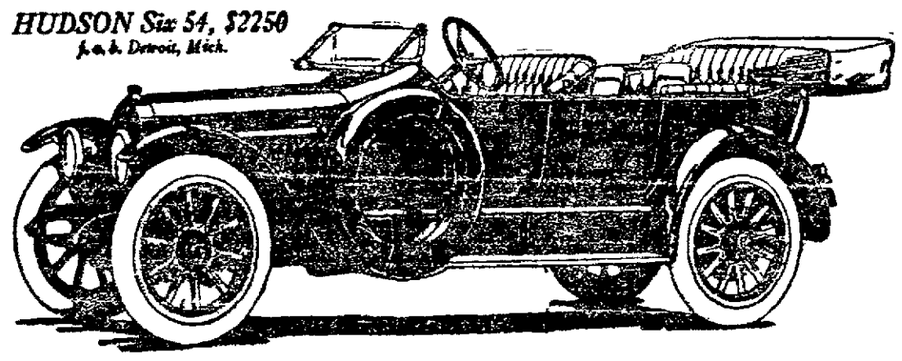
"The 1914 models have gone far beyond our expectations and probably what we thought they would do in the test We have taken them out over the testing ground which is within a radius of sixty miles of San Francisco and on every occasion they have made good.

"The severe test that we gave them when they were first received was in San Francisco. We have taken the new model up over what is known as Kearney street hill, that is Kearney street from Broadway way up. There is no hill or grade that is a harder test on a car than this one. We went up with four passengers We stopped the car in the middle of the grade and that caused it to be started again. Every test made on this hill shows the high power and excellent design of the car. It was there on every occasion and did every thing it was called upon to do.

"We then took it over on what is known as the Broadway street hill It was taken up that steep grade, stopped, run ahead and backed down. All tests on brakes and everything proved satisfactory.

"We then took it over on Jones street bringing it up from Market to Pine street on the high hill. From Pine to California, we sent it up over the hill and were surprised to see the speed it carried over the top. It is better and faster than any car that we have previously tested over this grade.

"We are not satisfied with this test alone. We consciously make the test on all cars during the season to see that they are up to the standard. In some factories the rush of orders is likely to make the workmen a little lax in handling the refinements and other things which are supposed to make a perfect operation of the motor and it is on account of these things that might creep in even in the best regulated factories, that we consciously test our cars."



Experience Six-Cylinder Smoothness in Your Four

—But This is the Only Way You Can Get It

SPEED your Four up to 30 miles an hour or more on a smooth road. Then throw out the clutch and close the throttle.

Or coast down a long smooth hill with the motor running idle.

The feeling is that of flying. There is no vibration. In this particular the sensation of riding in a Four approaches that felt in a Six.

But, in a Six, the smoothness is ALWAYS there. You ride like constant coasting. In the HUDSON Six 54, up hill and down, on rough roads or smooth, fast or slow, the feeling is always the same.

No Four—no matter how powerful or through what combination of gears its power is transmitted—can be made to ride so smoothly.

Come, take a drive in the HUDSON Six 54.

If you enjoy driving, take hold of the wheel and feel for yourself the full meaning of that much talked about "smoothness and flexibility of the Six."

In no other way will it have such meaning for you.

Then come, see us, we'll show you how to do it for 300 miles, all day, without fatigue. It must be in a HUDSON Six 54.

New Features in HUDSON Six 54

CHANDLER SIX IS CAUSING COMMENT

The new Chandler six has been one of the attractions along automobile row this week. The well-known reputation of the builders has been enough to interest the prospective buyer, the owner, and also the expert and dealer.

No car received for some time has created the interest that has this lightweight six. The builders have been ... experience is to be seen in every line of the new Chandler.

RATS IN COURT CAUSE MEETING

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 20.—Rats and mice have infested the court-house recently to such an extent that Charles Howes, custodian, has placed several traps in the building. A number of the rats have been caught by various schemes, and many more have been frightened "almost to death" by the noisy reception given them by the court stenographers ...

... in Superior court, room 2, came to Mr. Howes to tell how a rat almost a foot long had run across the courtroom.

An investigation showed that the rat had not remained to be seen. A trap was set in the room. Ed Hebbler, the janitor who has charge of the room, and Miss Meredith were there when the rat made another attempt to investigate the surroundings. Hebbler took off his Buffalo Bill hat and gently "shooed" the rat, while Miss Meredith assisted from the top of a chair by a number of screams. The rat was badly frightened. It ran across the floor and directly into the trap.

HOLD INDIGNATION MEET.

A number of the stenographers held an indignation meeting in room 2 over the conduct of the rats, and Mr. Howes was called to give some expert testimony on catching rats.

"Look out, girls, there's a mouse!" yelled Howes when he entered the room. The meeting adjourned suddenly, while the investigators mounted chairs. There was no mouse at all.

A sack of peanuts that was being carefully preserved in a drawer in room 5 by Lawrence Dwyer, court page, disappeared a few days ago, and the rats are credited with the theft. Rats have been heard gnawing in that room and a number of them have been caught. In probate court four were caught in two days. One ventured out on the desk of Miss Paetz, the stenographer, and proceedings suddenly ceased until it left. Judge Ross threw a pencil at one intruding mouse. The rats are especially thick in the basement.

CADILLAC AGAIN SMASHES RECORD

Detroit-to-Omaha Trip Made in Remarkable Time by 1914 Car.

George F. Reim, of Omaha, recently broke two records in driving his 1914 Cadillac from Detroit to Omaha. Reim, who was accompanied by four friends, covered the 911 miles between the Tuller hotel in Detroit and the Rome hotel of Omaha in a total elapsed time of 21 hours and 54 minutes. The actual running time was 20-12, stops aggregating 2 hours and 42 minutes having been made, which is not much in excess of the time required to make the run by railroad. By this performance Reim beat his own time of 26 hours, 57 minutes, which was the record up to the recent performance.

In reality two records were shattered, as the party established a new time for the North Transcontinental Route from Chicago to Omaha, driving the 500 miles in 13 hours, 32 minutes, as against the previous time of 21 hours.

The 1914 Cadillac on its arrival at Omaha was simply washed and put into demonstration service. The start was made without preliminary tuning up, Reim simply taking the car out of the factory and beginning the journey.

WILKINSON RETURNS.

T. H. Wilkinson, local manager for the United States Tire Company, has just returned to the city after an absence of two weeks spent in Northern California, and in Nevada. Wilkinson says the roads in Northern California are in excellent condition at present, and that a great many parties are touring through there now.

"It would be difficult," said Wilkinson, "to find a more picturesque or delightful trip than through the northern part of the State, and along the California and Oregon boundary line."

BUYS NEW RUNABOUT.

Bob Rathbone, ... of the United States Tire Company, has secured a runabout for use in his territory, in and about the bay district. It has been impossible for Rathbone to get around to see all his customers regularly, but he believes that the use of this runabout will enable him to do so. Bob will probably fight pneumatics on the runabout—result, U. S. Demountables.

MOTOR TRUCKS IN 'DOBBINS' REALM

Gasoline Monsters Invading Grain Fields of This Country.

"Regarding the grain industry of California, there are a few of the ranchers in this line who are using motor trucks," says Ivan de Jongh, General Manager of the Pioneer Motor Truck Corporation, the Pacific Coast representatives of the general motors trucks. "With thousands of bags of grain to be hauled during this month, the hottest in the year—the necessity for this means of transportation is keenly felt, but due to the fact that there are ten more months to follow. This problem will have to be handled by the ... the nearby towns, and it will be handled with the use of trailers, just as the present large spike teams are doing. The Tulare lands have yielded one of their biggest crops, and there were hundreds of thousands of sacks of grain to be hauled from twelve to twenty-five miles from these farms and uncertain grain fields. The transportation was a difficult matter and every horse in the section was put into the harness and still the work was ... chased a five-ton motor truck and made a detour of the Tulare fields, which gave him five miles greater running distance than the road used by the teams, but a better road, as it was not cut and chopped up by the horses' hoofs and the wagon tires. By using two, and sometimes three trailers, he would bring as high as twelve and thirteen tons of grain on a trip, rarely exceeding a speed of four or five miles an hour. By arranging his trips cleverly he was enabled to land his last load, which was always his biggest, about midnight, taking this load at a speed of three miles an hour. This grain would then be handed over to the warehouse the first thing upon opening, and he would start again making two quick trips during the day with lighter loads and one heavy trip at night. He has estimated to handle with his truck and trailers, more grain than twelve 4-horse teams could handle, and his gross earnings per day were well over $100. During the forty days' work, he estimated that he had cleared between $2500 and $3000 net."

"SHOWING" PRESCOTT, ARIZ.

As the result of a wager with W. J. Mulvenon, who declared that no motor car could cover more than 25 miles of ... roads on a gallon of Arizona gasoline, B. B. Dolly of Prescott drove a Studebaker "25" 28.16 miles before the ... of fuel ran out. The whole town turned out to watch the test which was hailed by the local newspaper as a feat worth two-column headlines.

DELCO EXPERTS BUY 24 BUICKS

Dayton Factory's Department Heads Purchase Flint Made Autos.

Twenty-one Buicks were driven out of Flint Saturday afternoon for Dayton, O., for delivery to the department heads of the Dayton Engineering Laboratories company, manufacturers of the Delco self starter. The cars were all B 24 and B 25's. The lineup was a miniature pageant, the cars carrying banners, Buick pennants and plumes of papier mache.

Three more Buicks of the same two models were delivered to other department heads of the company the week previous, making a total of twenty-four cars.

"When I got down to Dayton after trying to smash up a 25 by sending her over ... at top speed I started some- ... thing," said C. F. Kettering, engineer of the Delco company. "I am some smasher when I start out, but I couldn't make a dent in that car. First thing I knew one of the boys wanted me to get him a roadster, and another man with a family wanted a touring car. Before they quit coming, twenty-four men, all heads of departments, had paid over their money for Buicks. It looks as if there'd be some joyriding in our town for quite a spell."

The Buick ... caught on with a rush, according to F. W. A. Vesper, assistant salesmanager. Fifteen solid train loads are already contracted for for early delivery. Ed. Lunt, district sales manager, sold five cars in Flint the past week.

The cars for Dayton went to Detroit via Pontiac. The route from there was by Toledo.

"It's a delivery that is especially gratifying," said "Trainload" Collins, speaking of the deal after his return from the east, "when it is considered that the selection was made by good, practical machine men, men who have an intimate knowledge of technical facts and values. It was a case of the cars selling themselves. We are glad of the sale, but the thing after all to be proud of is in the significant tribute paid the Buick from a mechanical standpoint."

MAKES RACE DRIVING SEEM TAME

J. M. Sanderson of Chanute, Kas., turns off almost daily feats of automobile driving that make motor racing on a dusty mile track seem tame in comparison. He is the official oil well shooter of the Independent Torpedo Co. In his hurry-up wagon, a Studebaker car with racked rear deck, he responds to calls from a wide radius, often crossing fields and other rough country, carrying in the racks from 100 to 150 quarts of high explosive. One sudden jar and his entire outfit may be represented by a hole in the ground.

4-Cylinder Truck

"Built to deliver the goods"

THE transportation of merchandise rapidly and economically is now an important consideration in every line of trade and in every locality. The old horse and wagon method is no longer adequate either in the cities where the traffic problem is great or in the localities where distance is the prime consideration. Motor delivery is no longer an experiment, for it is an established fact that from any standpoint, whether efficiency, economy or reliability, its superiority over horse-drawn delivery is easily recognizable.

¶ Time is an important consideration and the ability to deliver merchandise purchased quickly is a trade-making influence that promptly demonstrates itself in any line of business.

¶ A COMMERCIAL VEHICLE MUST BE BUILT FOR COMMERCIAL PURPOSES. In the construction of the BUICK Truck no consideration was given to any previous manufacturing policies either in the designing or in its manufacture.

¶ Therefore, as speed is not required in a commercial car and as rigidity, simplicity and economy in manufacture are prime requisites the L-head motor was decided upon.

¶ Every part of the chassis is constructed with one view point and for one purpose and no superfluous or questionable devices or attachments are used. Every detail is worked out for its service value and with the idea that each car must maintain to its highest possible degree, the policy which has become a part of the Buick creed—namely, THAT OF GIVING THE OWNER THE MAXIMUM OF SERVICE AT THE MINIMUM ... CHEAP GAS NOT CHEAP, SAYS OIL MAN

Quality Gasoline Will Never Be Sold at a Bargain

Under this heading, "When Cheap Gasoline is Dear," Touring Topics, the magazine of the Automobile Club of Southern California, devotes the first page of a recent issue to a discussion of the adulteration of gasoline and the consequent loss of power and injury to the automobile motor. The article has reference particularly to Los Angeles, but unfortunately [illegible] one city, and we quote the paragraphs below because they are of general application and therefore of interest to all motorists.

Touring Topics says:

"The condition of the local retail gasoline market presents a curious anomaly to the ordinary motorist who, in the course of a three-mile trip along the city streets has his attention attracted to signs offering gasoline at prices ranging from 14 to 20 cents per gallon. Every person who drives a motor car is keenly interested in the subject of fuel supply and the trade papers have impressed upon automobilists generally that no relief from the present high cost of gasoline can be expected in the future unless some substitute fuel is perfected or new carburetor systems are devised that will utilize other gaseous liquids.

"The wise motorist who keeps in touch with the wholesale gasoline market knows very accurately the price at which good gasoline can be retailed and it is somewhat of a mystery to him to discover a little out of the way garage that is selling gasoline at from one to three cents under the price at which it can be handled in small quantities at a fair profit. The new car owner will conclude, naturally, that the lower price is the correct one and that the concerns charging more for gas are asking an exorbitant profit. On investigation it will usually be found however, that it is the extremely low-priced concern that is making the big profit and this is the way in which it is done according to reports received at club headquarters. The gasoline, after it is received from the wagons of the wholesaler, is generally doctored with distillate or other adulterants, and the resulting mixture sold to the motorists as high grade and high test gasoline. This results in a loss of power and a fouling of the engine that makes the cheap gasoline about the most expensive purchase that the automobilist can make."

According to F. A. Williamson, special agent for the Standard Oil Company in Oakland, automobilists are not the sort to be fooled very long by this so-called "bargain" gasoline. They are fast abandoning the dishonest concerns and hunting out the well organized, honestly conducted garages, where they get what they pay for—a good quality of gasoline that can be relied on. Williamson says:

"These honest, reliable garages, you may be sure, are not jeopardizing their reputations by handling anything but high grade gasoline—the majority of them, in fact, are handling the Standard Oil Company's Red Crown gasoline, and for most motorists that is a good guarantee of quality.

"Many automobilists who keep their cars on their own premises, have found it convenient to do away entirely with the small purchases of gasoline. They are buying direct from the Standard and have installed storage facilities in order to receive deliveries from the company's tank wagons. This is a good method, but even though the owner does not require storage facilities of his own, he may be sure of getting "quality gasoline" if he hunts up a good garage and pays the market price. If he pays less, he gets less."

MOTORCYCLE NOTES.

Eighty thousand miles by motorcycle is the record made by William H. Spohr of Buffalo, N. Y., who has been an enthusiastic cyclist since 1908.

Another missionary who has been converted to the use of the motorcycle is the Rev. Victor H. Wachs, who is a missionary in Korea.

Another newspaper has been "saved" by the motorcycle. Had it not been for the timely aid of the two-wheeler in operating the presses, Waterloo, Ont., would have been newsless when defective insulation put the power plant out of commission for a day.

Despite the fact that he is owner of a large touring car, A. P. Battey, president of the Marion County State Bank, Florence, Kas., rides a motorcycle almost exclusively, both for business and pleasure.

L. C. Mitchell of Wichita, Kas., is on his way to the lumber camps of the Northwest, where he will preach the gospel to the lumbermen. Mr. Mitchell is making the trip on a motorcycle.

RAPID GROWTH OF FIRM DUE TO SIX

Burman Comments on Positive Demand for 6-Cylinder Automobiles.

Substantial proof as to the popularity of the six-cylinder car is given in the growth of the H. O. Harrison Company organization here in Oakland, which represents the "Six" Hudson car in this territory. At the head of the local branch house is Charles Burman, long identified with the Peerless car interests and one of the best known men in the industry. Associated with Burman on the sales force alone, is W. F. MacDonald, long a member of the Packard Motor Company organization; H. R. McDonald who before coming to Oakland was connected with the largest motor car agencies in British Columbia and also F. R. Blodgett who is well known here in Oakland through his motor car affiliations with the automobile trade.

In commenting on the rapid growth of the sales force of the new Oakland house, Burman ascribes it to the popularity of the six cylinder cars. He says:

"Motorists are quickly learning the advantages of the six-cylinder car. Fallacies that have been prevalent are disappearing. Buyers are no longer impressed by the assertions of some salesmen that a six-cylinder is more expensive to maintain than a four. Common sense and experience have proven this claim absolutely groundless. It is becoming generally known that the consumption of a certain quantity of gasoline will produce a more or less definite amount of power. And that it makes practically no difference whether this is burned in four cylinders or in six. In fact it often occurs that of two motors, a four and a six, developing the same amount of power the six will burn less gasoline than the four. This because its power is more effectively and economically applied. "Another argument urged against the six is that of excessive complication. It has been claimed that because the six has two more cylinders than the four, therefore repair and upkeep cost will be greater. It is stated that there is more liability for six cylinders to get out of order than four. But this is a very old theory, long ago exploded. Precisely the same thing was urged by the champions of the two-cylinder motor when the four began to be used. Yet no owner of a four has had cause to worry in this respect. The very fact that in the six each cylinder has less work to do than in a four would operate to place the two on a common basis. Practice is the best answer to this claim. And experience shows that instead of being more susceptible to wear and derangement than a four the six is actually less liable to get out of order, or to need valve adjustments and other care. "The prospective motor-car buyer should carefully consider these questions. For just as soon as he succeeds in getting rid of the old idea that a six burns more gasoline and needs more care than a four he is in a position to enjoy with serenity and satisfaction the very many delights and the enhanced enjoyment that comes with the ownership of a good six.

"On one point there is no argument. That is the fire economy of the six. This has been thoroughly tested. A Hudson Six 54, though a large seven-passenger car, with a wheel-base of 135 inches, has shown wonderfully small wear on tires. Not only is the wear less but the liability to puncture and blowout is reduced. Since a good six can be bought at no more, and sometimes less, than a big four there seems no reason why motorists should continue to drive fours when the many advantages and greater satisfaction of the six is so easily within their reach."

PREVENT TROUBLE BY PREPARATIONS

"One half the enjoyment of touring is immunity from tire troubles," says E. C. Newbaur, manager of the Oakland house of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company. "The average owner-driver can enjoy this immunity by exercising care in making his preparations. Blowouts, punctures and other tire troubles are holdups which he looks forward to with no degree of enjoyment, whereas a little preparation in the way of accessories for temporary repairs obviates unnecessary delay.

"In the first place he should be sure that hiscasings and tubes are in good condition and that he has an extra supply of both. Then with a good air pump, a tire gauge to test the air pressure in his tires, and a supply of tire repair devices, he can go on his way confident that he has taken every precaution to sidestep tire troubles. He will find that thus prepared, the tour will be more enjoyable both for himself and his party."

HUP DEALERS GATHER FIRST TIME

Visiting dealers at the first annual convention of the Hupp Motor Car Company wound up two very busy days in good cheer and fellowship last week with a banquet given in their honor by the officials of the company in the green room of the Hotel Pontchartrain, Detroit.

SQUEAL SAVES SAUSAGE AT BAY

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—A pig squealed in peaceful Brighton Park. Then:

A passenger train rushing to the city was held up by two "desperate bandits" in true wild-western style.

Then:

The pig ceased to squeal, and all was well in Brighton Park once more.

NOW FOR THE STORY.

At 3 a. m. Desk Sergeant Michael Talty heard the seldom-used telephone in the Brighton Park station ring. He answered it.

"Send a policeman to the Panhandle tracks," begged a female voice in shrill, terror-laden treble. "A mad dog is loose."

The sergeant sprang from the phone, gave a call, and in a minute the patrol wagon was rushing through the streets, carrying Patrolmen O'Brien and Turpin, ready to "shoot at sight" when the mad dog appeared.

At West Thirty-fourth street and Artesian avenue they found it and the fusillade, which aroused Brighton Park, began. It was ineffective. The animal escaped the bullets and fled down the Panhandle tracks. The two policemen followed it, firing as they ran, lighting their way with a lantern taken from the patrol wagon.

The faint glow from the lantern failed to keep the animal in sight, but just as the policemen were about to give up the chase the track was gleamed out in the glare from the headlight of an onrushing passenger train.

DOG WAS A PIG.

In it was revealed not the mad dog the policemen sought, but a harmless black pig. The policemen ceased firing, but as they did there came a heartrending squeal. The pursued pig had been caught in a "frog" and death under the wheels of the onrushing train was imminent.

The policemen did not hesitate a minute. They feared for the pig and they feared for the train, so with the lantern from the patrol wagon they flagged the train.

It came to a stop and the fireman and engineer, peering from the cab, saw themselves confronted with two men, revolvers in hand, who shouted:

"Hold up!"

They dodged back into the cab.

Then, peering again, they saw the stars on the blue coats and were reassured.

"We were afraid you'd derail the train if you ran over the pig," explained the men they had taken for "desperate bandits."

BUSY, BUSY NIGHT.

In their relief the train crew went to the assistance of the policemen and the pig was released from the "frog" and carried to the police station.

Meantime the shots fired by the policemen had kept the telephone jingling at the station, [illegible] and half a dozen robberies were reported. The police were rushing this way and that to deal with them.

Then the patrol wagon arrived with the pig.

"Well, the pig is worth $20 and we saved it," commented Desk Sergeant Talty.

COLLEGES PLAN LITERARY MATCH

Open to All Undergraduates of Harvard, Yale and Princeton; Prizes.

A literary contest has been arranged between Harvard, Yale and Princeton for the coming academic year. It will engage the best efforts of the college poets, playwrights and story writers. Each of these colleges has literary competitions within its own body, for which prizes are awarded each year. This sets a new example for intercollegiate rivalry.

The tri-collegiate literary competition has been organized by undergraduate literary magazines of three colleges — the Harvard Advocate, the Nassau Literary Magazine and the Yale Literary Magazine—and the Yale Courant. The idea originated with the Harvard Advocate editors, and representatives of the four publications met in New Haven and formulated plans [illegible] the literary competitions held with that college have not been successful in that they have failed to attract a respectable number of contestants. And the trouble, it says, is in the fact that they are purely local; a man is simply competing with his own friends.

NOT HEALTHY RIVALRY.

"There is a certain amount of rivalry of course, but none of that keen and healthy rivalry that is the essence of true competition," it says. "Athletics afford a parallel. Intercollegiate athletics [illegible] as the natural form of sport. Local contests are incidental and arouse proportionally little enthusiasm. It is natural and proper that the idea of beating another college should evoke more zest than that of winning from a personal friend.

"The same principle might be applied in literary competitions. Let the individual be sunk in the mass; let the individual win, not for himself alone, but to uphold the name of a body to which he belongs, and there you have inevitably the ideal sense of rivalry."

The competition, open to all undergraduates of Harvard, Yale and Princeton, will be divided into three departments — plays, poetry and short stories. The story must not be longer than 5000 words; the play or poem may be as long as the writer chooses to make it. After college opens the manuscripts may be submitted to the respective editorial boards up to February 1, 1914, when the competition ends.

PROFESSORS AS JUDGES.

There will be four judges—a professor from each of the three colleges, and a writer or critic not connected with any.

A gold medal will be awarded to the winner in each department, and this will [illegible] Princeton, for instance, win the prize in playwriting, and Yale the prizes in both poetry and fiction, Yale would be literary champion of the year, with Princeton second and Harvard "nowhere." One college winning the prizes in all three departments would, of course, be a triple champion and entitled to lord it over her sisters.

The committee has planned to make the prize $50 in gold where the winner prefers cash to a medal.

Each of these universities have turned out many literary men of note, and these very papers that are fostering the competition were the training schools in undergraduate days of many who are now important contributors to American literature and journalism. Among the former editors of the Yale Literary Magazine were Owen Johnson and Professor Lounsbury; of the Nassau Literary Magazine, Jessie Lynch Williams, Booth Tarkington and David Graham Phillips; of the Harvard Advocate, Richard Washburn Childs, Arthur Train, Robert Grant, Robert Herrick, Theodore Roosevelt and Edward Sheldon.

70 TONS A DAY ON HUGE TRUCK

A remarkable record for the transportation of large tonnages of sand, gravel, bricks and various building materials with the use of a motor truck in connection with trailers has been made lately by a firm of Cleveland building contractors, the Samuel Austin & Son Company.

Some time ago this company put in service a Peerless five-ton truck with screw power hoist dumping body. It has the contract for building construction at Nela Park, the new home of the National Quality Lamp divisions of the General Electric Company. From the Austin yards to Nela Park is a haul of about a mile.

On each trip the truck is loaded to capacity and each of two trailers is loaded with two and a half tons. Extra trailers are employed so that they may be loaded while the truck is away, and only have to be hitched to machine on its return to the yard. The truck itself is loaded as expeditiously as the material to be hauled will allow.

The truck has averaged about seventy tons every working day since it has been [illegible] and it goes up a stiff grade at the [illegible] without difficulty.

The Edwardsville, Ill., police feel so keenly the need of a motorcycle in the department that they are figuring on purchasing one by personal subscriptions.

YOSEMITE VALLEY LURING AUTOISTS

Big Rush Predicted for Next Season, Says Premier Car Man.

While a number of autoists are taking advantage of the re-opening of the valley to automobiles, the order came so late in the season that traffic into the Yosemite will not be very great this season. The Yosemite valley is at its best in the early summer when the weather is cooler and the streams are high, thereby enhancing the beauty of the falls many fold. Next season a great rush of auto traffic into the valley is predicted.

The first car to enter the Yosemite under the new orders, which were placed in effect Sept. 1, was a Premier, driven by J. H. Leach of [illegible] Boulevard avenue, Los Angeles. His daughter, Miss Jaunita Leach, carried with her as a souvenir the sign of which had hung for five years at the park line saying that autos were prohibited in the Yosemite national park, according to F. H. Dailey the Premier car dealer here.

ceded to the United States government in 1904 by the state of California after the state had held it forty years, California having acquired the park from the government in 1864. It became evident that the wonders of this great valley would be better preserved if the park were again placed under federal control. H. R. McNoble of Stockton, as a grand officer of the Native Sons of the Golden West, led the fight to have the park re-established as a national park, and it was during his term as grand president that legislation was enacted turning the Yosemite back to Uncle Sam.

SHAKES CHINESE FOR SHAKING LAD

After seeing a boy loot his cash register, and after breathlessly pursuing him from his store, 549 Sixteenth street, to Fifteenth and Clay streets, Soo H. Wing, a Chinese curio merchant, started to shake the boy so that he dropped $7 in the gutter. While Wing was busily engaged in attempting to shake the additional $3 out of the boy, M. J. Minnan, driver for the H. N. Gard Paper Company, drove by.

"Here, you quit pausing that boy," shouted Minnan to the Chinese.

Wing emitted a voluble explanation in his nearest approach to swift English. The explanation was not sufficiently clear to Minnan, and he commenced to shake the Chinese. Wing let the boy go and rushed into Capwell's store, where he made his escape in the crowd.

Tuesday the Ebell opened its fall season with an elaborate luncheon, at which about two hundred guests were present. The picturesque dining hall of the club was artistically decorated in greens, the tables being ornamented with cut glass bowls filled with ferns and dainty blooms. Mrs. George W. Lyon on September 19, at which the members continued their study of Shakespeare.

HILLSIDE CLUB.

Last Monday evening the clubhouse of the Hillside club was the scene of a brilliant setting, when the members received Henry P. Bowie, who delivered an address on Japanase Art. The lecture was apostrophized by a beautiful exhibit of Japanese paintings taken from his own private collection for the occasion. Bowie studied for ten years in Japan under some of the best known artists there. The artist has written a book in which he has detailed the various laws which govern the Japanese in their constructive work along art lines. A great deal was learned by the audience last evening of the esoteric meaning of lines, shading, etc. Chinese characters also formed an important part of the address. In the exhibit were represented many of the masters of Japanese art. The club house was appropriately decorated for the occasion with Japanese lanterns, bamboo and chrysanthemums, which lent an oriental atmosphere to the scene.

HOME CLUB.

The opening luncheon of the Home club was well attended Thursday afternoon when about two hundred members of the club gathered at the clubhouse for the first luncheon of the season. The feature of the afternoon was the address by G. L. Najarian on Persian Rugs, which he illustrated by having present some of the most valuable specimens of the Persian weavers as well as a native of that country in Persian costume, who illustrated the process of rug weaving with a loom used for the purpose. Najarian spoke of the materials from which the rugs were woven, Camels hair, silk, wool and cotton. In the specimens on exhibition he told of the meanings which were expressed by the Persians in the designs which were worked out in the rugs and told pages of history; of the symbols of the different colors; the Turkish red and greens used in the rugs woven for use in the temples and holy shrines; yellow, denoting royalty, white as the symbol of mourning, and black as the meaning of vice and evil. Every design expressed some personality or secret meaning. The lotus, the first flower and fruit of the earth, from which all other designs were taken was clearly discerned in the patterns of the rugs. A rug, now almost impossible to procure, was loaned by the president, Mrs. Daniel Easterbrook, for the occasion. This was the "Pride of Persia," a beautiful specimen signifying the design of the bird of Paradise and represented the ideal of the Persians, their future destiny, Paradise.

The presiding hostess for the day was Mrs. W. W. Crane. At the close of the meeting a reception was tendered by the club members. Among those seated at the round table were Daniel Easterbrook, Mrs. W. W. Crane, Mrs. A. O. Edwards, Mrs. Parker, Mrs. G. E. Shuey, Mrs. Gaytes, Mrs. Leet, Mrs. Rugg, Mrs. G. H. Gray, Mrs. Webster, Mrs. Inskeep, Mrs. F. M. Smith and a number of guests who were present for the afternoon.

ALTA MIRA CLUB TO MEET.

An interesting musical program will be given by the members of the Alta Mira Club on the afternoon of September 22. The first part of the afternoon will be devoted to an informal business session. Mrs. W. H. Cary will be chairman for the afternoon, while Mrs. A. L. Marian will be receiving hostess. Those who will take part in the musical program are Miss Edith Benjamin, soprano, accompanied by Miss McKenzie; readings by Miss Ethel Coplin and her pupils, and a group of songs by the soloist.

BENEFIT FOR HOME.

A large card party has been arranged by Mrs. Lin S. Church and Mrs. John M. Scotchler for the benefit of the West Oakland Home for the afternoon of September 25, at the home of the former in Berkeley. The proceeds are to go towards the annual doll show of the West Oakland Home. The series of benefit card parties which were given last year at the homes of the different members met with such financial success that it was decided to do the same this year. Those who will assist the hostesses are Miss Grace Trevor, president of the home; Mrs. Frank Melbourne, Mrs. Alexander Pantages, Mrs. Rod Church, Mrs. F. B. Ladd and Mrs. Arthur M. Smith.

How to Keep Face Young and Attractive

(National Hygiene Review.)

The way to ward off old age is not to fear, not to allow one's self to be oppressed by the dread of advancing years. Use only legitimate preventives and avoid trying experiments with preparations not indorsed by physicians. An entirely safe and very effective way to keep the complexion young-looking and beautiful is to apply ordinary mercolized wax at bedtime, using it like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. This gradually absorbs the withered, faded cuticle, which is replaced by the more youthful, pink-tinted underskin. One ounce of this wax, to be had at any drug store, is enough to completely rejuvenate a worn-out complexion.

Crow's feet and other wrinkles, the first signs of advancing age, may be removed by a simple, harmless preparation made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. It is used as a face bath.

TOBACCO HABIT EASILY CONQUERED

A well-known New Yorker of wide experience, has written a book telling how the tobacco or snuff habit may be easily and completely banished in three days with delightful benefit.

The health improves wonderfully, the system. Calmness, tranquil sleep, clear eyes, normal appetite, good digestion, manly vigor, strong memory and a general gain in efficiency are among the many benefits reported. No more of that nervous feeling; no more need of pipe, cigar, cigarette or chewing tobacco to pacify the morbid desire. The author, Edw. J. Woods, 534 Sixth Ave., 633 R, New York City, will send his book free on application, to anyone who writes to him.

'Redlight' Plays Are Condemned

'Brothel Drama Mistake'--Belasco

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Though we didn't see David Belasco strolling along his footlights the other night he is in town, keeping a close eye on the stage. Perhaps he is watching it with more than ordinary interest, now that the police have been pressed into service as dramatic critics.

He believes it is high time for managers to sit up and take notice of conditions. He believes they should be the first to guard their own field. He believes they should protect the public from poisoned plays. This is giving you his opinion as he gave it. One need not be told that it is the opinion of a man who knows the theater as you know your own threshold. If any man lives in it and for it, that man is David Belasco. This may sound like a speech, but it isn't. It's the truth. Every man-Jack or woman-Gill, of us must admit it. And that's why David Belasco's words at this time are worth their weight in type. Here they are:

"The brothel play is a mistake. I have not seen the plays responsible for the present agitation, but I feel justified in saying there is no excuse for any play that has a disorderly house for one of its scenes. I like red-blood drama, but not tainted-blood drama. In saying this I realize that I myself may be criticised because I produced "The Easiest Way."

"I did so because I considered it a masterpiece—one of the few really great American plays. It was an inspiration. Eugene Walter wrote it, I am sure, with no intent to be sensational nor with any purely selfish thought of the box office. He wrote it in all earnestness and sincerity, and he told a serious story that depicted a phase of tenderloin life without descending to its most vicious depths. He did not aim to appeal to the morbid nor to jolt the sensitive. Yet this play was closed in Boston, cut to pieces in Baltimore, and condemned in other places. It had to fight every inch of the way, yet it finally won the fight and will, I firmly believe, be given a place, one of these days, among the great American plays.

MUST KEEP FAITH.

"Greater license is allowed the theater today than ever before. The tendency now is to produce a play with an eye on the box office alone. Nothing, in the end, could be more disastrous to the theater, which depends for its support upon a public that may be quick to turn against it. Faith must be kept with that public, it must feel that the theater is an institution that can be trusted and respected.

"In my opinion, as I have already said, the brothel should not be shown on the stage, nor should painted women and their even worse associates be paraded before the public. No real argument can be made for the red light drama, no good can come of it. Surely if the federal authorities cannot suppress the white slave evil, a few actors on the stage can't. Nothing of value is taught by the 'moral lesson' of a play that makes an insincere appeal. Such a play merely exhibits poor wretches as it might so many lepers. Even Bernard Shaw, with all his brilliancy, could not gild a pill that the public would swallow. If the public today is 'educated' up to the point where it will accept plays so brutally frank as to be positively shocking, what can be the future of the theater?

"There was a time when the great actors and great actresses of this country could scarcely draw enough money to the theater to pay their board bills. And why? Because the theater was believed to be the house of the devil. When the actors came to town housewives snatched their clothes off the line in the yard and kept their girls indoors. For years the theater and its people struggled against a prejudice as unjust as it was ridiculous, and only by untiring artistic effort that finally won the respect as well as the admiration of the public was this prejudice overcome. All this work—the work of years—may now be undone by plays that shock the public. I have studied that public long and carefully. I know how the theater may woo and win it—and also lose it.

"The 'movies' won a part of that public when pictures were first given because those pictures told pretty, wholesome stories. But since the 'movies' turned to the sensational and sometimes the vicious phases of life there has been a change. This has helped to bring back our [illegible] and our balconies in a measure. But if our stage is deluged with red light plays, we cannot hope to hold our own. From such an injury the theater could not recover in years. But I do not believe this will happen. Such plays are merely blackbirds that pass in the night, and unless I am greatly mistaken they will soon disappear.

"I intend to produce a play myself this season that deals with criminals, but this play makes no attempt to popularize or glorify them, nor does it descend to viciousness. The great thing to me is that it has a big thought behind it—Is there a cure for crime? If so, what is it? No matter what the fate of this play may be—and I'm not depending upon heroes and heroines, nor justifying errors made—I shall be satisfied if it helps the public generally, and I hope the federal authorities particularly, to find the cause of crime and then to find the cure. The argument set forth is that crime, after all, is nothing more than the result of perverted thought. I've had this play in my hands for four years, so it cannot be said I am following 'crook' plays. It seems to me that at last the time for it has come, especially as attention has recently been called to conditions in Sing Sing.

"To get back to the red light play, I am convinced that it teaches nothing. It is vile, nauseating and dangerous. In dealing with it we must first rely upon the dicretion of managers. After that it is up to the critics. The regrettable thing is that condemnation of such a play by the critics often serves as advertising. This whole question is one that the Theatrical Managers' Association might well consider, for its own good if not for that of the public. Let the theater keep the good name its has struggled so hard to win!"

PRAISES ITALY BEFORE LEAVING

Retiring Ambassador O'Brien Considers Two Years in Rome Best of Life.

ROME, Sept. 20.—Before leaving for San Rossore, where he was received by King Victor and presented his letter of recall, Thomas O'Brien, the retiring ambassador, stated that he considered the two years he had spent in Rome as the best of his life.

"I have done all in my power," he said, "to improve the economic conditions of the country. I am gratified to note that there is substantial and permanent progress in every direction. And I have every reason to believe that the progress will continue under the present enlightened government."

Discussing King Victor, the American ambassador said, "I had a number of audiences with the king and from every point of view I consider him a remarkable man. Indeed, Italy has everything to be proud of him. I hope the people will continue to give him confidence and support.

"The country is also fortunate in having as prime minister Signor Giolitti, a man having all the fine qualities of a really great leader. I was deeply impressed by the sincerity and capacity of the other ministers. My two years' residence has brought from all sources the most courteous, perfect treatment. This is true from the point of view of all our relations, official and private, both with Italians and foreigners. My stay here will be the most agreeable and pleasant memory."

JAIL DELIVERY PLAN FOILED BY OFFICERS

MARYSVILLE, Yuba Co., Sept. 20.—The discovery of a heavy iron bar and a stocking filled at one end with heavy putty in a cell in the city jail is believed by the local officers to have frustrated a projected jail delivery.

The iron bar was one wrenched from a cell door and with the stocking could be used as bludgeons on the officers.

There are five felony prisoners in the jail. They are: M. McCarl, implicated in the passing of a lost check for $300; Joe Wilson, charged with holding up and robbing a Greek, and Joe Castro, Juan Santos and A. Carritos, Mexicans, charged with burglarizing a room at the Dawson House.

The officers recall since the discovery that some of the prisoners made various pretexts to induce the officers to enter one of the cells.

KLAND LEADS BIG CITIES IN BUILDING

GHTFALL AND MORNING ON LAKE MERRITT

ever walked or driven at dusk along the boulevard skirting the eastern shore of Lake Merritt of a clear day? If you have, a scene which here can only be outlined, met your eyes and made impression. If you have not, gaze upon this picture—you have missed much of the joy of living

The lake at your feet is like molten silver. Birds dive from the sky toward its calm surface, ... are all that is heard. The western horizon glows with a splendor that dazzles. Tamalpais ... hills rest in purple glory against the rosy background of a sunset that was never more beauti- ... or sea. Silhouetted against mountain and sunset rest the towers of the Hotel Oakland and the ... dome of a downtown department store and the upper walls of office buildings. Northward, clasped eternally in the far-flung arms of the lake, lies Lakeside Park, its velvet slopes and fantastic oaks rising from the silvery inland sea like an island of mystery. Or, perhaps it is early morning and the scene is different, but being in Oakland, is none the less beautiful. Has it been your happy lot to walk—riding would take you from the spot all too quickly—along Harrison boulevard on the eastern side of the lake's northwestern tentacle? A million dew gems sparkle from the grass which mantles the shore as the sun rises above the Piedmont hills. The water is like a lake of diamonds. Across the lake arm the most beautiful park in the west is taking its morning bath in the sunlight. Further east the residence heights are gleaming. The sun baptizes all west of the range so radiantly that haze almost obscures the farther hills. Color and freshness and brilliancy are everywhere. For it is morning and you are in Oakland.

HIGHWAY WILL BENEFIT THIS CITY

Lincoln Boulevard Over U. S. to Have Oakland Terminal

In the opinion of leading real estate men and other citizens of Oakland, the Lincoln Memorial Highway, which will have its transcontinental terminus in Oakland, will be a tremendous benefit to the city In fact one of the leading realty operators goes so far as to predict that in actual benefit the Lincoln Highway will rival those that would accrue from a new ttranscontinental railway

Four and one-half million dollars have already been raised by the Lincoln Highway Association. The money is pouring into the national headquarters from manufacturers of automobiles and other accessories who will largely benefit and from motor car owners who want to see this great highway a reality

Circulars issued by the Lincoln Highway Association state that when the road is complete the trip from New York to San Francisco can be made "in comfort" in twelve or fifteen days With the constantly decreasing of prices and constantly increasing efficiency of motor cars, it is certain that the trip can be made far more cheaply than by train With the wonderful concrete-based, bituminized roadway that is planned and with service stations at short intervals there is no question but that the trip by the Lincoln Highway will be far more comfortable and delightful than by train.

WANT CARS HERE.

Furthermore, thousands upon thousands of persons in the east want to have their cars with them in California. At present the expense of shipping a car from New York is considerable, despite which hundreds of well-to-do people have their cars shipped to California every season. With a smooth road at easy grades, and a straight course from New York to San Francisco bay untold numbers of motorists will take advantage of the fact to bring their car out for use over the splendid California roads.

Paul Dinsmore, a prominent realty sales manager, speaking of the benefit to Oakland of the Lincoln Highway, predicts that when the road is complete at least 300,000 tourists will come rolling into Oakland every year or 60,000 machines with an average of five passengers to the car.

With the four and one-half millions at present available and the whole country enthusiastic over this Atlantic to Pacific highway, the directors of the association expect that they will have a first class, complete highway early enough in 1915 so that motorists can come via the highway to the Panama-Pacific exposition.

The worst parts of the road will be completed first and it only requires the construction of a few hundred miles to increase the efficiency of the present overland trail one hundred per cent.

Oakland real estate dealers are enthusiastic over the prospect and several movements are already on foot to raise funds to be forwarded to the National Association.

BERKELEYANS TO BUILD FINE THEATER

BERKELEY, Sept. 20.—Plans have been announced this week for a new theater soon to be built in Berkeley at a cost of $150,000. It is to be located in the rear of the Brooks Apartments at Kittredge and Shattuck avenue. The property was purchased from Frank M. Wilson by Turner & Dahnken, who will erect the structure.

It will occupy a lot 100 by 135 feet and follow the Greek lines of architecture. It will have exits on Shattuck, Kittredge, Bancroft and Fulton. A striking entrance is planned, above the foyer arrangements being made for apartments. The theater will be equipped for motion pictures, vaudeville or the legitimate drama

The building market continues to advance throughout the city, as the season wears on after the summer quietude. In new buildings during the last week there has been an outlay of $20,000, according to the figures available at the office of the building inspector. Chief among the new buildings are homes of a modern price being erected by their prospective occupants.

Realty business continues to boom throughout the city and the tract properties. The improvement of Codornice Park is expected to add a new impetus to sales in that section of the city, which have already been heavy for weeks past. In the tracts farther north the same story is told, many sales and re-sales being recorded there. There is a heavy demand for moderate priced bungalows in the central section of the city fed by the California and Sacramento street suburban trains, and here several new houses are in course of construction.

Another new residence tract is shortly to be marketed north of the city. It adjoins Berkeley Park and will have the same fine view of the bay and shelter of the hills.

Two-story seven-room dwelling, west side of Prospect, 300 feet north of Dwight way, Dudley Baird, owner; $5270.

Two-story six-room dwelling, east side of Bonita, 350 feet north of Rose; Fredericksen & Ericksen, owners and builders; $2500.

One story five-room dwelling, east side of Bonita, 275 feet north of Rose; Fredericksen & Erickson, owners and builders. $2500.

One-story six-room dwelling, west side of The Alameda, 600 feet north of Hopkins; Mary E. Van Kirk, owner; $3900.

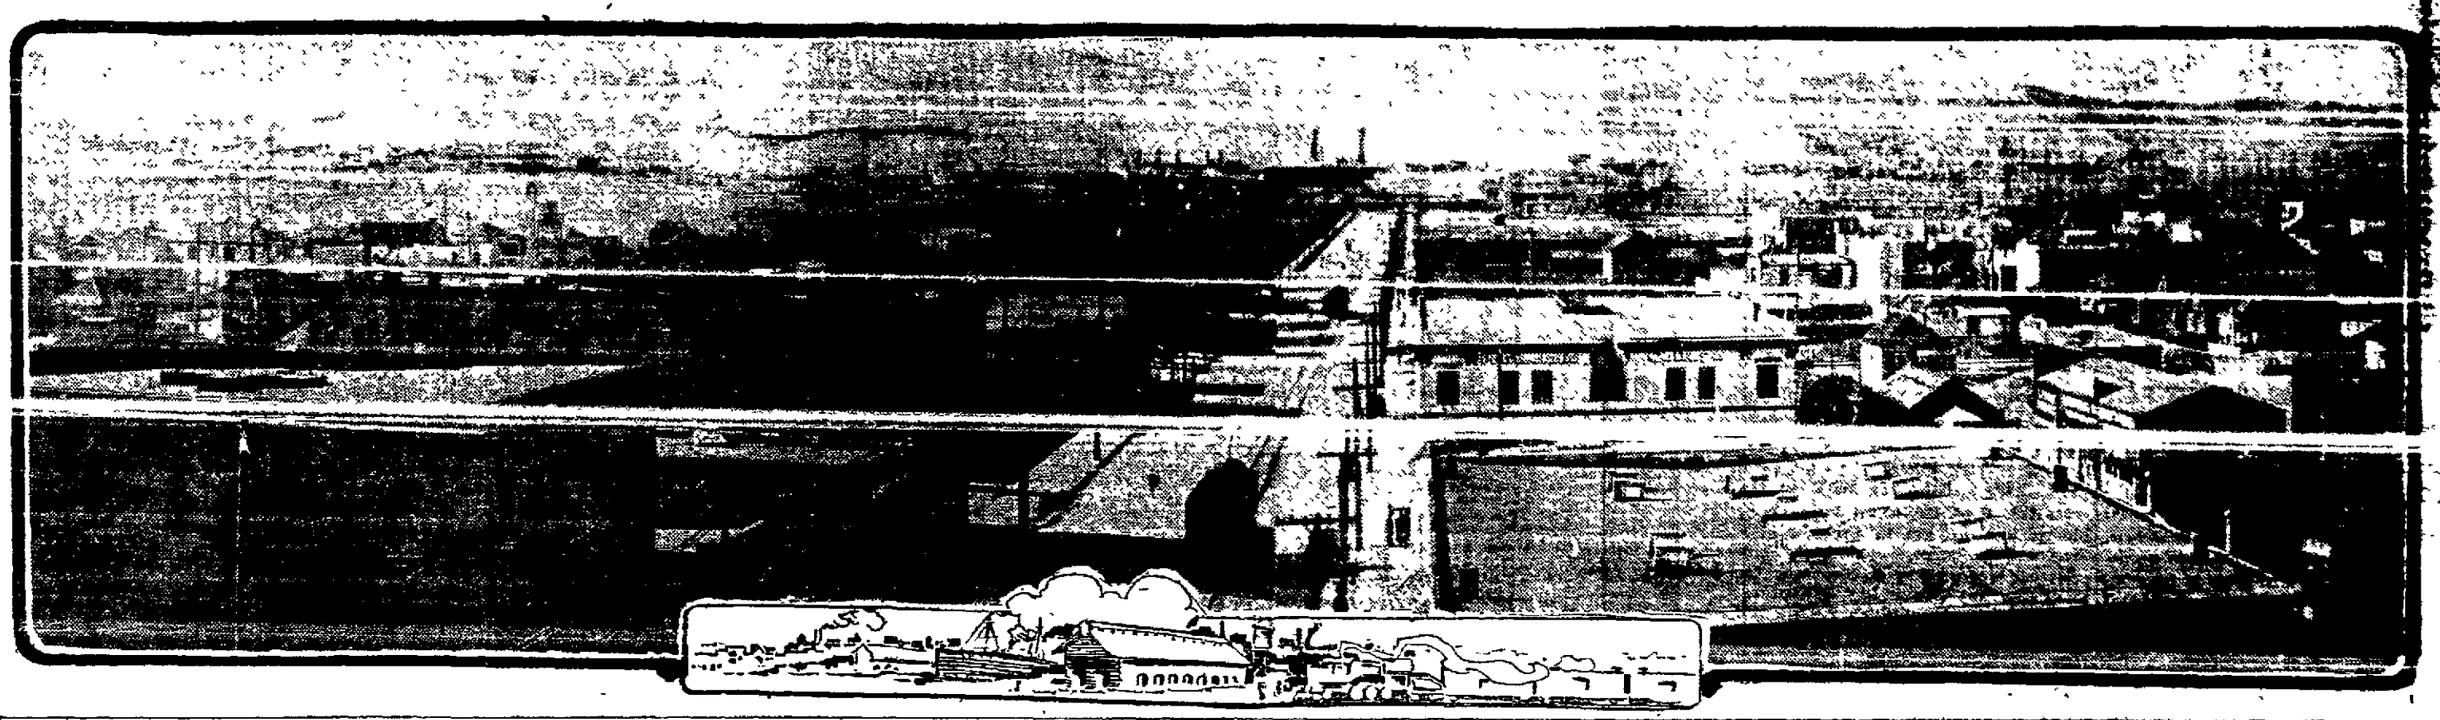
RICHMOND WORLD-BEATER IN GROWTH

PANORAMIC VIEW OF RICHMOND, LOOKING WEST ON MACDONALD AVENUE; STANDARD OIL WORKS IN BACKGROUND.



INDUSTRIAL CENTER IS RECORD-BREAKER

Manufacturing, Waterfront and Realty Values Wonderful Assets

Optimistic real estate owners and other men now freely predict that Richmond is destined to be a great city, one of the greatest cities on the Pacific coast, inside of twenty years. All past and present indications point to such a prophecy as being all within the bounds of reason.

The basis of this belief is the fact that great harbors make great cities, and Richmond has six miles of deep water extending along two sides. This, coupled with the fact that two trans-continental railroads meet ocean ships here and the further fact that Richmond has already a wonderful start as a manufacturing center, warrants the belief that the phenomenal growth of this city during the past few years, from a wheat field to a prosperous city of 15,000 inhabitants, is to continue. The same reasons which caused the Standard Oil Company to invest ten millions of dollars in a plant there and the great Pullman Company to invest several millions in shops has brought other large manufacturing interests. Every year adds several new industrial concerns to the manufacturing colony, and the payroll which Richmond now enjoys from this source alone is fast creeping up toward the three-quarters of a million a month mark. This money is all outside cash coming into local circulation, paid semi-monthly, and everybody gets some of it.

INNER HARBOR PROJECTS.

Word was received from Washington last week that the rivers and harbors' congressional board of engineers is to take up the Richmond inner harbor project soon and separately from the other San Francisco bay harbor projects, and it is confidently expected that a large federal appropriation will be made during the regular session of congress, as it is now known that the board will report favorably and recommend an appropriation. All of the members of the board have unofficially expressed themselves to that effect, not only to the band of Richmond boosters who went on to Washington in June to present the facts but to Congressman Charles F. Curry since that time. This fact, coupled with the other that Richmond now has on hand the sum of $1,170,000 which it voted bonds for the building and improving of its harbors, guarantees for this city a great harbor for ocean-going vessels in the immediate future and the shipping interests and upbuilding of the city incident to such construction and improvement.

REALTY VALUES INCREASE.

To the average man and woman, however, Richmond's chief attraction is and for some years has been the rapid and continued advance in real estate values, offering a speculative market for investment, not only safe and conservative, but highly profitable. Many thousand non-residents have taken advantage of these opportunities and for the most part have realized substantial profits on resales. Many transfers of property have brought profits to the former owners so great as to almost stagger belief and the average has been well up to the expectations and desires of the investors.

A great many new tracts have been put on the market here during the past two years, but at the present time the majority of these tracts have been sold out and the promoters cannot find any more to open up. Fully a dozen residential tracts adjoining the city have been entirely closed out both to residents and non-residents and re-sales of them are now of every-day occurrence.

CITY EXPANDS

Richmond has been spreading out in all directions and the next heavy residential building will be in the hill districts to the east, where some very fine residences are now being planned and are to be erected at an early date. A healthy growth, however, is noticeable in every section of the city and in the annexed districts of Stege and Pullman. Next spring San Pablo and other territory along the county line will be annexed.

Work will soon commence on the construction of the municipal highway, tunnel through the west hills and wharf on the bay front. This municipal improvement of the waterfront facilities means a great deal to Richmond in more ways than one. In the first place it is to furnish steady employment to a large number of men for some years to come, at a good wage, and thus put the money into local circulation; and secondly it is to bring ferry connections with San Francisco, additional shipping facilities, a fine automobile boulevard and the connecting of the east and west sides of the city, which has so far been divided by the Santa Fe holdings.

WATER DISTRICT PROJECT.

One of the greatest of new projects which Richmond now has on hand is the creation of a new publicly owned water district and distributing system, which is to embrace all of the waterfront towns of Contra Costa county and to bring down from a point near Antioch the water of the San Joaquin river, affording an unlimited supply of good water for the people of Richmond and the other towns involved for many years into the future. Such a district has already been created by a vote of Richmond people and the other towns have signified their willingness to go into the big project. Bonds will be voted to cover the cost and a competent board of water directors and engineers are now hard at work on the details of the project.

Richmond also wants to go in with the other east bay cities in the accumulation of the street railway lines operating between this city, Berkeley and Oakland, in case such a project materializes, as now seems likely, and in such matters as municipally owned water systems, street railways, harbors, highways and wharfs is paving the way for a future growth and greatness which all who are interested here freely predict is as sure to figure on as anything of a similar nature anywhere in all the west or the Pacific coast country.

NO "HARD TIMES."

Rumors have reached Richmond that the money market is tight, but if such is the case there is no indications that it has in any way affected Richmond, either in a business way or in building activities, and there is no surer sign of prosperous times than continued progress in the erection of new business blocks and dwelling houses. Much complaint of that nature was read of in the dispatches from other states and communities during August. In that month Richmond issued over $60,000 in permits for new buildings, and this month promises to keep up to the average for the year, perhaps exceed it.

NEW TRACT IS ON THE MARKET

Arlington Terrace, on Hillside, Commands Wonderful View.

This new home place is located along the hillsides that adjoin Richmond on the east. It overlooks the whole bay, the Golden Gate, Mount Tamalpias, San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley, Richmond and Grand Canyon park.

Arlington terrace offers all the comforts of the city with all advantages of the country. Peace, quiet, pure fresh air and sunshine galore. It is an ideal place for the growing family. The little ones can play in the open all the time without causing their mother any worry about undesirable companions or swiftly passing vehicles.

Restrictions which will be strictly enforced protect the home builder here from all undesirable features. The "shack" builder and all orientals and Africans will be entirely eliminated, as neighbors, from Arlington terrace.

High-class improvements are now being installed and when completed this tract will be second to none in the state. Finely paved streets wind their way along the graceful contour of the hillsides. The artistic embellishments which will ornament this home park will compare favorably with those already installed in Thousand Oaks in Berkeley, or Forest Hill in San Francisco.

There is no such thing as "pioneering" here; all the advantages of schools, the University of California, social and fraternal orders and churches of all denominations and theaters are easily reached. The Macdonald and San Pablo avenue cars run direct to the gates of Arlington terrace.

KENSINGTON PARK SCENE OF BUILDING

Dodge, ver Mehr Co. report that great building activity is being displayed in Kensington Park. Several houses recently completed are now occupied and a number of new residences are in course of construction which mark the 25-mile drive starting at the Hotel Oakland and traversing the most important residence sections on the east side of San Francisco bay, have been placed over the major portion of the route. Kensington Park is on this drive and these picturesque columns will be erected around Eagle Point, located in Kensington Park and a most important feature of the drive.

CERTIFICATES OF TITLE COST MORE

The September meeting of the Oakland Real Estate Association will be held next Wednesday noon at the Forum Cafe, where luncheon will be served. The special feature of the meeting will be a statement by representatives of the Oakland abstract companies explaining the recent changes which they have made in the charges for abstracts, searches, continuations and other services which they render the realty men and the public. Expressions from the brokers are likely to be heard. The new schedule of prices, as announced by the searchers, are as follows:

Appreciating the injustice of the present uniform charge for certificates of title, whereby the cheaper properties are made to pay the same fee for title searching that the most valuable properties pay, and also appreciating the unreasonableness of that same uniformity of price because of which we must assume the responsibility of thousands of dollars for the same title fee for which we assume the responsibility of only a few hundred dollars and, generally, for the purpose of clearly defining our responsibility to our clients and adjusting our schedules in a way that the business of title searching may be conducted with such a reasonable profit to ourselves that proper protection can be furnished by us to the purchases of real property and the lenders of money on the evidence of our certificates of title and abstracts, the following rate lists and regulations have been adopted by the undersigned companies to take effect on and after September 15, 1913.

RATES FOR CERTIFICATES OF TITLE.

For unlimited certificates of title as indicated in our Key map, $10 to $50, except as follows:

(A) Where a certificate of title is made for the use of the County Recorder in the filing of a map, the charge shall be at the rate of 50 cents per lot, for every designated lot upon said map, provided, however, that no such certificate shall be made at a price of less than $25.

(B) Where an original certificate covers not to exceed four distinct parcels or legal subdivisions, or the parcel or parcels covered thereby have been subdivided into not to exceed four separate parcels, a continuation in the form of a new certificate may be issued upon any portion of said land for a fee of one-half of the schedule price of a new certificate, provided, however, that the original certificate is exhibited, and provided further, that subsequently to the date of the original certificate there shall have been no change in the title to the particular parcel in question; and provided further, that under no circumstances shall the amount charged under this paragraph be less herein provided for, run to any party other than the one to whom the original ran, or his mortagee or trustees.

(C) Where a certificate is presented for continuation and such continuation is for the renewal or a mortgage or deed of trust or transfer of a loan to be made by the party ordering the continuation, and where there has been no change of title, a new certificate shall be issued and the price therefor shall be as follows:

(a) Where the period to be covered is more than 5 years and less than 10 years, $10.00.

(b) Where the period to be covered is more than 6 months and 5 years or less, $7.50.

(c) Where the period to be covered is 6 months or less, $5.00.

(D) The price for certificates of title upon all property in Alameda county not covered by the map hereinabove referred to, shall not be less than $15.00.

(E) Where the boundary line upon the map indicating a difference of price for certificates, runs along a street line, the higher price shall be charged for a certificate on either side of the street, forming such boundary line.

(1) Except as provided in Subdivisions B and C above, no continuation of certificate shall under any circumstances be made or issued.

(2) No stamped continuations or supplemental reports shall be affixed to any reports of title or certificates of title or abstracts of title when the period to be covered thereby is longer than two months.

RATES FOR ABSTRACTS OF TITLE.

(A) For abstracts of title, $1.00 per page, plus $20.00 for certification.

(B) For continuations of abstracts where the period of continuation is 10 years or more, $1.00 per page, plus $15.00 for certification.

(C) For continuations of abstracts where the period of continuation is more than 5 years, and less than 10 years, $1.00 per page, plus $10.00 for certification.

(D) For continuations of abstracts where the period of continuation is less than 5 years, $1.00 per page, plus $7.50 for certification.

COMMISSIONS.

A commission not to exceed ten (10) per cent may be allowed to real estate agents, loan agents, attorneys, builders, building and loan associations and banks, this commission to be payable to such only of the classes specified as are regularly established in their respective lines of business and then only when the bill upon which such commission is allowed is paid within sixty (60) days of the placing of the order.

Other than said commission payable to the parties and in the manner aforesaid, commission or rebates or discounts or abatements of concessions of any kind shall under any circumstances be made.

PAYMENT FOR SEARCHES.

No liability will be assumed by any of the undersigned companies for the certificates, abstracts or continuations made by them until the fee for the same has been paid, as evidenced by the receipts of the company attached thereto.

$650,000 LEASE SETS HIGH MARK

One of the largest ground leases ever consummated in Oakland, was recorded last Thursday. By the terms of this contract, P. J. Nicholas et al., leased to J. Pantoskey, the property at the southwest corner of Seventh and Washington streets for seventy-five years at a rental totalling in excess of $650,000.

Pantoskey has a great deal of confidence in the future of lower Washington street and as soon as plans and specifications satisfactory to him can be drawn up, will build a modern market and hotel building on this property. Plans are now being drawn for the building by Architect C. W. Dickey.

The market when completed will be open every day, this being a new innovation to meet the demands of the public. Dickey is to make an extended trip east, and will make a thorough study of all the markets in the large cities.

Special attention is to be given to the keeping of all wares cool and fresh. An ice-plant will be installed in the basement and tenants in the market will be provided with a large and roomy ice-cooled store room. Also a heating plant will be provided for comfort during the winter months.

The building itself will be three or five stories, class A, with a foundation capable of supporting several additional stories, should they be made necessary by future growth.

The hotel above will contain over 200 rooms, will be furnished with all the up-to-date accommodations.

The ground floor will contain 15,000 square feet and added to this, a large basement will give over 30,000 square feet of market space, making it the largest market of its kind in the state. The building will be finished in white tile brick and will be a splendid monument for lower Washington street. It marks the climax of thirty-five years' experience in the market business by Pantoskey.

The lease was consummated through the agency of Salingers, Herbert Salinger acting for all parties concerned.

HOW CANAL WILL HELP RICHMOND

RICHMOND, Sept 20.—An indication of how the general public is looking to Richmond as the center of one of the biggest development movements about the bay when the Panama Canal is well into its work of building up the commerce of this great harbor is contained in a letter to George S. Wall from a business man of New York, who six months ago invested in four lots in Wall's Harbor Center, the southeast corner of Cutting boulevard, Nicholl avenue and Twenty-third street into which the development from the new shipping basin will pour.

Enclosing a check for the balance of payment, the New Yorker, who was out here and inspected the bay region carefully, says in his letter that he believes his investment in Richmond will in time bring him profits in comparison with those made in large seaports of the east which have been built up by shipping development.

BAY REGION GREAT CENTER.

"Business men of New York," the letter says, "have figured out that San Francisco bay is to become one of the greatest centers of population and enterprise in the world. It was the knowledge of this sentiment here that caused me to go out and study San Francisco bay for an investment. I was irresistably drawn to Richmond and in Richmond to Harbor Center. Your duty is undoubtedly going to be a large port and your property will get the best part of the new commercial development there. It would gratify you to know how quickly and strongly the possibilities of Richmond impress any visitor from a large eastern commercial city. We have learned here what makes cities."

George S. Wall has a reputation of seeing the future of realty with remarkable clearness. "The land I have put on the market as Wall's Harbor Center simply must become immensely valuable," he says. "It has the location and the commercial tide must flow to it irresistably. That is why I selected it.

"The Panama canal is going to make a splendid commercial city of Richmond. We are beginning to feel the effect of it in advance."

GRAND BOULEVARD IS NOW COMPLETE

RICHMOND, Sept. 20.—One of the biggest pieces of improvement activity ever witnessed in this city is that of the improvement by Burg Bros. of their property, the Nichall-Macdonald Avenue-Civic Center Subdivision, for its entire frontage on Twenty-third street. The Burgs have just completed one of the finest thoroughfares ever constructed in Richmond, Grand boulevard, which winds through their property, and are now turning their attention to Twenty-third street.

Burg Brothers have been compelled to wait for the final action in the widening of Twenty-third street to eighty feet before they could open their property upon it from Macdonald avenue north. Now that final action has been taken they have promptly set to work. Gangs of men and teams are busy with the opening of the frontage along Twenty-third. The fence has been torn away and the concrete walks and other improvements are being put in. This frontage is cream business property like the rest of the subdivision. Old timers in Richmond are noting the centralization of business at Twenty-third street and Macdonald avenue. The growth of Richmond, even to them, is a marvel of city development. They look for a population of 50,000 here in the next six years, and developments are justifying their predictions.

New buildings will go up at once on the Twenty-third street frontage of the Burg property, as they are going up in the rest of the subdivision. Old timers in Richmond are noting the centralization of business at Twenty-third street and Macdonald avenue. The growth of Richmond, even to them, is a marvel of city development. They look for a population of 50,000 here in the next six years, and developments are justifying their predictions.

SITE FOR BATHING PAVILION IS SOLD

ALAMEDA, Sept 19. — One of the most interesting realty deals of the week was the transfer of a large section of the Robinson tract adjoining Washington park to F. N. Dodd and W. R. Geary, both of this city, who are to incorporate a company and erect a bathing pavilion on a mammoth scale. Plans for the pavilion have been prepared and articles of incorporation are ready to file with the secretary of state. It is the plan to make the enterprise a co-operative one, and for this reason the stock is to be distributed to residents of the city in small parcels. The deed of the property was put on record last Saturday.

Plans for the building, which will extend from one end to the other of the property, but not to its full depth, show a handsome exterior with grass roof. Around the interior of the building will be galleries with spectators' seats and dressing grooms. The tank will be 100x120 feet in size, and provision will be made for an open air tank of larger size and for surf bathing. Full details of the project are not being given out as yet.

Activity in building continues brisk and there is much demand for the modern bungalow and cottage. Bay frontages have come into popularity of late and waterfront lots are eagerly sought.

One of the greatest demonstrations of this fact is seen in the Waterside Terrace, where the lots fronting the tidal canal and San Leandro bay are in great demand and are bringing higher prices than are the inside pieces. About $120,000 worth of this property has been placed since the tract was opened six months ago.

Building activity suffered somewhat during the week, the permits issued by Deputy Building Inspector Walter Davies being confined chiefly to additions and repairs.

Although not many new permits were taken out there is still a great deal of uncompleted work going on and it will be several weeks before this is completed.

STREETS FORM PROBLEM.

Street repairs are taking up a great deal of the time of the Alameda council and the people of the city are divided as to the best manner of raising funds for the repair of the thoroughfares that have been worn out.

Mayor Frank Otis was in favor of including in the tax budget an item to cover this expense, but despite his recommendations the tax rate was fixed without this feature included.

Incidentally the tax rate is the lowest of the three principal bay cities, having been fixed at $1.03.

L. Williamson has started the construction of a store house at 624 Haight avenue. It will be a one story house of large floor space.

Petaluma Realty company secured a permit for the construction of a one story, five-room dwelling at 1200 Broadway. Work on the building has been commenced.

J. W. Monroe is building a five-room cottage at 1711 Eighth street. The work began during the week.

HOTEL ALTERATIONS.

J. G. Croll was granted a permit to alter his hotel at 703 Central avenue. He plans several important changes.

Another alteration permit was issued to F. Peters for work at the southeast corner of Sixth street and Haigh avenue.

Mrs. F. Bush has secured a permit to construct a two-room addition to her home at 1724 Clinton avenue.

Powell Brothers Construction company have commenced the erection of a five-room cottage at 835 Laurel street.

V. Sneginger is also building a five-room home at 2241 Santa Clara avenue.

A permit has been issued to G. Horst for alterations and additions to the dwelling at 1340 St. Charles street.

Warm weather during the week has aroused the interest in outdoor sleeping and permits were issued to John Lamm of 1154 Park avnut and S. Hagy of 1411 Walnut street for the erection of sleeping porches.

J. G. Armstrong is to commence the construction of a 1½ story six-room dwelling at 1513 High street.

Realty dealers report many inquiries for small vacant lots in the interior of the city and along the south shore. Demand for modern houses for renting purposes continues brisk.

S. P. EXTENSION 4 MILES LONG

Electric Suburban Line to San Leandro Opens Up Rich District.

The inauguration of service of the Melrose broadgauge Southern Pacific electric line from Hillsdale avenue, at Havenscourt, the present terminus, to Dutton avenue, San Leandro, is an event of far-reaching importance to the City of Oakland.

The new extension is nearly four miles in length. The track is laid, the poles are in place, the wire is strung, the streets are paved, and the Southern Pacific has given its absolute assurance that trains will be running October 1. In fact, it is compelled to do so by the terms of its franchise.

The district that will be opened up is naturally one of the most attractive in Oakland. It is very generally known as the "Warm Belt", being from five to eight degrees warmer than the north and west portions of the city nearer the bay. The soil is famous for its fertility, as the wealth of flowers and greenery in Havenscourt and Broadmoor testify.

The new district that will be given the best kind of San Francisco transportation by the new line contains about five square miles or equal in area to all of San Francisco north of Townsend street and east of Van Ness avenue. Fine homesites can be bought very cheaply at the present time, but it is anticipated that the Southern Pacific will operate to increase values very markedly. Among the better known subdivisions which will be served by the new line are Electric Loop tract, Heywood Hollywood Terrace, Tyler Heights, Kenwood and Broadmoor. The line already runs to Havenscourt and will run through it after October 1.

A large part of the new district is restricted to residence, but business property will develop about the stations, and great activity along this line is anticipated.

The fact that this district is traversed by the Foothill boulevard is another powerful factor making for its rapid development. The Foothill boulevard, Fourteenth street are the great [illegible] to the southeast which is the only direction in which Oakland can grow. There is no doubt but that the Key Route now runs to Melrose, will be compelled the competition of the Southern Pacific to establish a service to San Leandro. In short all signs point to extraordinary development through this entire district.

BUILDERS AT RICHMOND BUSY

Bonds to Be Voted for Erection of New School Buildings.

RICHMOND, Sept. 20.—Issuance of bonds will be voted upon next month for $150,000 for new school buildings, including the purchase of their sites. If carried this will run the October building cost up to a large figure.

The realty men will report many good sales of lots in all sections of the city and many re-sales at a profit to the first buyers.

Edward Listman is having plans drawn for a fine cement residence on Nineteenth street. A Ripole capitalist and an Oakland man are arranging for residences in the hill district east of the city to cost an average of $10,000 each, while a local owner has his plans all ready for a $20,000 residence.

INVESTS LEGACY IN LOT ON SAN PABLO

The property has a frontage of 60 feet on San Pablo avenue and 90 feet irregular in Williams. The sale, a cash transaction, was made through the J. H. Macdonald Realty Company. The purchase was made in the name of Beach Soule Jr.

The bequest to the sons was by the late grandmother, widow of the late professor Frank Soule.

HUNT TREASURE AT OCEAN BOTTOM

(Special to THE TRIBUNE by International News Service.)

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Two hunts for hidden treasure are in progress off the coast of France.

Three years ago M. Lesenechal, while dragging in the Bay of Gatremare, near Gouberville, on the channel coast, found two silver ignots bearing a Spanish mark of the date of 1692 and containing 99½ per cent of pure silver. The inhabitants of the district told him the story of a Spanish galleon laden with gold and silver ignots, which were said to have sunk off the coast of Gouberville. Several attempts have been made to recover the treasure, but in vain.

M. Lesenechal obtained permission from the minister of marine to search for it, and is now doing so by means of the latest scientific apparatus.

The other treasure is said to lie off the Ile de Re, and the story of how it came to be there is full of romance. It consists of an immense strong box filled with gold and diamonds to the value, it is said, of several hundred millions of francs. It has reposed at the bottom of the ocean since 1320, when the Comte de St. Paul, an adventurer of the Vendee banished during the revolution, was bringing it over from America on his return from exile.

The vessel, a three-master called the Jeune Henri, was lost on the rocks of the Ile d'Oleron. Cases of gold and jewels were recovered by fishermen of the island but the strong box went down with the ship.

In 1898 a woman descendant of the comte, Mlle. Guillard de St. Paul, endeavored to locate the treasure, but without success. It is now believed that it has shifted toward the Ile de Re, and Mlle. de St. Paul has resumed her search, with the help of divers and a "dowcer," one of those mysterious individuals who claim to be able to locate a water source or hidden minerals by a responsive tremor in a curved rod which they carry when they pass over the spot where the hidden treasure or source is.

GETS "TRY-OUT" AS PAGE IN HOTEL OAKLAND

Edward Sims, claiming to be the smallest newsboy in Oakland with the largest voice, today applied for a position as page at the Hotel Oakland. Manager Reiter was compelled to refuse him, as he is but 8 years of age. The youth gave a sample of his prowess by "paging" a guest in a tryout. His voice could be heard for three stories.

"You have a wonderful voice for a page or a steamboat whistle," declared Reiter. "Come back when you are 14 and the job is yours. At present I'm afraid the law would not allow you to work here."

The boy stands four feet in height. He declares his "Extry!" can be heard for three blocks and four on a still night.

LUTKEY APPOINTED BATTALION CHIEF

Fire Chief N. A. Ball today announced the appointment of Captain W. H. Lutkey of engine company No. 11, as battalion chief, vice Chief Morgan, deceased. A civil service examination will be held in December or January to provide for a successor to Lutkey as captain.

G. H. R. Doane, 5349 College avenue, has been appointed driver in the fire department, vice Lamb, dismissed.

BURGLARS ENTER BY SMASHING TRANSOM

Burglars broke into the Oakland cream depot, 1809 Telegraph avenue, by smashing the transom last night and forced the cash register, taking $40 in coin. The report of the burglary was made by H. P. Glasier, manager of the place.

Dr. W. D. Blackmer of the Hotel St. Francis reported that a grip containing personal belongings had been stolen from him while he was in Oakland.

Two armchairs, rocker and desk library table

There are two large, roomy Arm Chairs and a Rocker (usually in these sets there is but one arm chair, one rocker reception chair and table), and the table has a shelf below, magazine shelves in each end, 24x36-inch top and a drawer that pulls out and makes a desk; place for ink well and lid lifts up, making place for writing materials.

Not more than one of these suits will be sold to any one customer, and they are sold in sets only.
